JOE CHOYNSKI SUGGESTS NEW PRIZE RING RULES

New York, July 31.—Joe Choynski the veteran boxer, has inaugurated a reform movement with a view to revising the existing code governing matches in the squared circle. The old-timer has formulated a new set of rules which he believes to be superior to the Queensbury edicts. Choynski's revision numbers almost twice as many clauses as the old-time code, having 22 sections instead of 12. Moreover, he has expanded many of the old clauses in a manner that should meet with favor from students of the art fistic. Choynski would do away with bandages, declaring that "cripples have no place in the ring." He also takes exception to referee's instructions to boxers. To quote Choynski:

"The referee's instructions to the contestants to hit with one arm free and not to hold and hit, and break when I tell you,' are rather incongruous. How can a man hit with one arm free and not hold or, if his opponent holds, then the opponent is perpetrating a foul, and what right has the referee to order 'Break' after admonishing the contestants to hit with one arm free?"

In rule 19 of Choynski's code he provides for dealing with unfairness on the part of seconds and incidentally protect the boxer from such an incident. The clause follows:

"If a second throws up the sponge when it is apparent to the referee that the principal can continue and have a winning chance, the contest shall not be stopped, but the second so offending shall be ejected from the building and not allowed to act as second again at any future time before any club."

Rule 7 states that "Should the contest be stopped by any unavoidable interference, the referee to name time and place as soon as possible for finishing the contest.'

Choynski has changed this to read: "Should the contest be stopped by police interference, the referee has full power to render a decision."

In the old Queensbury code Rule 11 reads, "No shoes or boots with springs allowed."

The changed clause has it, "Only boxing shoes, regulation style, with either chamois, elk skin or rubber soles allowed."

Choynski would deal summarily with the pugilist committing a deliberate foul.

"If a man commits a deliberate foul he shall be immediately disqualified and shall receive no part of the purse."

Commenting on fouling and ring affairs in general, Choynski says:

"A foul consists in hitting with the head, wrestling, hitting with the open hand, or heeling, that is, with the bottom of the palm—a trick often used when a man injures his knuckles; back-heeling, placing the foot back of an opponent's heel and shoving him backward.

"Contestants should be examined by a physician before going into training, and certainly before entering the ring.

"I may be wrong, but a score board showing the spectators the man having the advantage of each round (shades not to count), the summing up of which would declare the winner, would do away with a lot of dissatisfaction which is now the bane of many contests."

P.A.C. DEFEATED T.A.S.A.C. WEST ENDS BEAT STRATHS

Quinlan Was Hit for Six Runs in the Several Innings in the First Game—P.A.C. and T.A.S. are Now Tied for First Place—West Ends Made Great Finish in Second Contest.

"You're out!" yelled the umpire "Ah, get out, you mutt. Take the mud out of your eyes; I was safe a mile" This was the way the players expressed themselves after decisions had been given by the umpires at the City League games at the Oval Saturday afternoon in which the Park St. A. C. defeated the T.A.S.A.C. in the most exciting game of the season by 9 to 7, thus placing themselves on equal terms with the Abstainers for the leadership of the City League, and in the West End-Strathcona game the former coming out victorious by the score of 6 to 5.

Good ball was played in both contests, but the kicking of the players, especially in the second exhibition, did a whole lot of harm, as no fan, however ardent, is going to put up with this kind of nonsense. The players acted not unlike a number of four-year-old kids playing high-sky with a shingle and a big soft rubber ball. The first game was in the hands of capable persons, and the only thing they can be blamed for is that they did not put several of the players out of the game. In the second contest the managers of the two teams had neglected to look after the umpire end, and as a result one of the spectators had to be picked out to handle the indicator, and although he did his best the players couldn't see it that way, and this caused trouble, which materially affected the game from the spectators' point of view. In the future, if the contests are not patronized the teams will have the satisfaction of realizing that they are themselves to blame.

FIRST GAME.

Both teams had on their regular line-ups, and the winners deserved the honors. They fielded the ball and batted harder than their opponents. Dusty appeared willing enough to blow up in the last innings, but his team was right on the job, and retired the side before the Abstainers could tie the score. There was no very brilliant playing, but the fact of the game being always in doubt as to the winner, and also that if the Baptists won they would be tied with the T.A.S. for first place, made the game interesting and kept the fans excited all the time.

Quinlan, on the rubber for the losers, was hit hard in the seventh and the winners secured such a lead that they could not be overtaken, although, as stated before, the outcome was in doubt in the last innings. Then again, his team was probably a little over-confident. Quinlan has been striking out ten and twelve men in his past games, but it is only reasonable to expect that the batters would get onto his shoots in time. This is what happened Saturday, and the fielders were found wanting. On the other hand, the Baptists were aware of what the result meant to them, and they worked hard, and their efforts met with success. Although they had nine misplays, their batting in the seventh, when six runs were secured, made up for the errors. Dusty allowed the Abstainers only three hits, while the summary shows ten for the Park St. team. He struck out ten men, walked four, and hit one. Harry O'Brien at left field, had a great day, making three hits and two runs. The winners scored twice in their first time at bat, once in the sixth, and six in the seventh, while the losers got one in the first, two in the sixth, three in the eighth and one in the ninth.

SECOND GAME.

The Strathconas looked and played like winners in the early stages of the second game, but the West Ends, by a batting streak in the eighth innings, tied the score and put one man over the plate in their last time at bat with none gone, thus winning the contest, which would have been interesting, had not there been so many disputes about the decisions of the umpire. In almost every innings the game would be stopped, and the members of the two teams would endeavor to tell the umpire all about the fine points of the game. Gorham and Kirn twirled good enough to win any game, but the former's teammates were inclined to be careless at times, and this was one reason for their downfall. In the eighth innings, when the West Ends tied the score, they should have been shut out but a couple of dumb plays by the Strathconas were responsible for the runs. The features of the exhibition were the abuse thrown at the umpire, and the hitting of Fallon and Dickey, which won the game for the West Ends.

The winners scored one in the second and one in the fifth, one in the seventh, two in the eighth, and one in the ninth. The Straths scored twice in the first two innings, two more in the sixth, and one in the seventh.

A MAN, A MAID AND A CHAPERON.

The Lover Won, and the Chaperon Was True to Her Trust.

By ANNA S. RICHARDSON.

"You are entirely too young and attractive to chaperon Ruth," observed Mrs. Cuscadden, surveying her companion with a cool, critical glance. "But she fairly has hysterics when I suggest her going home with me. And really the dear child has seen nothing of Paris, and she wants another week or so in London. If you could, my dear Leslie"—

Mrs. Leslie Burns instantly replied that she could and she would—with pleasure. So it happened that Mrs. Rogers Cuscadden sailed alone for New York to settle some vexed questions regarding the new house. Her parting warning to Mrs. Burns was:

"Now, remember, Leslie, no international entanglements for Ruth. You know how Mr. Cuscadden feels on the subject. Besides, I want to bring her out this season heart whole. A love affair is always a handicap for a debutante."

Never did chaperon use more graceful tact in executing her trust. Without making enemies she warded off the many admirers attracted to the vivacious young heiress until George Hackett appeared on the scene, dropping from some unheard of point in the orient. Well bred, well groomed, well tailored, breezy and alert, he was diplomacy proof.

Attaching himself to their party of two, he proved distressingly convenient and desirable. He knew his Paris by heart and steered his countrywomen from boredom with a skillful hand. Ruth boldly espoused his cause and informed Mrs. Burns that she was having a much jollier time since Mr. Hackett's arrival, whereupon Mrs. Burns read her charge the first long lecture of their companionship—not that it would do any good, she argued, for how could any heart whole girl withstand George Hackett?

When the stay in Paris drew to a close Mrs. Burns heard with dismay that Mr. Hackett was accompanying them as far as London. And London was but Paris repeated. Mr. Hackett knew just what points of interest Ruth would enjoy and what she should avoid. He was more useful than Baedeker and infinitely better company.

But when the day for sailing from Southampton was set and Mrs. Burns learned that the ubiquitous Mr. Hackett had taken passage on the same boat despair filled her soul. To the experienced chaperon no episode is more heavily charged with danger than an ocean voyage. At first she had been as rude as her gentle nature would permit, but the more chilly her reception the more assiduously would he devote himself to Ruth. If she occasionally relented and treated him with gracious tolerance Mr. Hackett showed eager appreciation of her favor and waxed brilliant.

She was thinking it all over tonight as she sat alone on the deck. In less than twenty-four hours, the captain had said, they would be in New York harbor. Then must come the accounting to Mrs. Cuscadden. No doubt at this very moment, under the cover of songs in the saloon, Mr. Hackett was whispering into the ears of Ruth those tender words which he should not be permitted to whisper.

The traitorous chaperon felt a sudden twitching at her heartstrings. Should she defy fate in the form of Mrs. Cuscadden? For herself it would mean but a broken friendship; for George Hackett it meant happiness for life. Strangely enough, she did not seem to consider Ruth's happiness. She was thinking only of her girlhood, when Hackett's friendship had been such a very dear thing; when she would have given him—promised him anything he might ask, but he had not asked.

The singer had finished, and the soft strains of a popular waltz floated out on the night air. A great wave of tenderness swept over Leslie Burns. Why should she stand between the man she had loved and the happiness he now craved?

Alas for the confiding, complacent Mrs. Cuscadden and her maternal plans!

Mrs. Burns drew her cape more closely and shivered slightly. A shadow fell across the bar of light streaming from the gangway. A voice clear, but not loud, broke the silence brooding on the deck.

"May I have my cigar out here with you, Mrs. Burns?" Then as he dropped into the chair at her side: "What a bore one's traveling companions become directly land is sighted! I don't blame you for getting off to yourself."

"Oh, it wasn't that exactly," murmured Mrs. Burns. Then, with the air of trying to fill in an awkward pause, she added: "But there is a subtle joy in feeling that tomorrow night we shall see the New York harbor lights gleaming. There's no place in the world just like New York to us."

"Shall you stay in town?" queried Hackett.

"Just a day or so. I've a week promised to Mrs. Davenport at Tuxedo."

"Glad to hear that. I shall be in Tuxedo next week. Harry's taken a box down there for the rest of the season."

"But the Cuscaddens will be at the hot springs until their new place is finished." The remark sounded strangely flat to Mrs. Burns, and instantly she wished she had not given vent to her thought. Again she covered an awkward pause. "Dear me, I wonder where Ruth is this very minute."

"When I saw her last, dancing with young Ransome—a harmless youth, I assure you," he added whimsically as Mrs. Burns made a motion to rise. "Don't go, please, until— I have something I must tell you before we land."

It was coming. The guilty chaperon closed her eyes figuratively and prepared to take the plunge. She would pledge her aid and give it.

"Leslie"—

She started. Five years had passed since she had heard that name from his lips. Vaguely she wished he had commenced some other way.

"Do you remember when father sent me abroad? I was fresh from college, not much more than a boy. I knew little of life—women least of all. My experiences abroad with fellows I liked first bewildered and then fascinated me, and when father wrote I might make another year of it I was wild with delight.

"But you remember I wrote to you regularly. I supposed you understood. When I read of your coming out I was tremendously proud. I think I ordered lilies of the valley for you by cable. I remember, too, thinking that when you'd had a season of that sort of thing and I'd finished my jaunt we'd settle down and be—very happy. I never dreamed that you were waiting for me to say so. I thought so clever a girl as you could read between the lines of my letters, and somehow I wanted to hear a certain little word from your own lips."

The woman at his side started to speak, but he waved her aside. The crimson glow of his cigar had turned to gray ashes, but he still clutched it between his fingers.

"The letter announcing your engagement reached me in Madrid. I've never been in the place since. When I reached America you and your husband had gone abroad. For a year I tried life on the street, but I could not stand for it. Then I tried shooting lions in Africa and tigers in India. That went better than fleecing lambs in Wall street. I was visiting with a mighty good fellow on Curzon's staff when I heard—quite by accident—that you were—free. Two days later I turned my face westward. I did not intend to stop in Paris, but you were there. I thought—great heavens, how I hoped—you'd be glad to see me, but you were not. And, Leslie," his tone was actually commanding, "I want to know why."

The woman had been listening with bowed head, but with a strangely happy light gleaming in her eyes. Hesitatingly, incoherently, she explained her conduct in Paris, in London and aboard ship. Before she finished Hackett, possessing himself of both her hands, exclaimed:

"And you really thought it was that child! Oh, Leslie, Leslie! Couldn't you read the truth in my eyes?"

Mrs. Burns suddenly recalled her duties as chaperon. She withdrew her hands from his masterful grasp.

"How could I look you in the eye when I knew I was unfaithful to the trust imposed on me by Mrs. Cuscadden?"

The old piquant humor rang in her voice. She had risen. From the saloon came the tintinnabulation of light music. The deck was free from promenaders. They were alone for the first time in five years.

* * * * * * *

"Oh, what will Mrs. Cuscadden say?"

Hackett bent over her to gather up her wraps.

"I really don't see that she has anything to do with our little affair, provided you return her daughter heart whole and free from international entanglements," he answered joyously.

A shadow fell across the bar of light, then another, and the figure of a girl was silhouetted against the brilliant interior of the ship.

"Mrs. Burns, where are you? We're to have a good old fashioned Virginia reel to celebrate our last night on board. Do hurry up! We have a partner waiting for you!"

Then as Hackett's dark figure suddenly loomed up behind Mrs. Burns he glanced mischievously at Ruth and exclaimed, with a happy ring of ownership in his voice:

"Won't I do for her partner? I rather think this dance is mine!"

In the Chemistry Class.

In a local technical school one of the simpler courses of instruction is that of drilling students in the chemical terms applied to various familiar substances. For instance, the student must know very early in his studies to refer to water as H2O. One day a new pupil was asked to give the sign for water, and, although it is one of the first learned and one very generally known outside of technical schools, he was stumped. But all was not lost. In this institution, as probably in many others, there exists a sort of student Red Cross, which extends first aid to the perplexed by the whisper route. Immediately a half dozen voices buzzed answers in his ears. Maybe it was the confusion; maybe he picked one out of several or combined several in one. Anyway he blurted out, "H-o-s-e."—Pittsburg Gazette-Times.

The horse swerved into the curb and in attempting to balance the rig Mr. Friedman leaned too far out of the rig and his head hit a telegraph pole. He died in the ambulance on the way to the hospital.

THE STORY OF A SOCIETY GIRL

IN WHICH GYPSY HAS ONE MEMORABLE BIG MOMENT AND IS TOLD NOT TO BE A LITTLE IDIOT

TOLD TO RITA WEIMAN.

(Copyright, 1909, by the New York Herald Co. All Rights Reserved.)

"BILLY'S a proud example of the fact that if you hold to the ship long enough you're bound to sail into port." We were seated under the trees preparatory to a luncheon al fresco, and Harry Keating, noticing my unusual lack of response to his usual pleasantries, had allowed his gaze to follow mine. The above was the direct result.

Nella had come down the terrace steps with Billy Stewart, and the two were at once the centre of a gushing stream of congratulation.

To me it was ghastly—seeing Nella there at Billy's side taking the glad wishes with a show of appreciation judged fitting to the occasion. Indifferently I had watched dozens of girls doing the same thing in the same way and had given it no second thought. It was what was expected of them. But to have Nella, who, in spite of her cynicism, had secretly shared with me the few hopes that had managed to survive the struggle for existence, to see her dive into the matrimonial sea, like the rest, with a man she did not love—I could not bring myself to realise it!

I had tried throughout half the night to hold her back, to convince her that she would be sure to rue the leap she was about to take. I had pleaded, implored. She had evidently fought the same battle with herself before I found her, a pale, wilted flower against the blushing background that seemed such a mocking promise of roses and happiness.

Even had she wished to retract she would have found it difficult, for the beaming Billy had the news flashing in all directions by morning. And now, as I stared, only half believing, I felt the old Nella slipping away, as though that girl, with her carefully coiffed head held high and a rigid smile on her tired lips, were another human being.

"My dear, it's too eternal to be interesting," she had once said when I brought her the news of a fair débutante's engagement to a millionnaire who had just divorced a show girl. "The woman always loves the wrong man and marries the rich one. And the man—he loves too often to love at all."

I had known she didn't really mean it, but how she would have challenged me had I told her then that she would follow in lockstep with other prisoners of convention.

Why was marriage a fate one could not escape, why demanded of every girl as if she were an automaton, to be dressed in the latest style of wedding gown, wound up and sent trotting up the aisle to meet that which had been selected for her? Why had Nella resigned herself to it as if life held no other possibility? I felt miserably apart with my absurd theories and ideals. But beneath the jauntiness I knew the fear clutching me, a dread that eventually I should come upon myself taking the same step. Perhaps, after all, there was nothing else to do.

The Friendly Baron.

It was rather a good thing that Baron de Berenzig had the day before so unexpectedly raised a flag of truce and offered above it the hand of friendship. In the face of Nella's sudden surrender I might have found myself weakening had he continued his untiring siege of the last months. It was a relief to meet his eyes, as I did now, without feeling in them a fire kindled to order specially for the purpose of making me hot and uncomfortable.

He stood just within the drooping willow boughs that shaded our little group. The dazzling light of midday cut through the gray flannel of his coat and outlined the careful curves of his figure, contrasting it oddly with the ease of Carley and Harry Keating, both of whom lounged in positions most convenient to the moment, while Cissy Trane stretched at length on the ground, putting her latest little French bull through a series of dancing paces, his two front paws perched on her long fingers. The Algy Tranes always travelled with at least three dogs—one to guard, one to adorn and one to amuse.

"Since Nella's taken the lead," observed Perry Willing, "it will be perfectly decent for any one of us to bag his game while we've got the time and place to do it." He raised his pink baby face from the depths of a low garden chair and grinned significantly at the Baron.

Baron de Berenzig shrugged inquiringly with a fine play at non-comprehension.

"What a pity, Perry"—I flicked an imaginary speck of dust from my skirt with the tip of my sunshade, glancing up at him sidewise through the lace curtain of a lingerie hat—"that for some there's only wanting the lady. Other people's affairs are fascinating, of course, but how much more fun to have one of your very own in a place like this!"

"And with Philadelphia so tantalisingly within reach!" Mrs. Algy paused at her task with a movement indicating that Perry's Quaker City widow was waiting just beyond the hills.

But Perry's malice was directed at me. "Well, Gypsy, you've had enough experience to know all about that sort of thing." Carley glared at him as though a bite out of his apple face would have been gratifying at the moment, but he went on serenely:—"Everybody seems happy enough but Johnny—a pity Taggy-Stew isn't here. She'll have her nice pointed claws in Nella"——

"Relieve your mind on that score," I reassured him. "They're booked to arrive, both the 'Taggy-Stews,' to-morrow." But I had the accompanying laugh to myself, for I alone had read the lilac scented, mauve tinted note that matched Evelyn's cheeks and conveyed to Nella the information that she and Jimmy would be glad to accept the sweet invitation. "And you know as well as I do"—Nella had laughed over my shoulder—"I never asked them! That woman is a perfect genius."

But Perry, all innocent of this choice bit, continued calmly, "At any rate, I call it unfortunate oversight—and beastly bad form—having husbands and wives who belong to each other in the same house at the same time. Your country wouldn't be guilty of such a faux pas, would it, Baron?" He tucked a pillow behind his head and lounged back. Perry without personalities would have ceased to be Perry.

The Baron bowed as before superior knowledge. "My country would not be guilty of speaking about it, my friend."

His Retaliation.

The other, for a moment, was unequal to the rebuff or to the chuckle of amusement that met it. He pushed aside a leafy branch and looked out of our retreat. Then he found a happy means of retaliation. His eyes came back—eyes that were always a shock, green and narrow like a cat's, in a pink and white face held up by an immeasurable choking collar. "Any way, it is going to be dead. Gypsy's given us the only fun worth the name this winter. How long is it since the Ham Warren soirée? We were talking about it last week at the club—how her fame was made that night."

The Baron reddened. So, alas, did I! His defeat of that night and my conduct of the weeks following were still topics of conjecture and discussion. I dreaded for an instant some tender little intimation such as I had come to expect from him. But he merely bowed gallantly. "The fame of a beautiful woman, I should have thought, would know neither a date of beginning nor end."

Cissy Trane gave a very perceptible giggle and lit a kiss on what there was of her dog's squat nose. "When you grow up, my Beauty, I'm going to let you take lessons in compliments from some nice foreigner." She started to get up—it was always an interesting spectacle, like watching a sky-scraper in the course of construction, growing story by story until you wonder if there's ever going to be an end. When she finally reached a definite height she caught Beauty—a name beautifully inappropriate—in the crook of her arm and took a step beyond the trailing boughs that half closed us in. Then, with a low whistle, she motioned to Perry over her shoulder. I happened to be sitting with the view of the lawn partly cut off, but as she turned, my eyes strayed after her.

Up from the sunken garden came Dick, with Dolly's flushed face almost resting against his shoulder, unconscious, both of them, of the several pairs of eyes taking count. I had seen them an hour or so before, going toward the squash court, but Dolly's appearance now did not suggest an energetic game unless perhaps one considered the tumbled condition of her hair. No, decidedly, that scene on the balcony the night before had been deemed worthy of repetition. As they drew nearer the terrace and within full view of those under the trees Dolly tripped away as though Nella and Billy and the chatter like the buzz of mosquitoes about them were of far greater moment than her companion.

I saw my brother look wonderingly after her and a puzzled frown darkened his face. Dolly apparently held something of mystery even to him. It appears to be the one quality in woman that succeeds in melting men of iron as well as molasses. And I dare say the lack of it in their wives is what frequently sends those who are quite a commonplace cross between the two prostrating themselves before goddesses far less worthy of worship.

"Hm." I heard Perry murmur, "there's going to be something doing after all. Hope it'll be worth the price of admission."

Merely a Perry pleasantry, yet it sent me to Dolly's room that evening, all my haunting suspicion of her clamoring for satisfaction. It was the moment between dressing and dinner. She was pacing restlessly up and down as I entered, her head bent, the gray veil over her cloth of silver gown floating from shoulders and train like a vanishing mist. A single red opal glowed among the folds at her breast like a smouldering sun in the fog of a London winter day. Somehow she seemed more sombre than the Dolly I had come to know.

But her "Hello!" and bright laugh of welcome an instant later quickly dispelled the illusion. I dropped into a chair, wondering how to begin and wishing heartily that I'd been given some of my mother's or Evelyn Taghern-Steward's initiative. Dolly subsided on the stool before her dressing table, lit a cigarette and looked at me over its twinkling tip.

"Well, Gypsy Eyes," she smiled interrogatively, "you look distraite—as though you were lost in Wonderland. Is it a man again?"

"No"—I sprang into the opening with an audacity Dolly herself must have approved—"it's a woman. I'm wondering who you are," I said.

She leaned back against the dressing table and sent forth peal after peal of laughter until her very curls bobbed delightedly. "Do you know," she amazed me by gurgling at last, "I've often wondered why you didn't ask that question long ago. I haven't expected it of Nella. She knows so much more about people than is comfortable that ignorance is a delightfully novel experience. But you—I've been feeling those black eyes looking through and through me for weeks"——

I made a quick gesture of denial, in spite of which Dolly's head nodded emphatically.

"Oh, yes, they have! I've been waiting to surprise the question in them."

"Now look here, Dolly," I tried to remonstrate, "the minute the question came to me I put it frankly to you. You can't disprove that."

"Let me see"—five coquettish rings coiled themselves one by one from her dimpling mouth and were sent meditatively heavenward—"I think the exact date of its arrival was the day I met you and Nella and Dick and our stern legal friend at the Petit Paris. I could see it then peeping from under your lashes."

"No," I put in boldly, "I was asking myself then about the man you were with—the one who hurried off and left you to us."

I looked at her closely. All my doubt of her depended on the answer, for I did not tell her I already knew the man to be Grant Haywood. For the space of a breath the two fingers holding her cigarette contracted suddenly so that it hung limp and dead between them. Then after studying me intently her eyes met mine with a frank smile. "I thought you must have recognized him as Nella's Daddy Haywood. Why should there be any mystery about it? I wanted to invest some money and as I know a bit less about such things than I do of—say dancing, we met that day to talk it over. I was staying with Nella at the time, you know, and Grant Haywood is, well, hardly a welcome guest at the Penning establishment. So I agreed to have luncheon with him at some quiet place not likely to be frequented by Mrs. Grundy. I've never understood"—a delicate wrinkle marred the smoothness of her brow—"why he ran away as he did. It was—so absolutely unnecessary."

"But there was another time—I've always wanted to confess to you, Dolly"—— and I tried to piece together for her the remnants of conversation overheard that night I had come upon them in the Haywood conservatory. "You said you had succeeded in something or other and that they—whoever 'they' may be—would never guess," I ended.

Dolly's eyes strayed from mine, but came back presently, a sparkle in them. "I suppose I'll have to make full confession, little inquisitor, and that will answer your first question at the same time. I met Grant Haywood three years ago when I happened to be staying at Colorado Springs with friends who knew him. I was a little nobody then, trying to affect mourning for a man years older than myself whom I'd been tied to before I knew better. We'd traveled from San Francisco, which was his home, around the world, but I hadn't ever lived as I wanted to, with life tingling through me and dancing out of my very fingers and toes. As a girl I'd been at a convent near Paris and they used to twit me there with the prophecy that my dancing tendencies would land me at the Folies Bergère. But instead they've taken me into the heart of little Gotham, and you'll laugh, Gypsy, when you learn how.

"We were arguing one night at the Springs about New York society, and I ventured the opinion that it wasn't quite so inaccessible as it tried to make the big outside world believe. Nella's Daddy Haywood, of course, being a favored member of the favored few, didn't agree. 'Give one enough of money or originality,' I maintained, 'and decent table manners (providing he hasn't the money) and let him not seem too anxious—why, I could even dance my way in,' I finished, looking at it in the light of a joke. To my surprise, he took me seriously. He said there was no reason why I shouldn't, of course, but that even with an introduction from him I'd find it tremendously difficult. And I challenged him then and there to give me the chance. He promised to the next time I came to Gotham. It was all done in a spirit of fun, but—well, here I am, dear. It has been a success—and how I've loved it!" She darted up and flung her arms about me. "I've won. There isn't a corner of life hidden"—— Then she stopped suddenly, her face buried against my shoulder.

That Picture.

"But Monsier Geraud," I added, feeling that, now I had her in the confessional, Dolly must have more to tell, "hadn't he met you once"——

"Where?" She started back, arms still linked about my neck. Then "Oh," she shrugged, "it is more than likely he may have seen a portrait of me at the studio of a friend of his. I posed for a cunning little Frenchman in Paris years ago, and when we refused to buy the picture he threatened to exhibit it, with or without my permission. I vowed then," she went on slowly, seeming to weigh each word, "that I'd never pose again. And I haven't, have I?" she laughed, "literally or figuratively. That's why I refused Geraud. You—must have—wondered."

"I did," was my confession. "Have you—told all this to—any one else?"

"Dear little Gypsy!" She raised my chin and looked deep until I felt that she, not I, was the inquisitor. "You're the most transparent little piece of [illegible] that's ever come my way. Is there anybody in the world you love better than Nella and brother Dick?"

I could feel myself coloring violently. She had read my purpose from the very beginning!

"But, believe me," she added. "Nella will be happier with Billy. He adores her." Her voice took on the sombre hue of her gown. "You're going to have a big and terrible moment, Gypsy, and those eyes are going to burn furiously some day when they look life squarely in the face and see that it's mocking them all the while. Unless in the meantime they've learned to laugh back!"

Months afterward, when that "big moment" held me in its grip, Dolly's words floated back and in themselves seemed to mock me. But now her serious little air of philosophy merely revealed another charm at her command. In fact, this golden bird was so fascinating that it was not until several days later that I realized she had not given me one word, during all our mutual confessions, to which I could point my finger as a definite statement. Though perfectly satisfied, I had left her with very little of the information I'd set out to acquire.

The Taghern-Stewards appeared according to arrangements—Evelyn's, that is—the following day. It would have been a delight to publish abroad the story of her invitation, but one couldn't but admire the way Mrs. Taggy-Stew took matters into her own hands and succeeded thereby in getting what [illegible] some surprise that she had brought Jimmy, since her expedition was very obviously in the cause of Johnny van Tiel and a husband in such a way is apt to be an encumbrance.

With them, but not of them, came a carload of costumes sent down for a fête champêtre, a "Dolly suggestion," inspired by the beauty of Woodmar's vast lawns, dotted with slim, white columned pavilions, by the wealth of garden and coquettish lake, that winked through the trees at the great house standing above it.

It's odd that a woman's troubles always vanish when she finds herself in fancy dress, offset by rouge and blacking she doesn't have to conceal. As I pirouetted before the glass, my blue satin slippers flashing their red heels audaciously, a white petticoat peeping out from between the hoopy silken paniers that caught my waist in an embrace not always comfortable, I felt I might be any of the flirts in Marie Antoinette's train, or even one of Fragonard's saucy painted ladies, who could tilt her foot and drop a shoe on the slightest provocation. The Gypsy of modern woes disappeared into the future. I was my own great-great-grandmother transplanted, and Woodmar was the Petit Trianon.

Too Dangerous To Be Safe.

The fête began at twilight, when the sun could not too glaringly display the artifice that made us all beautiful. Eyes busied themselves over fans and beaux in patches and powder whispered sweet nothings indiscriminately, while a company of professionals from town danced reckless rigadoons and rippled dainty chansons.

"Here one must speak French"—Baron de Berenzig suited the action to the word. "No other tongue suits the setting. It is the language of laughter—and love. A hundred years ago," he sighed over my fan, "I would not have been forced by a cruel lady to substitute friendship for the joy of these."

"A hundred years ago you would not have found a lady who knew what friendship was. Love was so ordinary a thing that one tossed it like a ball from one gallant to another—this way!" I sent a dazzling smile at the first man that crossed my path, Jimmy Taghern-Steward, to whom French was a dead language, immediately flopped to the grass beside me, his face on a very near level to mine. "You see," I laughed at the Baron, "how easy it is!"

"Will you toss it to me next?" He bent toward me eagerly. "No, no," as I drew myself erect in rigid reminder, "not as I have wished—to have and keep it always—but as the game of a century ago, to be sent back to you or on to the next at a word."

"No, my friend," and I thought of Carley, "that is far too dangerous a game to be quite safe to-day."

"I say, Gypsy," came in Jimmy's drawl, "d'you call that fair? Bringing a chap over here, then 'parley-vouing' as if he didn't belong in this world. If a fellow's wife's always trotting off with some other fool, he'd like to have his friends know he's alive, anyway."

"Why doesn't he—trot?"—the Baron frowned over the word—"himself, then, and make her a bit jealous?"

"She wouldn't care if he did," Jimmy moaned. We were all quite hardened to Jimmy's groanings over Evelyn—they had become a chronic complaint. "How can a man think of trotting, anyhow," he added, "when all the padding's transferred from his shoulders to his calves. It may be pretty, but it's confounded uncomfortable!"

The Baron laughed and I flirted a red heeled slipper à la Fragonard. "Nonsense, Jimmy, you could do a minuet right here and now with me; you know you could."

Jimmy primed himself and squared his unpadded shoulders under their coat of plum satin. "Could I!" he cried. "Well, rather, Miss Bright Eyes! Just try me."

I gave a laughing shrug for the Baron's benefit. "You see," I said, enigmatically to the other, no doubt, "it's almost too easy—to be interesting." Then I sprang up and gave a hand to Jimmy.

The professional dancers had given way to preparations for a quadrille on the lawn, but as Jimmy and I started off with the first steps of a minuet, the musicians tuned their instruments to an accompaniment and we held the centre of the stage. A moment we had it to ourselves, then Dolly, a Watteau shepherdess, stepped down from the mantel, and Perry, a gay rake in cerise and buff, joined us, and we bowed and curtesied, our eyes going far faster than our feet.

I was quite lost in the joy of it—the soft arch of the sky with its melting twilight glow, the dizzy perfumed breezes with their voice of music, the poetry of movement itself—when a titter broke the spell.

"So now it's Jimmy," was wafted toward me in the unmistakable treble of Cissy Trane. "How much further do you think it's going to go? There ought to be safety in numbers, and I said it wouldn't take long for her"—— And the voice drifted away into the trees.

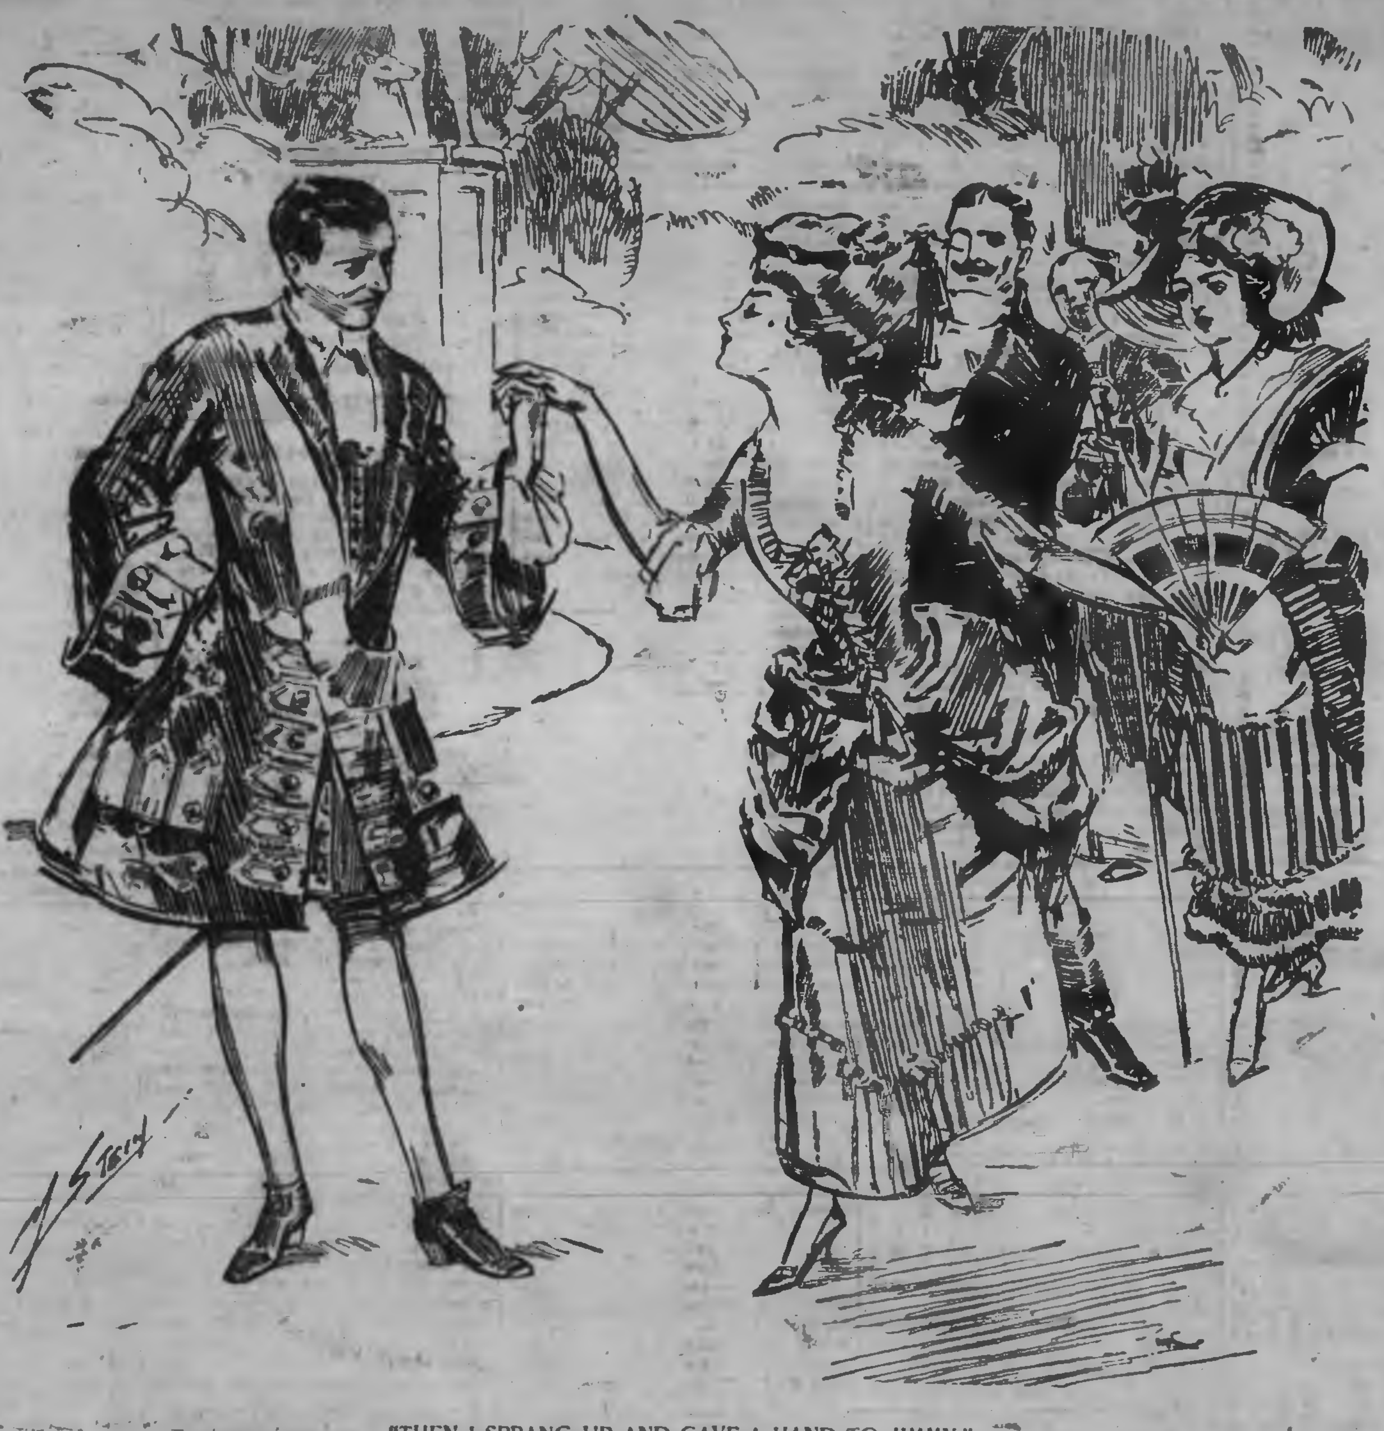
I knew instinctively that she was going off to look for Evelyn Taghern-Steward. I stopped short. Others had, of course, heard her as well as I! The fun of the dance had vanished. The red satin heels were like weights of hot iron. It was more than evident I had gained a reputation I was expected to uphold, and every innocent move was bound to be misinterpreted.

There seemed only one thing to do, after all—to marry as Nella was doing, and earn the right to have any kind of reputation. It wasn't an exactly happy outlook, but it appeared to be the only safe one.

"Don't be a little idiot," Dolly whispered as she passed me. "Go on dancing. They're all watching." She had heard, too.

I flung up my head defiantly as through the crowd I caught Evelyn's wide grin. She should see that I was not afraid!

But afterward I crumpled to the ground. Was I always to be stumbling, whichever step I [illegible] to take?



"THEN I SPRANG UP AND GAVE A HAND TO JIMMY."

Tuesday, southeasterly winds fair and warmer.

Happenings at Some of the Neighboring Summer Resorts

CHEMONG PARK

Rev. Dr. Taylor of Cooke's church, Toronto, conducted services in the pavilion on Sunday evening. His eloquent address was enjoyed by a large and appreciative audience.

Rev. Rural Dean Langfeldt of St. Luke's will conduct services at the pavilion each Sunday for the balance of the season at 4 p.m.

Mr. and Mrs. Howard Hopwood returned Sunday evening from a romantic wedding trip in Mr. Hopwood's champion dinghy, the Arrow, after having visited all the principal points on the Kawartha Lakes, and are receiving congratulations from their numerous friends at the Park.

Miss Bolster of Toronto is the guest of Mrs. Carmichael at her pleasant cottage in the Park.

Mrs. T. McCullough has been visiting friends in the Park.

Miss Gertie Denne is spending a few days the guest of her brother in the west end.

Mr. Loomis of Toronto spent the week-end with Mr. and Mrs. T. F. Matthews in the annex.

Mr. and Mrs. Hartshorne have returned from their summer lodge at Pigeon Lake and are again at home at their cottage here.

A 27-pound 'lunge was caught at the mouth of the Narrows this week.

A record was made from Liverpool to Bobcaygeon, Mr. M. Boyd's daughters arriving home from school in just one week from Liverpool to the village via the Mauretania to New York. Mr. Boyd is said to have brought out a number of fine horses and carriages.

The fishing is very good this year. The greedy ones are not allowed to catch more than their share.

A close call was registered near here a week ago over the Nogie's creek bridge. Two young ladies were out riding when they rode into a group of six lovely little kittens at the roadside in the swamp. They dismounted and made love to them, but as they were the kittens of a wild cat, no headway was made. Had the old lady been at home there would have been "doings."

Campers are finding the best protection against mosquitoes is a large piece of mosquito netting flung over the bed and hung over a ridge-pole above. The "band" whoops it up in vain while the sleeper enjoys the balmy.

PIGEON LAKE NEWS

The cottages of Mr. Hollingshead, manager of the Bank of Ottawa, at Peterborough, and of Mr. Hartshorne, and Mr. Heaton on the Sandy Point side of the lake, while not as pretentious as Mr. Bates' beautiful residence, are extremely pretty.

Oak Orchard has been sold by the syndicate to Mr. Hollingshead and Mr. [illegible] Pearson.

IMMIGRANT BOY WAS DROWNED AT NAPANEE

Napanee, Aug. 2.—Tommie Crowe, an English immigrant lad of 11 years, was drowned yesterday evening in the Napanee river near here while getting from a rowboat on to the dock. He fell into the water and, being alone and unable to swim, was an easy victim.

CHANCE TO GET BACK AT HIM

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—

A reporter of one of the local papers was threatened with expulsion from the police station this morning by one of the policemen. For a newspaper to be addressed in this manner by an ordinary "cop" is certainly robbing journalism of all the dignity that may have been hitherto attached to it.

Just wait, brother. You can get even with that "cop" if you watch him closely.

Not Pleased With Salvation Army

To the Editor of the Review:

Sir,—Will you please allow me a small space in your paper in order to make clear my position in regard to my publicly rebuking the Salvation Army Sunday evening. A company of God's little ones, made up mainly of people from the City Mission, were holding an open-air meeting on the corner of George and Simcoe streets. A lady, one of those in charge of the City Mission work here, was addressing a crowd of apparently interested listeners, telling them of real salvation, when along came the big brass band of the S. A., headed by the officers in charge, with a following of men and women called Salvationists. Without the common courtesy due by man to woman, saying nothing in regard to the name they Roller, issued the following state- playing all the while their horns and beating their drum, causing the City Mission's lady to stop her exhortation and patiently wait until the noise ceased in the distance. "Inasmuch as you have done it unto the least of these, you have done it unto me." I am not directly and definitely connected with the City Mission work, but am heart and hand with all who practically live salvation. Last evening I was with the City Mission workers at the street meeting. As the S. A., with their loud-sounding instruments, went by regardless of the lady speaker, a representative of Jesus Christ, and the other followers of Him, I was led to rebuke them by crying out "Shame! Shame! Shame!" I want it to be clearly understood that I publicly rebuked the Salvation Army as a lone individual on my own responsibility only. I want it to be clearly understood also that I have the interests of my former comrades at heart, and am grieved to see the terrible extent to which they have drifted from the old-time purity and power. I am, dear sir, yours to fight wrong and uphold the right.

M. H. BUTCHER.

It is hardly likely the Salvation Army intended any discourtesy as our correspondent intimates. We think we are safe in saying that the S. A. is doing its best, not its worst, and, moreover, that it is doing a great deal of good. Whatever may be its shortcomings, in common with the rest of mankind, brutality is not one of them.

Oil at Prince Albert, Too.

Excitement over the reported big gold strike in the Lac La Ronge district, near Prince Albert, is increasing daily.

The discovery is the chief topic of conversation, and a great rush to the new mineral field is expected within another week.

A large number have arrived in the city to enquire into the discovery and several parties have left for the field, among whom are Dr. J. A. Moran, a well-known mineral authority, and H. Harrington, a mining engineer.

A great deal of resentment and dissatisfaction has been expressed lately on account of the fact that the Dominion Government has charge over the minerals of the province. All that the province will get is a grant; and the people of Prince Albert look upon the regulation as an unfair one. It is expected that this will figure as the biggest political issue in the next provincial election.

G. E. Parkinson, a representative of the Imperial Oil Co., has returned from Buffalo Lake, Northern Saskatchewan. He brought back with him a quart canful of crude petroleum of excellent quality, also samples of rock which, when set fire to, burned for several minutes. He says that he has discovered an extensive oil territory within 20 miles of a railroad.

Cost of Freight.

The Dominion Government is making tests regarding the cost of carriage of goods between Montreal and Canadian ports on the Pacific coast by the way of Mexico, and a Government official sailed on the Elder Dempster steamer Bornu from Halifax on her last voyage to supervise the test. The scheme is to have freight carried by water from Montreal and other Canadian ports to a point near Vera Cruz in Mexico, thence overland by the Tehuantepec Railway, a distance of 200 miles to Tehuantepec, on the Pacific seaboard, and thence by water again to the place of final destination. It is claimed that by this route freight can be carried from Montreal to British Columbia ports 20 per cent. cheaper than overland via the C.P.R. Should the experiment prove a success, the Mexican Railway mentioned, which has recently been completed, will be double tracked in order to accommodate the large traffic to which this route would give rise. The possibilities for development by the proposed route are great, notwithstanding the fact that the total distance is several times as far as by the direct overland railway line.

Checking the Preacher.

In the Garrison Church at Halifax a clanking of the soldiers' side-arms used to remind the preacher if he had exceeded the regulation eight minutes, and this drastic remedy seldom needed to be applied. Until a similar protection is devised for civilian congregations, the bishops, the assemblies and the conferences should be invoked to set a hot weather limit, for some preachers will not condense except under compulsion.

THE WORLD ON VANCOUVER'S WIN

Played a Great Game Against New Westminister

In referring to the brilliant victory of the Vancouver lacrosse team over New Westminster, the Vancouver World says:

For four years the Vancouvers have wended their way to Westminster to wince under the sting of defeat, but on Saturday the Greenshirts broke the long succession of reverses and caught a glimpse of heaven and the Minto Cup by scoring six goals to one against the world's champions. Some of Vancouver's performances during that disheartening period have had consoling features, but most of the losses have been very chastening and it was an unmitigated delight to turn the tables so effectively, knocking as it were, the legs clean away and smashing the joints into splinters.

That was what really happened. The Westminsters were beaten in every department of play and if Vancouver had only continued at the gait which they set up in the first half, Westminster would have cause for wondering whether it had not actually been a nightmare. The Greenshirts' six goals were not startling, except when it is remembered that five of them had been scored by half time, for the Green shirts have scored more on the Queens Park slope in a previous match this season. The wonderful part was that the champions of the lacrosse world were held down to a single goal. Prolific scorers as the Minto Cup holders are, they got past the Vancouver defence on only one occasion and one has to go further back four years to find this ability equalled. So far as memory serves, on only one occasion have the Redshirts been so held by the bold and valiant Y.M.C.A., and then there was the vast difference that the unit gave victory to the Royal Citizens.

BRILLIANT DEFENCE.

Taking everything into account, it was a striking achievement on the part of the Vancouver defence, to shear the Red-shirts of all their sting. The Westminsters had two intermediates on the field, though not the four that had been foretold, so that practically they were the formidable twelve, who have downed the eastern challengers and continued until recently to keep the Terminal City's stickhandlers at a very humble distance in the rear.

Westminster spectators take pleasure in prating about the easterners whom Vancouver is fielding in order to give the champions the run that home brews were unable to do. If they will examine the line up, they will find that there were just three eastern men wearing on Saturday the uniform of the Terminal City; men who are doing the club gallant service and whose part in the two victories now won can scarcely be overrated, but the other nine are Vancouver stickhandlers and the defence is entirely a home product. The men who kept the champions to one goal are all seasoned players of the club.

The policy announced at the beginning of the season by the senior team for the city, of strengthening the home and of inducing the players to practice and train with the persistency that is required for the best brand of lacrosse has answered the purpose. The support that has been accorded him by old timers whose closest interest has been resuscitated, has ended in a palpable change in the lacrosse atmosphere, for it is not now Westminster everywhere and the other coast cities nowhere.

THAT WRESTLER DR. ROLLER

A Near Champion Who Always Wins His Bouts

Robert Edgren, the prolific sporting writer of the New York World, says—

Wrestling is a funny game. There's that great wrestler, Dr. B. F. Roller, of Seattle. For months the "Doc" has been travelling about through the Western States. Here and there he has wrestled a thrilling match with Frank Gotch, always coming within an ace of winning; always much praised by Gotch to the local newspaper men before moving along to the next junction. Two or three well-known wrestlers have written agitated appeals to me, begging that I let the public know that when they were supposed to have been thrown by the "Doc" in some Western hamlet they were really in Hartford, Conn., or Boston. As they invariably furnish satisfactory proof of the correctness of their statements I am compelled to believe that the "Doc" has been wrestling dummies. This is a favorite trick in the grappling game. An imitation champion is "planted" somewhere. Along comes the travelling partner. A dispute ends in a match. Fast work on the mat—Dr. Roller makes George Hackenschmidt (proxy) look like a potato bug under a steam roller—local news agencies send out the thrilling details and the "Doc" has a reputation in course of construction.

Dr. Roller is also jamming his way toward the heavyweight championship of the ring by almost fighting. Every now and then he makes a match with Al Kaufman, a recognized contender for heavyweight honors. He is matched with Kaufman, date set, goes into training, date comes, unexpected complication arises at the last moment, but Roller has become known as a heavyweight fighter, willing to meet anybody on earth.

IS DIS GUY OUR PACER

The New York World announces a match at Bridgeport, Conn., between Young Ahearn and Kid Wallace. The boys will fight in the featherweight division, and the "kid" referred to may be none other than Billy Wallace from Peterborough, who is better known as "Pacer," not that he sets such a clip in the ring, but because he throws his feet outward when he runs. He is fighting in the feather class.

LONGBOAT QUITS THIS RACE TOO

Shrubb Set a Pace That Queered the Onondaga

Toronto, July 31.—Tom Longboat once more quit the race because the pace was too hot, and thereby lost. Alfred Shrubb and Longboat started a 12-mile race before a big crowd of spectators, but at 7 3-4 miles the redskin quit. There was no chance for him. Shrubb was breaking records and running away from him all the time. At five miles Shrubb had lowered the American record and was within seven seconds of the world's record.

BOWLING

A bowling tournament between Cobourg and Peterborough will be played on the local green on Civic Holiday, on which date the Cobourg bowlers are running an excursion here.

SPORTING TALK

Johnny Summers, the English featherweight pugilist, defeated Jimmy Britt, the American lightweight, in the ninth round at the Memorial grounds in West Ham, London, Eng., Saturday. The contest was scheduled to go 20 rounds, and was for $500 a side and half the gate receipts.

By a garrison finish Guelph won from Georgetown on Saturday, 5 to 3, thus forming a tie with Georgetown for first place in the Big Four league. Fred Hickey, the ex-Eastern League twirler, pitched for Georgetown, while Barber, a local player, pitched for Guelph. Hickey held the locals up to the seventh inning without a run, while Georgetown had annexed three, but the locals fell on him for the two runs in that inning and three in the eighth.

As a result of winning Saturday, Toronto is now in third place, the score being 7 to 4, and the Leafs were there with the stick.

Buffalo hammered McGinnity all over the lot on Sunday, making 17 hits and 12 runs. The score was 12-1.

The following is an unusual sporting item: "Hungry Sam" Miller the "human ostrich," was in Bloomsburg a few hours, hungry as ever and the envy of all dyspeptics.

Sam still hankers after raw eggs, shells and all. On a wager of $5, he ate three dozen shells and all. His method is to put the egg whole in his capacious mouth, close his "chops," crush the shell, and just swallow.

It took him less than half an hour to eat the eggs, half a custard pie, a quart of ice cream, half a cake, and washing it down with four bottles of beer.

Then he wanted to wager $10 that he could eat a 10-pound goose. There were no takers.

Cartmell defeated Kerr on Saturday in the 100 yards race. The winner's time was ten seconds flat.

The Persistent Social Aspirant.

Persistency is ever the hallmark of the woman determined to be recognized socially, and she applies it without stint to the smallest detail of each undertaking, nagging, insisting and pushing until some part is accomplished. So, too, do some women pursue an eligible man, never heeding the thousand and one evidences he gives of indifference, but dodging artfully around each sign of "no intentions" and bobbing up in his path at all turns. It is useless to argue that they do not gain their end and aim, for many times they do. In the long run society yields to the persistency of this type of woman or the man is safely harnessed to her triumphal car.

THE KING WELCOMES CZAR IMPOSING GREETING AT COWES

Large Gathering of Royalty Present and 150 Warships Grace the Occasion—Extra Effort Made to Discount Denunciation of Czar by English Labor Members.

Cowes, Aug. 3.—The Russian imperial yacht Standart, bringing the Emperor and the Empress from Cherbourg to Cowes, on a visit to King Edward, anchored in the Cowes roadstead shortly before 1 o'clock yesterday.

Their Majesties were given an official welcome even more imposing than usually attends such occasions. Not only were King Edward and Queen Alexandra, the Prince and Princess of Wales and a large gathering of other members of the royal family present to greet their guests, but 150 of the pick of the British war fleet, dressed in flags from stem to stern and flying the Russian ensign, encircles the anchorage allotted to the Standart.

The presence of the English Foreign Secretary, Sir Edward Grey, M. Iswolsky, the Russion Minister of Foreign Affairs, and Count Von Benckendorff, the Russian ambassador to Great Britain, further emphasized the significance attached in the diplomatic world to this visit of the Russian Emperor to England.

The unusual welcome of yesterday morning was arranged designedly for the double purpose of helping to strengthen the links in the chain binding Great Britain, France and Russia in a triple entente, and to dissipate any ill-feeling engendered by the harsh denunciation of Emperor Nicholas and his methods, so frequently vented by the members of the Labor party both in and out of Parliament since the coming of the Emperor was first announced.

The function, however, was distinctly official in character and so strongly were the spectators entrenched behind the cordon of steel walls that there was no chance for a popular demonstration either for or against Emperor Nicholas.

King Edward and Queen Alexandra went out on board the royal yacht Victoria and Albert and met the Standart outside of Spithead. King Edward went over to the Standart and welcomed his guests, and then escorted them to the Victoria and Albert, where luncheon was served. After this repast the two sovereigns reviewed the assembled fleets from the Victoria and Albert.

King Edward, Emperor Nicholas and the Prince of Wales and Admiral Sir John Fisher, chief naval aide to King Edward, and Reginald McKenna, First Lord of the Admiralty, and a number of lesser officers, were on the bridge of the Standart.

At night the Russian Emperor and Empress dine with King Edward and Queen Alexandra and the members of the British royal household on board the Victoria and Albert. All the ships in the harbor were illuminated last night.

The dinner was a brilliant function. The dining-room was beautifully decorated with red roses, and on the table was a magnificent display of gold plate.

Besides the King and Queen and the Emperor and Empress, the guests were the Crown Prince and Crown Princess of Sweden, the Prince and Princess of Wales, the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, Premier Asquith, Sir Edward Grey, Reginald McKenna and M. Iswolsky.

The King then proposed a toast to the Russian monarch, declaring that the navy was only in the interests of peace. His Majesty also referred to his pleasure at recently meeting a number of members of the Russian Douma, and made allusion to Emperor Nicholas' former visit to England.

In responding, Emperor Nicholas said that the magnificent naval review he had witnessed bore full testimony to England's greatness. His Majesty said he always would remember the days he had spent with the beloved and venerated Queen Victoria.

Czar Will Visit Turkey.

Cherbourg, Aug. 3.—Foreign Minister Iswolsky yesterday confirmed the reported intention of Emperor Nicholas of going to Italy and Turkey, but said these visits would not occur until the fall. Emperor Nicholas will go to these countries direct from the Crimea.

Repression In Russia.

London, Aug. 3.—A letter protesting against the unrelaxed repression of liberty in Russia is published here.

It is addressed to Sir Edward Grey, the Secretary of Foreign Affairs, and asks whether it is impossible to bring friendly pressure upon the Russian Government to ameliorate the alleged conditions. The letter is signed by over 100 clergymen, newspapers, members of the House of Commons and others.

The Times in an editorial on the letter denounces the choice of the day of arrival in British waters of Emperor Nicholas for the publication of such a letter, as bad taste, and gratuitous boorishness.

TRADE EXPERT FROM GERMANY

London, Aug. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The German Commercial Treaties' Association has memoralized the German Chancellor for the appointment of a German trade expert in Canada. The request is based upon replies received to a circular addressed by the association to a large number of firms trading with Canada, by whom such an appointment is considered highly desirable. At the same time many firms remark that the end of the tariff war is of far greater importance, as before normal trade relations have been restored between Germany and Canada, no very great results are to be expected from the appointment of a trade expert.

11,300 Buildings Burned.

AUSTRALIA WANTS FULL CONTROL

Must Have Charge of Navy Troops Says Argus

Melbourne, Australia, Aug. 3.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Argus says that the Imperial Defence Conference deliberations cannot lead to a successful conclusion unless Britain makes a full, intelligent provision for the diversified interests and local aspirations of the colonies. Australia is unalterably determined to build her own navy and train citizens by a system of compulsory cadet service.

"But," The Argus continues, "Australia, first and foremost, demands the service both of our soldiers and of our ships, and cannot permit another voice in their control. In an imperial crisis, Australia would gladly place the whole armament at Britain's disposal, but by consent not by compulsion."

The Argus remarks that the Little Englander now seems as rare as the Canadian or the Australian who would wish to cut loose from the Empire.

THE SITUATION IMPROVING SPAIN IS QUIETING DOWN

Censored Reports Say That Authorities Have Been Victorious in Barcelona, But Revolutionists Are Strong in the Rural Parts.

Paris, Aug. 3.—The international situation in Spain to-day seems to be improving. Barcelona has emerged from her isolation and the threatened general strike in Madrid appears to have been averted, at least temporarily.

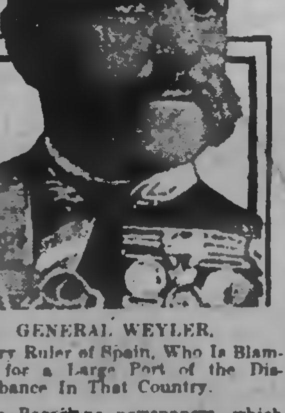
The first train out of Catalonia's capital city since the beginning of the tragic events there reached the French frontier last night, bringing censored and plainly inexact newspapers accounts of the insurrection in the outlying parts of Catalonia. The rest is shrouded in mystery.

Several of the smaller cities are reported to be in the hands of the revolutionists, and many villages have proclaimed the district a republic. Troops are being steadily distributed throughout the rebellious district, and barring new serious outbreaks, the insurrectionists eventually will be forced to capitulate.

It is said that the authorities are determined to crush the insurrection before the return from South America of Deputy Alejandro Leroux, chief of the Republicans at Barcelona, whose period of exile for political reasons was set aside by the Chamber of Deputies last April.

Reports from San Felise, Palamos and Cassa de la Selvo say that these places are still in the hands of the revolutionists.

In striking contrast of the estimate of the victims of the disorders given by the Barcelona newspapers, which arrived yesterday at Cerbere, is one of 5,000, emanating from private advices received from Madrid. This latter estimate, however, is labelled "Perhaps exaggerated."



GENERAL WEYLER.
Military Ruler of Spain, Who Is Blamed for a Large Port of the Disturbance In That Country.

An official statement issued in Madrid last night concerning the proposed general strike there says that numerous masons failed to report for duty yesterday, but it is explained that this was due to a fear of a clash with the unionists.

Spain's censorship to-day is more inexorable than ever. No news has been received from the various points in the north, where the trades unions had planned a general strike.

Refugees arriving at the frontier speak of the "terrible slaughter" and estimate the dead at thousands, but allowance must be made for their panic. Whether or not the ringleaders who were captured and tried and condemned by court-martial actually have been executed is not yet clear. Some reports declare that General Santiago has not yet approved the death sentences in the cases of these men. It is known, however, that Emiliano Iglesias, editor of The Progresso, was shot without trial in the fortress.

Some reports insist that a republic already has been proclaimed, and that a regular junta is directing the operations of the revolutions.

A special despatch from Cerebere reiterates previous reports that a number of communes in Catelina have proclaimed a republic, and declares that the municipality of Palmos has declared that city to be free and independent.

Butchery Was Terrible.

Oran, Algeria, Aug. 3.—The steamer Imir came in here yesterday from Melilla and her officers, referring to the fighting there between the Spaniards and the Moors of July 27, say the former made the mistake of advancing in solid masses through a gorge dominated on both sides by hills, when the enemy mowed them down as fast as they issued from the pass. The unfortunate soldiers of Spain did not know where the fusilades came from. The butchery was terrible.

Belleville Woman Drowned.

Belleville, Aug. 3.—At Bellingham, Wash., Mrs. Guy Hudgins, aged 24, drowned whilst bathing. She was the eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Jos. Stainton of Deseronto. The fatality occurred on the first anniversary of her wedding. Mr. Hudgins is well-known in Belleville.

WAS FATAL EXHIBITION

Providencetown, Mass., Aug. 3.—"It was not a prize fight nor a boxing bout, but an exhibition for a moving picture machine," said Admiral Seaton Schroeder yesterday, in reference to the death of Hanson H. Foster, a colored messmate on board the battleship Vermont Sunday night, after going six rounds with a messmate on Friday evening. Foster died of cerebral hemorrhages, caused by a blow or fall.

Scarcity of Labor.

Port Arthur, Aug. 3.—J. Dix Fraser, manager of Atikokan Iron Co.'s blast furnaces, states that the blow-in will take place early this week. Everything is practically ready to recommence the manufacture of pig iron.

Contractors who are endeavoring to hire men for railroad work on the N.T.R., north of Nepigon, are finding it very difficult to procure labor.

PROBABILITIES.

Wednesday — Southerly winds, very warm, with thunderstorms.

CHANGES AT THE PENITENTIARY

Kingston, Aug. 3.—Changes are under way at the penitentiary. Two stone buildings are being erected, one on either side of the main gate, for the warden's office, the accountant and the storekeeper. The present office wing is to be vacated, and the woman's prison built elsewhere on the grounds. The deputy warden will vacate the living rooms and be provided with a new house on the farm.

THE HOUSE OF TOO MUCH TROUBLE

A young Englishman residing on Aylmer street, was arrested this morning on complaint of his wife, who has been having anything but a happy life with her spouse for some time past. It is claimed that the husband is quarrelsome, and has at different times abused his wife. Matters came to a crisis this morning when he threatened to murder her.

The police were telephoned for and the scrappy young disturber was taken to the lockup.

GLENALLAH HITS THE BREAKWATER

Port Colborne, Aug. 3.—The steamer Glenallah, owned by the Inland Navigation Co. of Hamilton, struck the breakwater here early yesterday morning, doing twenty to thirty thousand dollars' damage.

The steamer had passed through the canal and was on her way out. When nearing the breakwater, her wheel chain became clogged. She struck the breakwater head on. Her forward compartments are full of water. She was loaded with a general cargo, Montreal to Fort William.

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN'S TOURNAMENT

Parry Sound, Aug. 3.—The annual tournament of the Northern Volunteer Firemen's Association will be held here on Wednesday. It is expected that at least 10,000 visitors will be present. Special trains are coming from all directions. Band competitions and various contests between volunteer fire companies have been arranged, as well as a big program of athletics. Capt. Alex. Gunn and Wm. Simpson of the Toronto fire department will act as judges.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Frank Davis, aged 28, whose parents live in Ottawa, shot himself yesterday at the west cannery, at Vancouver where he was bookkeeper.

Bernard L. Tarbox of Boston, Mass., a bigamist, now living in Canada, is defendant in a $25,000 suit brought by his "affinity's" parents.

Frank Martin of Martin's Island, was in court at Chatham charged with selling liquor without a license and fined $100 or three months in jail.

Three-year-old Nellie Hill of 162 De Grassi street, Toronto, who was so terribly burned Sunday noon, died in the Hospital for Sick Children at 8 o'clock yesterday morning.

The St. John, N.B., police last night arrested two Greeks for selling "Free Speech," a Moncton publication, in this city. It is thought other arrests will follow, as these men are said to have been acting for others.

Three hundred persons are aboard the British steamer Waratah en route from Sydney for London, and failure to hear any report of the vessel since she sailed from Durban, Natal, July 26 has resulted in some alarm.

James H. Dunn, at one time a Montreal stock broker, but who has accumulated a large fortune in London dealing in stocks, has purchased the magnificent country home of Lord Charles Beresford, some miles out of London.

ANOTHER NAME ADDED TO LIST

Citizen Who Caused Annoyance to Neighbors and Discomfort to His Family Through Drink Was Blacklisted

As a result of two witnesses testifying that he was a troublesome neighbor, and that he used bad language, a resident in the north end of the city was fined $2.00 and costs, and also placed on the black-list, at the police court this morning. The defendant objected to the latter part of the magistrate's decision, but the evidence of Chief Roszel and P. C. Newhall, both of whom stated that he was an habitual drinker, warranted the action being taken. The magistrate stated that it was for his own good and if he used a little common sense and acted with the judgment of the court he would be greatly benefitted in the future.

SERIOUS FIRE IN HAVELOCK

Good Work of Citizens Prevented the Flames From Spreading

Havelock, Aug. 2.—The residence occupied by Mr. Dibson and owned by Mr. M. McNichol was completely destroyed by fire to-day. The loss, which amounts to about $1,800, was partly covered by insurance. It was only through the hard work of the bucket brigade that considerably more property was not destroyed.

The house which was destroyed was situated on Concession street at the west end of the village. On one side, at a distance of 35 feet, is situated the residence of Mr. Jas. Mark, while the house of Mr. F. Brinton stands only 12 feet from the western side.

The origin of the fire is unknown. It started in the upstairs of the house and before held arrived it was too far advanced to be stopped by the use of buckets. As the fire, which was slow in burning on account of being at the top of the dwelling, was left alone and all attention turned to the saving of the furniture and preventing the other buildings from starting.

A slight breeze sprang up at one time and it looked doubtful if the adjoining buildings could be saved, and even the houses across the street were in great danger, but props were placed against the sides of the house and the flames turned into the centre. The many willing helpers who were on hand deserve great praise for their valuable work.

SILVER DART WAS WRECKED STRIKES KNOLL IN LANDING

Aeroplane at Petewawa Makes a Trial Carrying Baldwin as Passenger and Makes Successful Flights up and Down the Field.

Petawawa Camp, Aug. 3.—From the aviators' standpoint, the future of the preliminary trials of the "Silver Dart" over Petawawa common early yesterday was the successful working of the new motor.

The aerodrome attained the highest speed yet made in Canada — forty miles an hour or over—and carried for the first time an additional passenger.

Four flights, or hops, were made, the first three being about half-mile each and the fourth about three-quarters of a mile.

Unfortunately, when making the fourth landing, the sun dazzled the aviators and the forward wheel of the aerodrome struck a knoll at an angle and the machine ricochetted and fell on its side, wrecking the wings and framework. The motor remained uninjured. The aviators received only a few scratches.

The trials were held before sunrise. No wind was blowing and weather conditions were perfect. J. D. McCurdy, with whom the "Silver Dart" has always been associated, was in the front position, in charge of the controlling apparatus, and Casey Baldwin went along as a passenger.

The propeller was started and, under heavy pressure, the aerodrome moved swiftly forward. After traveling a short distance along the ground until proper speed had been acquired, a slight turn in the bow control was made and the "Silver Dart" gracefully slid into the air, moving at a uniform distance of ten feet from the ground.

The aerodrome made three successful flights up and down the field, northwest to a clump of jack pines and back again to the shed, maintaining perfect balance and being under control all the time.

The surface of the field on which the trials took place is uneven. The ground is anything but level, and little rounded hummocks rise irregularly here and there, leaving countless small depressions, separated by tiny ridges. One walking might notice these irregularities, but it would be difficult to do so when riding and on account of the thick scrub, almost impossible when sailing through the air.

When the aviator is seeking a landing, the idea is to light on a crest and slide gently down the slope, but if the air is bad and he strikes a knoll at a greater angle than on the level, the shock is much worse. This is just what happened yesterday. On the fourth flight, McCurdy sought a landing about seventy yards from the shed, but owing to the sun, could not see the knoll. The machine was traveling eastward at an high speed and the forward wheel struck the ground heavily. The machine bounced and fell on its side fifty yards further on, and about twenty yards from the shed a shapeless mass of splinters, twisted steel and torn silk.

The loss of the "Silver Dart" is keenly felt by Baldwin and McCurdy. It was the first flying machine made in Canada and represented months of painstaking work at Baddeck, N.S., and from its hundred or more successful flights it had become an object of affection. But the purpose for which it was set up has been achieved, and the principles are amplified in "New Baddeck No. 1." Work on this new machine has begun and the motor will be installed without delay. This will not take long. Numerous changes in the "Dart" made the assembling difficult, but the "Baddeck" already looks like a "drome," and by Friday or Saturday next an aerodrome mightier than the "Silver Dart" will be flying over Ottawa Valley, a fitting exponent of Canadian enterprise.

CONNAUGHT WAS FORCED TO RETIRE

London, Aug. 3.—It is reported as a sequel to the Duke of Connaught's resignation last month, of the inspector generalship of the Mediterranean forces, on the ground of "the ineffective nature of the work and the useless expense to the nation involved therein," that the Army Council has requested the duke to retire from the presidency of the selection board, which deals with the selection and promotion of officers in the army.

Played Indian; Two Boys Burned.

Montreal, Aug. 3.—As a result of playing Indian, two boys were burned, one badly and another slightly, at Outremont, a suburb. The two boys, who took the part of Indians, tied a younger playmate to a 'torture post" as a white prisoner. Sparks from the fire set fire to one of the bigger boy's clothes. Both "Indians" then ran away, leaving the little fellow, who was released by a neighbor.

Stockholm, Aug. 3.—The labor conflict in Sweden which originated in a dispute over wages in the woolen and cotton industries, is assuming large proportions.

In the beginning 13,000 men were locked out, and other industries since have become involved until to-day the employers' federation declared a lockout of the iron foundry hands numbering 30,000 men. This brings the total of the men locked out to 80,000.

A general strike is threatened for Aug. 4.

WEALTHY MAN GOES TO THE CHAIN GANG

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 3.—The last chance of escape from a sentence to the chain gang passed from William H. Mitchell, for years one of the most prominent men in Southern Georgia, when the state court of appeals affirmed the lower court's sentence that he must serve a year for assault and battery upon his relative, Miss Lucile Linton.

Mitchell nearly a year ago disguised himself as a negro woman and attempted to abduct Miss Linton. She is wealthy and a social leader of the community in which Mitchell lived, in and about Thomasville.

ALL FOR PROTECTION NOW

Commenting on President Taft's victory on the tariff bill, the New York Times (Democrat), says:

"Cannot the President see that if he were making a real fight over something worth while, if he were standing out for a substantial revision downward and for the general reduction of duties to the difference in cost abroad and at home, with a profit to American industries, the people would be with him even more strongly and definitely than they are now? Doubtless Mr. Aldrich is telling him that a split in the party would follow such a course. It is nonsense. Who would make the split? Not the stand-patters, however they now may bluster. They are not going to bring in a Democratic majority because they cannot get all they want from a Republican one. Their talk is sheer bluff, and it ought not to scare any one who can see what they really have in their hands and what their inevitable interests would make them do."

The recent struggle in the United States for a revision of the tariff has ended in a peculiar way. The revision has not been at all of a radical character and yet both Republicans and Democrats are satisfied. The President was, apparently, of opinion that a very important proportion of the people was desirous of a considerable reduction in the tariff, and he exerted his full executive power to enable it to be heard. But, strange to say, the Democrats are just as anxious for a protective tariff as the Republicans, and for just as high a one, too. According to Canadian opinion the American tariff is unnecessarily high. It is much higher than we ever dreamed of in Canada, but the people over there seem to think not, and they ought to be good judges, for they constitute and make up the great modern wonder of the world amongst nations.

It will be observed that the Times, in the quotation above made strikes the true note with regard to protection, and the reason for protection, as we understand it, viz., "the difference between the cost of living at home and abroad." It is in the difference in the standard of life for the worker that the difference consists.

In connection with this sentiment the Globe's interview with Lieut.-Col. Denison in another column is particularly interesting.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The incessant blather of John D.'s press-agent would lead one to suppose that he is trying to cure the public of ever referring to the old man again.

A recent decision of Mr. Edmison, county magistrate, will recall an attempt made during the latter years of the Ross regime, to give a charter to an exclusive game and fish club at Rice Lake. Pretty work, that was!

The "back lakes" are becoming more popular every year, and the American invasion more pronounced, but the accommodation provided in the way of transport is still too large on the boats and too small everywhere else. There is something peculiar about "the whole business" and no one seems to know what the matter is. It all looks as if the traffic would likely be large. But it is not. And yet the number of tourists is large.

Big British business interests are in a panic to-day over the threatened boycott of English goods in India, even more than they are over the anti-British demonstration planned throughout the country Aug. 7th.

If the boycott could be made permanently effective England might still be able to hold India, but it is doubtful if it would be worth holding. The country has wonderful resources of its own and enterprising German, French and Chinese firms are keen to break the English monopoly of trade there.

Native professors of the leading Indian colleges are publicly advocating the anti-British movement and are urging the people to join the boycott. Ajit Singh, deported at the same time as the famous disturber, Lala Lajpat Rai, and subsequently allowed to return, and Arabindo Ghose, another widely known anti-English agitator, are going through the country preaching passive but stubborn resistence to British authority.

Sedition continues to spread. While the India office in London was at first disinclined to take the situation seriously, the veiled threat by Sir Norman Baker, who recently told the Bengal Council, that if the Indians did not co-operate with the Government, there would still be a solution, but neither a peaceful nor a painless one, has shown the government officials that Englishmen on the ground do not regard it lightly.—C.A.P.

LT.-COL. DENISON RETURNS FROM ENGLAND AND FRANCE

Interesting Interview in the Globe—Chamberlain Improving—Tariff Reform Sure to Come—Physique of French

War is inevitable. The day must come when the armed forces of Britain and Germany will be at each other's throats. This is the opinion of Col. G. T. Denison, who returned on Saturday from an extended visit to the old country and the continent. In the course of an interview Col. Denison said: "I am satisfied that war between Britain and Germany must come some day, because the two nations are rivals, jealous rivals, in trade, and there will be a final struggle for the supremacy. It will be the story of Athens and Sparta, Rome and Carthage over again. Already in Great Britain there is a fear of the German. There is a feeling that Germany is preparing for an effort to get on top, and throughout the country there is a nervous feeling. I lunched with Rudyard Kipling, one day, and he was quite pessimistic as to the way things were going. It was shortly after that he published his poem, 'The City of Brass,' which is a strong indictment of a certain class of people. Among the people who look ahead there is a feeling of uneasiness. Of course, there is also a mass of feeling that everything is all right, and always will be, but as Kipling says himself:

"'Men, not gods, devised it,
And men, not gods, must keep.'

"With regard to the naval situation, we must wait until the British Government gets the best naval authority to say which is the best method by which we can spend our money. I am afraid that our politicians of both parties want the money spent in the way most advantageous to their party interests."

Col. Denison is convinced that tariff reform will be one of the main issues of the next general election, and in this connection it may be mentioned that after an interview with the Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, whose guest he was, he was led to the opinion that the leader's health was so improved that his return to active political work was possible. "I visited Mr. Chamberlain at Highbury," he said, "and was pleased to find him better than I expected. He walks with the aid of a stick. Mrs. Chamberlain told me her husband walks half a mile a day regularly. His mind is as clear and bright as it could be, and he is full of fight and confidence that his cause is going to carry. I hope and expect to see at the next election his party carry the day, and that he will again sit in the House of Commons and cast his vote for tariff reform."

"What are the indications as to the approach of a general election?"

"It depends on whether the Lords throw out the budget. At first I was inclined to think they would not, and that in adopting that course they would be following the wisest plan, giving the Government enough rope and letting them hang themselves. There has, however, been tacked on to the budget so many new principles of taxation that I think the House of Lords will throw out the bill, and that will mean an immediate appeal to the country. There is an opinion that Lloyd-George has not properly considered the difficulties of working out his scheme, and that he will probably amend it himself. The fact of the matter is that the Old Country is in a very bad way. Going through the country, I saw there were a good many fields out of cultivation. There were but few people working in the fields, and I was told the cities were full of paupers. There is a great lack of employment. Then I went over to France, and was struck with the difference. One saw what protection had done for France. The country was the picture of prosperity. There were beautiful crops everywhere, and everywhere there were people working in the fields. The only waste lands were in the forests, and there was evidence of the practice of the most careful forestry.

"There was another thing which struck me in France. I was through France in 1868 and visited the great military camp at Chalons. I was struck by the diminutiveness of the soldiers, for I could look over their heads. Since then there has been a great physical improvement, and the increased height of the French infantrymen struck me when I saw a number in Orleans. I should say the average height is now higher than that in the British line regiments."—The Globe.

BOWMANVILLE AND LOCALS PUT UP CLASSY EXHIBITION

The City Leaguers Won at Riverside Park Yesterday Afternoon by 9-4, Having the Best of the Argument After the First Innings—Visitors Were Shut Out in Seven Innings.

At Riverside Park yesterday afternoon the visiting Bowmanville team were put to sleep in nine innings of well-played baseball by the local outfit, composed of players from the City League. The score was 9—4, and the figures tell the pleasing fact that the local ball tossers were just twice as good as their opponents in every department of the game. Bowmanville looked dangerous in the first innings, when they put three men over the plate, but after the picked up team got started their playing was too big a proposition for the nine from the town where they grow the famous rifle shots. Their heaver was one of the phoniest that ever blew into this city, and he was lucky to get away as easy as he did. In the early stages of the game he had the locals breaking their backs in trying to solve his delivery, which was slower than the York Loan in paying dividends. All he had in his pack was a straight drop, which was touched up for a home run, three baggers, two-baggers and singles, after the first few innings. His fielders, which included our old friend, Foxy Wilcox at the second cushion, supported him as well as possible, but the safe ones were coming too fast, and just at the time when they were needed to score runners.

BRIGHT SPOTS.

To the locals are due the honors for pulling off the features of the contest. Their fielding was of the calibre that wins games, and the fans were not slow in showing their appreciation. The work of Ben Dusty at right field was of the sensational order. In one innings, with two gone and a runner resting on the third, he pulled off the play of the day, when he made a one-handed stab of a fast one from Wilcox's bat. The batting of Giroux and O'Brien was another feature, the former getting a three-bagger and two two-baggers in four times at bat, and the latter securing a home run, which resulted in the scoring of two tallies. Ab Quinlan found himself in trouble only in the first innings, as in the remainder of the struggle the best the visitors could do was to put one man across the plate. McFadden looked after the receiving end in fine style.

A good sized crowd witnessed the exhibition, and all appeared to be satisfied with the article of ball dished up by the two teams. Dan McCabe was all to the good with his impartial decisions.

GAME BY INNINGS.

First innings—Weeks, first up, was out, Kendry to O'Brien. Hooper flew out to Weatherstone. Wilcox singled to left, and Jones hit to left. Tucker's two-bagger to left scored both runners. Johnstone kept up the good work, and planted a nice one in left garden, scoring Tucker. Cander struck out. Three runs.

Peterborough went out in one, two, three order.

Second innings—Bowmanville were retired without a score.

Peterborough—With one gone and Weatherstone on first, Curtis hit for three bags, and the former counted. Dusty flew out. One run.

Third innings—Bowmanville were again retired without a score.

Peterborough—Giroux singled, but was out stealing second. Callaghan missed three. Kendry was safe at first and stole second. O'Brien took one in the back arm. Kendry scored on the play to catch Quinlan at first. McFadden hit the air for three. One run.

Fourth innings—Bowmanville received their third application of whitewash.

Peterborough—With one gone Curtis reached first on a wide throw, stole second and third, and scored on Giroux's two-bagger. Dusty, running for the batter, was caught between third and home. One run.

Fifth innings—Bowmanville took the count for three again.

Peterborough—Kendry was thrown out at first. O'Brien went the hit-by-pitcher route, stole second, and went to third on Quinlan's single. Both runners counted on McFadden's hit to left. Weatherstone hit into a double and retired the side. Two runs.

Sixth innings—Both sides were retired in order in this innings.

Seventh innings—Bowmanville. With two gone Mutton singled, stole second and reached home as a result of two wild throws. Webster was safe at first, but Hooper struck out. One run.

Peterborough—Callaghan went out Johnstone to Blackburn. Kendry singled and came home when O-You-Mike put one over the fence for a homer. Two runs.

Eighth innings—Bowmanville was shut out.

Peterborough—Weatherstone was safe at first and stole second. Curtis grounded out to Blackburn. Dusty flew out to Johnstone. Giroux made his third hit of the day a three-bagger, and Weatherstone scored. Kendry singled, scoring Giroux. O'Brien flew out to Mutton. Two runs.

Ninth innings—Bowmanville tried hard to break up the game, but the fielding of the locals prevented promising looking tallies, and the game was over.

KAUFMAN TELLS HIS REASON

For Sidestepping Jack Johnson —Hopes to be Champion

Al Kaufman, who is in Seattle to engage in an exhibition bout, says:

"It has repeatedly been stated of late that I am sidestepping matches and demanding exorbitant purses.

"In the first place, I did not like to harass any boxer who has an affair on his hands, like Ketchel and Langford. Now that it appears that that match is off, I will make the following proposition to Messrs. Ketchel, Britt, Hall, et al. Britt announced a few days ago that Ketchel would meet me for $17,500. Now, if the Nevada offer is bona fide, I will take Langford's place and allow Ketchel $17,500 for his end, lose or draw, and $2,000 of the purse if he stays over 20 rounds. If the Nevada offer is off, I will make him the following terms, as I do not demand a guaranteed purse. If some of the local promoters will allow a reasonable percentage, I will give Ketchel four per cent. of the boxers' end for every round he stays, merely reserving for myself the per cent. to cover my training expenses. Or I will allow him two-thirds of the contestants' end, win, lose or draw.

"I do not desire to place myself in the position of a heavyweight hounding a middleweight, but as Britt has been talking considerably in an effort to place me in a wrong light, I feel fully justified in this stand. In regard to Johnson, I was sincere for my part, but listened to my advisers—who have cooler heads, for the following reasons:

"I am only 23 years of age and the only one at the present time to whom the public can look to retake the title. I expect to be ready for him a little later on, but they want me to be sure of myself when I start, and when I do they believe the sporting fraternity and the public in general will bestow a little credit on a native son, who will be the third champion of the world to hail from California."

THE RING

Jack Johnson has posted his forfeit of $5,000 to meet Jeffries.

WHAT YOU NEED FOR THE COUNTRY

You need some handy balm ready for blistered hands, sunburned skin, cuts, burns, bruises, stings, and the many little accidents incidental to open-air life. Zam-Buk is the ideal balm. It is antiseptic, soothing, and healing. Insect stings or barbed wire scratches cannot become poisoned wounds if Zam-Buk is applied. It soothes sore, aching feet, heals baby's chafed places, cools patches of sunburn, relieves the pain of blisters. Mothers should see that the country cottage is never without Zam-Buk. Purely herbal, it may be regarded as Nature's own healer. Apply it to all skin injuries, rashes, eruptions and diseases. All druggists and stores.

TWO EXCURSIONS IN CITY TO-DAY

Eighteen Coaches to Convey the Visitors Here This Morning

This city is invaded again to-day by a large number of visitors. Twelve coaches drawn by a double header, brought in nearly 800 from Beaverton and six coaches were necessary to convey an excursion from Millbrook. Both outings were under the auspices of Sunday schools of each place. Many are taking the opportunity to take a trip over the lift lock and others are driving or walking around the city viewing the many places of interest. The Millbrook train leaves on the return trip at eight o'clock and the Beaverton train at seven.

Charlotte Bonbonniere.

An amusing new bonbonniere is in the shape of a very realistic charlotte russe and about the size of that airy dainty. The top of the charlotte lifts away, disclosing the candy box.

A fun loving hostess bought souvenirs in this form for all the guests at a luncheon. They were filled with goodies and passed by the maid, looking, until closely examined, like a second dessert course. The discovery of their true nature caused much surprise and laughter.

COMEDY IN FIREWORKS

Some Funny Things Pictured in Lines of Fire

"The Battle of the North Sea" and "The Siege of Kandahar" are the features but by no means the whole of the fireworks display at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto. In addition there are 62 distinct numbers on the fireworks programme and they include everything that can be imagined in pyrotechnics. And in these numbers comedy has its place. For instance, a Punch and Judy show is one of the numbers. Another number pictures a boy fishing. A big policeman comes along and orders him away. Another boy seeing this, brings on a giant firecracker, sets it behind the policeman and fires it off—result, a big policeman kicking on the ground and boys disappearing around the corner.

KELSEY

Zig-Zag Heat Tubes

Make the KELSEY WARM AIR GENERATOR the most powerful apparatus.

¶ The "Kelsey" warms fresh air by the best method; warms large volumes of air properly and forces to exposed or distant rooms; has double the weight and heating surfaces of the ordinary furnace, and utilizes all the heat to much better advantage; does not heat the cellar or waste heat up the chimney.

¶ The "Kelsey" does not warm the same air over and over like steam or hot water systems with radiators; costs less to install, and for management and repairs; and is more efficient, healthful and economical.

¶ These are a few of the reasons why the Kelsey Fresh Air System has been installed in so many of the finest class of City and Country Homes, Churches and Schools, and why it is being specified in preference to other systems.

KNIGHTS OF COLUMBUS OPEN LODGE IN CITY OF TORONTO

Permission Given by Ecclesiastical Authorities — Sermon by Rev. Father McColl—Members From Peterborough Attend.

Fifteen hundred knights attended the celebration of high mass in St. Michael's cathedral in connection with the formation of the Toronto council.

Rev. Father McColl, rector of the cathedral at Peterborough, preached from Ephesians iv., 16. The purpose of this society, he said, was similar to that of the knights of the days of chivalry, to serve God religiously, to battle for the faith, to support the rights of the weak, the widow, and the orphan, and to keep faith inviolately with all.

The combat then was physical; to-day it is intellectual, a war of ideas and principles. The Knights of Columbus were instituted in order to have an educated body of laymen, who thus intellectually armed would be able to defend the faith and assist the church in all kinds of good works.

We were confidently told in these days that faith was a weakness and blindness. It was, on the contrary, the most perfect act of the human reason. Men who rejected faith and the principles of authority should, if consistent, reject all human testimony as a criterion of certitude, which would not only arrest all progress, but would render existence in this world practically impossible. Three-fourths of our knowledge was learned from the testimony of others. If reason thus forced us to believe the testimony of man, the testimony of God was greater.

By fighting the fight of faith we were fighting for the rights of life, liberty and equality as found in Christian nations, for Christian morality, for the sanctity of the home and the stability of society.

If the order were to prosper, this life must be one of constant activity. If we loved God and our neighbor we would make sacrifices for them.—Toronto World.

Those of the local council of the order in attendance at the convention were: Grand Knight H. Phelan, Deputy Grand Knight Dr. F. P. McNulty; Lecturer, Rev. W. J. McColl; Financial Secretary, G. H. Giroux; Treasurer, Michael Coughlin; Recorder, J. W. Foley; Warden, John J. Lynch, and a large number of members.

NO CLUE AS TO PERPETRATORS OF RAID ON EVANGELISTIC TENT

Those in Charge Still at Loss to Understand Motive of Raid—Lost Hymn Books Not Yet Returned.

Nothing yet has been heard as to the identity of the person or persons who made the raid on the evangelistic tent last Sunday. So far, nothing has been heard of the whereabouts of the hymn-books that were stolen, and those in charge of the work have given up hope of ever recovering them.

It looks as if it was the work of a person who went to the grounds with the specific intention of doing some damage to the property. At no other time on Sunday was the tent left unguarded except at the moment when the raid was committed. The invader must have bided his chance, and waiting till the coast was clear, proceeded to wreck the tent. However, nothing more has happened since Sunday, and those in charge are hoping that there will be no more trouble.

A PERFECT DAY AND A FINE PROGRAMME OF EVENTS

Third Annual Regatta at Upper Stoney Lake—The Prize Winning Competitors in the Different Races—Delightful Concert and Dance in the Evening.

The third annual regatta of the Upper Stoney Lake Campers and Cottagers' Association was held yesterday at Crowe's Landing. The weather was all that the association could wish for and the success of the regatta repays the committee for their untiring efforts in preparing for the comfort of the competitors and onlookers.

THE COURSE.

The course was laid out in front of the new pavilion and a perfect view was afforded the spectators by the high banks at this point. Each competitor had a buoy of his own, so the usual trouble incurred in rounding one buoy was eliminated. The sailing course also was visible from the shore and the entire races could be seen from the pavilion.

For a while in the morning indications pointed to a calm day, but before noon a fine breeze sprang up and the sailing races were finished in good time. The open sailing race was won by Master Harold Knapman, who sailed the "Cygnet." W. T. Hall won the dinzy race and Jack Roxborough the canoe sailing race.

Some trouble arose over the canoes used in the men's single race, which finally resulted in Fred Joplin, of Chemong, who finished first in a racing canoe, being disqualified. In the boy's race a new feature was adopted by which the boys entering must weigh under 115 lbs. to be eligible. The judges were a little skeptical about the success their new method would obtain but it worked well, besides affording no small amount of pleasure to the campers, as the boys did everything possible to decrease their weight. The method of classing competitors by weight is to be very highly recommended and might well be adopted at the other regattas.

THE CROWD.

A very large crowd was in attendancy partly because of the ideal weather and partly on account of the excellent advertising the regatta has had combined with the reputation the Upper Stoney Lake Cottagers have for putting on one of the best regattas on the Kawartha Lakes. Before noon many had arrived in rigs from the surrounding country and shortly after one the "Majestic" arrived with a big load from lower Stony Lake. Soon after the arrival of the "Majestic" the "Stoney Lake" came with an immense excursion from Bowmanville and later the "Empress" arrived. Then many came in launches and small craft.

A drowning was narrowly averted during the ladies' tandem canoe race. Two ladies were toiling most energetically with visions of first prize before their eyes, when they discovered that they had in some way upset the boat and were in the water. One of the young ladies was unable to swim a stroke, but by hanging to her companion and the canoe, which rolled over and over in the water, she was able with difficulty to stay afloat till a nearby launch came to their rescue. In the evening both the girls were none the worse for their dangerous experience.

THE CONCERT AND DANCE.

In the evening a concert was held in the pavilion, which was crowded to the doors. The programme was not lengthy and was followed by the presentation of prizes. After which dancing was engaged in for a couple of hours. At the concert Mr. and Mrs. Rapp gave a very pleasing instrumental duett. Mr. Waldron sang a couple of solos in an exceedingly entertaining manner, for both of which he was encored. Miss Julia Choate delighted the audience with one of her superb violin solos, and was compelled to respond to an encore. A mandolin solo by Mr. Emery was much enjoyed and Mrs. Stanbury sang very acceptably. The programme was brought to a close with a Spanish dance, the beauty and grace of which greatly pleased the assembly.

At the conclusion of the concert the prizes were presented to the winners by Mr. H. G. Buck, president of the association, who also presided at the concert. It had been arranged that the presentation should be made by Mr. Jas. Thompson, M.P.P., but he was unfortunately compelled to leave earlier in the evening.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

JUDGE ROGER

His Honor Judge G. M. Roger goes to reside in Cobourg with the very best wishes of his former fellow citizens. The banquet last evening was a fitting and favorable opportunity for saying farewell. The new judge bears the universal reputation of being a man of high character. It is with sincere regret that the many friends of his youth say "good-bye."

Judge Huycke met with a very flattering reception upon rising to respond to the Bench, and in the course of an admirable speech indicated his sense of the responsibilities of his position. The occasion is one long to be remembered by those who continue to regard with favor a reputation built upon the simple virtues of a just and honorable life.

FAREWELL BANQUET TO JUDGE ROGER

to be allowed to address the company. In regard to the medical profession, he said there was some discussion going on at present as to whether it was being overcrowded or not. Young men ought to be careful these days in choosing what professions they should enter.

There are many attractions in the medical profession. Radium and X-ray will in the near future prove epoch-making. He had always a stated that Mr. Roger would climb to the top of the ladder, and he had. How could a man of Mr. Roger's character fail to do so? The doctor took much pleasure in complimenting Mr. Roger on his promotion, and wished him long life and constant happiness.

Mr. Burnham said that as it was rather late he would be brief. He had known Mr. Roger a long time, in fact, he had been an old political enemy of his, but he knew nothing but good of him. He had had the pleasure of knowing Judge Huycke in his student days, and his elevation to the Bench was the fulfilment of those days of promise.

CITY AND COUNTY CORPORATIONS.

This toast was eloquently proposed by Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C., chairman of the Board of Education. He had known Judge Roger for many years and he had always been a Christian gentleman and an able member of the Bar. Mr. Hayes very cordially welcomed Judge Huycke. He coupled the names of Mayor Rush and Warden Scott to respond to the toast of "The City and County Corporations."

On behalf of the city, Mayor Rush gave his thanks for the hearty manner in which the toast had been honored.

Warden Scott had known Judge Roger for many years and expressed his regret at Judge Roger's departure from Peterborough, and at the same time congratulated him on his appointment.

THE BOARD OF TRADE.

City Clerk Armstrong proposed the toast to "The Board of Trade," and heartily concurred in all that had been said of Judge Roger. Mr. Armstrong had been associated with Judge Roger in the municipal sphere and had always found him zealous and honest in his work for the welfare of the municipality. He stated that the Board of Trade had done valuable work for the interests of the city.

The names of Ald. Gillespie, president of the board, and Mr. Charles, past president, were given as responders to the toast.

Mr. Gillespie thanked the company for the kind appreciation of the efforts of the Board of Trade. The board had done its best in the city's interest and he was glad to see that the people appreciated its efforts.

In connection with the occasion, he seconded the remarks concerning Judge Roger. He had known Judge Roger truly a short time, but in his dealings with him he had found him to be a fair and conscientious man and one of good judgment. He was certain that no better man could have been chosen for the Bench.

He was also well pleased with his acquaintance with Judge Huycke. In him he was sure Peterborough was obtaining a judge of the best spirit.

Mr. Charles expressed his appreciation of the kind words about the Board of Trade. Referring to the departure of Mr. Roger, he said he was filled with regret to see him leave but it could not be helped. He heartily seconded everything that had been said of Mr. Roger, and wished him every success in his new home. He also welcomed Judge Huycke to this city, and hoped his stay here would be most happy and congenial. Mr. Charles punctuated his remarks with several laugh-provoking remarks.

Mr. W. Davidson was heartily encored for his rendition of "My Eileen," and as an encore gave "Sometimes."

The evening was concluded by the singing of God Save the King, Auld Lang Syne, and with three rousing cheers with a tiger for the guest of the evening.

HORSE WAS STRUCK BY STREET CAR LAST EVENING

Yesterday evening at 5 o'clock a street car and a team of horses of the Queen City Oil Co. furnished some excitement at the corner of Aylmer and Charlotte streets, and fortunately the affair did not terminate with any serious injury. Mr. Jas. Clancy was driving north on Aylmer street, and on reaching the corner a car from the west was speeding along. Who was to blame for what followed it is hard to say. The fender of the car struck one of the horses attached to the waggon and carried it several yards, during which time the motorman managed to bring his car to a stop. The fact of the horses being partially turned up Charlotte street was responsible for neither receiving the full force of the blow, and the injuries to the animal struck only amounted to a few bruises. A young lad riding in the waggon was thrown off and received a good shaking up.

LARGE NUMBER OF CAMPS ON THE RIVER THIS SEASON

The Otonabee seems to be becoming more and more a favorite ground for campers. This year there are thirty or forty tents erected between Rye's boat house and Jubilee Point, and this number is steadily increasing. The long, open stretch, just below Crawford's Grove, is occupied by at least nine or ten different parties, and across the river there are several others.

Another spot which seems to be well liked by the campers is that just below the Stewart settlement, on the eastern bank of the river.

If someone was to build a few cottages along the river and start the fever, there is no doubt about it but that many others would soon spring up and give Stoney Lake a hard run for the honors.

CITIZENS' FAREWELL BANQUET TO HIS HONOR JUDGE ROGER

Large Number of Prominent Citizens Assemble to Pay Respect to a Public Spirited Resident—High Tributes to the Guest of the Evening—An Interesting Toast List---His Worship Mayor Rush Presided.

THE TOASTS OF THE EVENING

Proposed by Mayor Rush:—
"His Majesty the King."

Proposed by Mayor Rush:—
"The Parliament and Legislative Assembly of Ontario."
Responded to by Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., West Peterborough and Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., West Peterborough.

Proposed by Mayor Rush:—
"Our Guest."
Responded to by Judge Roger.

Proposed by Dr. Morrison, chairman of the Board of License Commissioners for West Peterborough.
"The Bench, the Bar and the Learned Professions."
Responded to by Judge Huycke, A. P. Poussette, K.C., Dr. Greer and Mr. J. H. Burnham.

Proposed by Mr. L. M. Hayes, K.C.
"The City and County Corporations."
Responded to by Mayor Rush and Warden Scott.

Proposed by City Clerk Armstrong,
"The Board of Trade."
Responded to by Ald. G. A. Gillespie, president of the Board of Trade and Mr. D. Hughes Charles, ex-president.

Of the many successful complimentary banquets held in Peterborough, none has been more successfully managed or more happily arranged than that given Judge Roger on the occasion of his departure to assume the duties of junior judge of the united counties of Durham and Northumberland. It was many-sided in character, comprising the idea of "welcoming the coming and speeding the departing guest."

It was a cordial farewell laden with good wishes to a life-long citizen of Peterborough, who has witnessed and aided in both a public and private capacity the growth and development of the city, and won respect and esteem which justified the honors conferred upon him. It was also a vehicle for extending a welcome His Honor, Judge Huycke, the new county judge of Peterborough, and to afford the opportunity to his future fellow-citizens to give expression to their appreciative welcome. The occasion was also utilized to pay a tribute to departed worth. The references to the late Judge Weller, combined to express the very warmest appreciation of his long judicial services, and his longer exercise of the duties of citizenship.

In all other respects the banquet was a most successful function. The management of it was excellent in every way; the toast list praiseworthy for its brevity, and the speeches of welcome and tribute were most appropriate to the occasion and circumstances.

In every way last night's banquet was a conspicuously successful function, and Judge Roger, who naturally feels the stress of separating himself from the civil and social associations of a life-time, can well carry to his new home pleasant memories of the farewell evidences of the warm place he holds in the hearts and affections of his fellow-citizens.

The manner in which Mayor Rush discharged his duties as toast-master contributed substantially to the success of the evening.

The menu provided by Mine Host George N. Graham, of the Oriental, was of the most appetizing order and character, and in this respect reflects much credit on the cuisine department of the hotel.

THOSE PRESENT.

Those in attendance were:—J. A. Culverwell, T. H. Adams, G. E. Elliott, F. W. Doar, James Ferguson, J. C. Shook, Richard Hall, M. A. Morrison, D. Walker, A. P. Poussette, K.C., Louis M. Hayes, K.C., Robert Fair, R. W. Travers, D. Hughes Charles, J. R. Stratton, M.P., Mayor Rush, Judge Huycke, G. C. Wainwright, Lt.-Col. MacNachten, T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P., Ald. Gillespie, Dr. Greer, B. Lastar, R. M. Glover, R. G. Kingan, H. C. Winch, E. F. Mason, Warden R. N. Scott, J. E. Belcher, J. Green, Ald. Turner, W. A. Richardson, Ald. Morgan, W. R. G. Higgins, R. Ruddy, K.C., R. M. Waddell, Ed. M. Elliott, M. Comstock, A. P. MacLean, J. H. Burnham, E. S. Clarry, W. H. Belding, W. G. Morrow, City Clerk Armstrong, W. H. Hill, W. R. Morris, County Crown Attorney R. E. Wood, A. E. Dixon, James R. Bell, D. Belleghem, V. J. Eastwood, George K. Martin, T. D. MacGregor, G. N. Gordon, W. S. Davidson, W. McIlroy, John Crane and W. H. Denham.

THE TOAST LIST.

"The King" was the first toast and his Majesty's health was patriotically drunk. "The Parliament of Canada and the Legislative Assembly of Ontario" brought forth well expressed responses from Mr. J. R. Stratton, M.P., and Mr. T. E. Bradburn, M.P.P.

Mr. Stratton in responding said he was not present for the purpose of particularly discussing the advantages or disadvantages of parliamentary rule in Canada. There was another object in view and he asked that the gathering pardon him if he dropped the subject of the toast and said something about the guest.

Mr. Stratton spoke in high praise of Mr. Roger's qualities as a citizen and what he had done as a mayor and a resident of Peterborough.

The latter was about to leave and go to a sister town. Mr. Stratton spoke of the high regard Mr. Roger had for fair dealing and knew he would mete out justice in office of junior judge of Durham and Northumberland. Cobourg was about to receive one of the best citizens of a neighboring town. Mr. Stratton's remarks were received with much applause.

Mr. Bradburn also dwelt on the splendid citizenship of Judge Roger. He went to school with Judge Roger and knew him intimately and respected him.

Mr. R. Fair, secretary of the committee of Management, read letters of regret from Judge Benson of Port Hope, Sheriff Proctor, of Port Hope and Ald. Phelan, chairman of the local Board of Works, who were unable to be present at the banquet.

Mr. McIlroy favored the gathering with "Sweet Adeline" with a chorus joining in the refrain.

OUR GUEST.

Mayor Rush's announcement of the toast to "Our Guest" was greeted with prolonged applause.

MAYOR'S ADDRESS

"It is now my pleasant duty to propose the toast of 'Our Guest,' his Honor, the junior judge of the counties of Northumberland and Durham," said his Worship. "It is difficult for us despite his added dignity of position to speak of Mr. Roger in any skilled terms of title, for we have known him so long and so familiarly that it comes much more natural to speak of him by his well-known first name, or even by his as well known initials, than by any formal address or title. Born here, brought up here, educated here, and living here all his life, Mr. Roger is essentially one of us. He is not only a fellow-citizen of Peterborough, he is a neighbor, a familiar, cordially respected and beloved friend, and to speak of such a friend on a formal occasion, when perhaps a certain amount of dignified formality is looked for, is not easy. We feel more like using the familiar terms that we are accustomed to in our daily intercourse with him, and saying that we congratulate you on the deserved recognition of your abilities and good qualities by the government, and we congratulate our neighboring municipalities in having a good judge sent to them. We would be pleased in seeing any of our good citizens promoted by the government of the country to a place of responsibility and prominence, and the pleasure is greatly enhanced when the good citizen is a life-long, intimate friend, as Mr. Roger is to the most of us. The position of judge is certainly one of responsibility. It requires knowledge of the law, a spirit of fair-dealing, and a love for right, truth and justice, and when with these qualities are combined a naturally good judgment, we have such a judge as we always like to see on a bench. We who know Mr. Roger so well know that he has these qualities—that no one has a stronger desire for fair and square dealing, or a deeper love for truth and justice, we know that his knowledge of the law and his good judgment will enable him to give effect to his desire to deal justly, and that he will be a judge whose decisions will command respect, whose character will win esteem and whose disposition and deportment will draw to him friends who will be staunch ones but who will, we hope, never displace the friends he will leave here. Mr. Roger has not only lived in this community all his life, but has served the city well. He has given good service in his profession, but in addition as an alderman he has given his time and ability to forward the city's best interests, and as an active member and elder of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, to which he belongs, the church of his fathers—I came near saying the church of his father—he has done much towards serving the ideals of the people. Mr Roger's father, the late Rev. J. M. Roger, was a pioneer Presbyterian clergyman here, and his son has assisted to carry on the good work his highly esteemed father helped to establish. Mr. Roger was also one of the founders of the Young Men's Christian Association, and has always taken a deep interest in that excellent work for the uplifting of young men, being at the present time a director and trustee of that institution.

"In the lighter affairs of life our friend was at one time deeply interested, and many of us recall with a glow of pride the enthusiasm which the exploits of the famous four-oared crew, of which he was a member, aroused in Peterborough, and recollect the share we all felt in its triumphs. Mr. Roger's influence will be missed in Peterborough. He has been to a great many of us a good friend, and at all times a good citizen, and while the citizens regret his departure from the city, Judge Roger carries with him the respect and esteem and the very heartiest good wishes of all. Gentlemen, may I ask you to join me in proposing the good health, success and happiness of the guest of the evening, his Honor, Judge Roger."

Judge Roger when he arose to respond was most enthusiastically received. He stated that there was a time in all our lives in which we wished it was possible for us to express our feelings in appropriate terms.

He had landed in Peterborough in the year in which it was incorporated and had lived here ever since. He had helped to welcome the King and was pleased to renew his Majesty's acquaintance this year in London. While the King did not recognise him Judge Roger jocularly remarked that he recognized the King and joined heartily in the very hearty cheer that was given for the Sovereign.

The guest of the evening stated he could not find words sufficient to express his appreciation and hoped he would prove as good a citizen of Cobourg as he had been made out to be of Peterborough. He congratulated Judge Huycke in coming here and said that during the latter's association with the members of the bar of Peterborough he was certain that the new judge would find it one of sincere pleasure. In the towns where Judge Huycke was known he was spoken of in the very highest terms and he would be a most welcome citizen of Peterborough.

In conclusion Judge Roger remarked that the references of the evening had been so complimentary to him that he could not hope to live up to them. A tumult of applause was evoked by Judge Roger's reply to the toast in his honor.

Mr. W. McIlroy sang "Love's Old Sweet Song" in splendid voice and for an encore gave "Loch Lomond."

THE BENCH AND LEARNED PROFESSIONS.

Dr. Morrison, in an eloquent speech, proposed the toast to the Bench and Bar and Learned Professions. In commencing his remarks he said that as Canadians we were proud of the men in our judiciary. They were men without fear and without reproach. As such we honored them and looked up to them. We owed the Government a good deal for its thoughtfulness in elevating such capable and just men to the Bench.

The speaker welcomed Judge Huycke to Peterborough, and complimented Judge Roger on his promotion from the Bar to the Bench. He said he would refrain from saying much concerning the local members of the Bar, as they were all well known and esteemed.

Judge Huycke said he appreciated very much the flattering way in which the toast had been honored, and spoke in touching terms of the late Judge Weller. The deceased was a gentleman of whom everyone spoke well in his lifetime, and doubly well of him now that he had passed away.

The speaker held Judge Roger in the highest respect and esteem. He could say that the fame of Judge Roger had preceded him into the united counties of Durham and Northumberland. He was assured of a most hearty and enthusiastic welcome to Cobourg.

Judge Huycke said that as he could not give words of experience as a member of the Ontario Bench, he felt inclined to be silent. He regretted his departure from the Bar, where he had labored and fought, but towards the members of which he entertained the most cordial feelings.

He no longer had the privilege of responding to "The Bar," but in years to come he might have the privilege of replying to the toast of "The Bench," but in view of the illustrious figures who had adorned it, he felt entirely unable to do so.

There was a great truth in the statement that British judges represent the Crown.

The speaker dwelt on the justice and perfection of the British courts. Some had said that in days gone by justice was the patrimony of the rich, and if that was so it was now the inheritance of the poor. He would endeavor to uphold the traditions of the Bench as far as his ability would allow him. He thanked the assembly very much for the kindly way in which the toast had been proposed, and the kindly attitude toward him of the speakers at the banquet. (Loud applause.)

Mr. Poussette said that he represented the Bar for that night, at any rate. The Bar was a profession first, last and always. A lawyer was a man who must always work for and with his fellow men. They were the agents of others. They did their work always with a sense of the duty which they owed to their clients. There were all kinds of duties to be done—good, bad and indifferent—but the legal practitioners always tried to do the best they could and to do it often.

In connection with the departure of Mr. Roger, Mr. Poussette said he was sorry to lose him. They had always been warm friends and had spent much time together. He congratulated him on his promotion. He had done well as mayor of the town in former years, and had taken a great deal of interest in many branches of useful endeavor.

Mr. Poussette congratulated Judge Huycke and welcomed him to this city. Not only would he be an ornament to the Bench, but would also be a citizen of the highest type.

Mr. W. H. Belding favored the audience with a well-rendered vocal solo, "Boys of the Old Brigade."

Dr. Greer, who responded to the toast on behalf of the medical profession, said that he considered it to be a great honor to be present and

A ROW IN SWEDEN NEXT HUNDRED THOUSAND IDLE

Socialists Are Taking Hold of Labor War and Trying to Make it Revolutionary in Character—A State of Siege a First Sign of Trouble.

Stockholm, Aug. 4.—A labor war throughout Sweden, scheduled to begin to-day, threatens to develop in Stockholm into something approaching a miniature revolution.

The trouble will be enormously aggravated by the present general strike and lockout.

The members of the Young Socialists party are striving to give the movement a revolutionary character and the Government, warned that a political campaign is going on at the same time, has taken steps to nip expected disorders in the bud.

The authorities have decided, at the first signs of insurrection, to declare Stockholm in a state of siege. Soldiers are being quartered in different sections of the city and suburbs, and the entire standing army of Sweden is ready for eventualities.

King Gustave has summoned the members of Parliament to Stockholm, and a special session of the Rigsdag is expected.

Great consternation prevails in the capital at these unexpected and dangerous developments in the situation. A civil guard corps is being organized for the protection of property, and the banks are closed and carefully guarded. All the ferries running out of Stockholm have ceased operations, and the large steamers engaged in the summer in carrying visitors and residents to the seaside resorts in the Archipelago have suddenly stopped running, discharged their crews, and are being laid up for the winter. This summer traffic is usually continued until the month of October.

It is expected that the present total of about 100,000 idle workmen will be largely increased by to-morrow.

It is anticipated also that the cab and street car services in Stockholm will stop running Wednesday, and arrangements are being made to-day to run the waterworks and the electric light plants by soldiers.

The bridges leading to the islands adjacent to Stockholm are closely guarded. Many stores already have been closed and no milk is being delivered in the city. The sale of spirits, beer and wine has been prohibited in both shops and restaurants.

The labor conflict that is at the bottom of this trouble originated in a dispute over wages in the woollen and cotton industries. In the beginning 13,000 men were locked out and other industries since have become involved, until to-day the employers' federation declared a lockout of the iron foundry hands, numbering about 30,000 men. A total of 80,000 men were reported locked out yesterday.

The employes of the Stockholm municipality and the state telegraph linemen have joined the strike movement, but the railwaymen's union have declined to do so.

TROOPS TO STAY ALL WINTER STRIKE TALK PREVALENT

Hon. Mackenzie King Said to be Collecting Evidence Against U.M.W. Preparatory to Prosecuting for Infraction of Lemieux Act.

Glace Bay, N.S., Aug. 4.—It was currently reported yesterday morning that the Department of Militia had completed arrangements with the Dominion Coal Co. for the purchase or lease of a piece of land at Glace Bay, where it is intended to erect a barracks for a company of soldiers, so that they can stay here all winter.

It was reported at strike headquarters yesterday morning that Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, is collecting information in connection with the strike of the laborers at Inverness with a view of prosecuting officers of the U.M.W. for unlawfully ordering a strike or committing a violation of the Lemieux Act. It is claimed that the men were called out before the board of investigation made and inquiries into the trouble that existed.

Springhill Mines.

Springhill, N.S., Aug. 4.—Strike talk has been prevalent to a certain extent among the Springhill miners for some time past. The award of the conciliation board, of which Judge Longley was chairman, is claimed by the men to be couched in indefinite terms. There is one recommendation of the board which the employes are disposed to accept. This is with respect to fines and docking, though it is less favorable than they had asked for.

With respect to recognition of the union, the board seems to have left that an open question and this tends to bring about an acute feeling. The men say they will insist on the demand for recognition. On the other hand, it is claimed the company has asserted that recognition of the United Mine Workers will never be granted.

There was an immense private meeting of the men of the U.M.W. held last night. Vice-President McCulloch and District President McDougall made carefully prepared speeches. McCulloch said he did not come here to advise the Springhill men to strike, but left that matter wholly in the hands of the local union. The whole resources of the U.M.W. would be at their back. He complained bitterly of the despotism on the part of the troops in turning back the procession the other day at Glace Bay.

He also said the prospects for the U.M.W. winning out in the fight could not be brighter.

CREDENTIALS FOR CANADIAN AGENTS

TIMELY SERMON TO DISORDERLY

Young Man Received a Short and Forcible Talk From the Magistrate This Morning

Magistrate Dumble did not spare a drunk and disorderly at the police court this morning when he denounced the actions of the defendant in very forcible terms. He pointed out the influence liquor would have on the young man's life in the future if he still persisted in using it, and asked him to use a little common sense and not let the habit get the better of him. The sermon was probably more effective in this particular case than a fine.

LATE NEWS FROM MANY LOCALITIES

Young Bather Drowned.

Toronto, Aug. 4.—John O'Connell, aged 15, an inmate of St. John's Industrial School, was drowned yesterday afternoon while bathing in the lake at Victoria Park.

About sixty of the boys of the institution, accompanied by some of the teachers, were in the lake. O'Connell, who was a good swimmer, was about 100 yards out, when he was seized with cramps, and making an outcry, some of his fellows got hold of him and brought him part of the way to shore. They became exhausted and were compelled to swim to shore.

Unconscious From Bee Sting.

St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 4.—Miss Lizzie Sawyers of this city has been unconscious 12 hours as the result of having been stung by a bee while picking fruit near Maryville. Her tongue and throat have swollen to an abnormal degree, rendering her speechless and causing her great difficulty in breathing. Her entire body has assumed a livid hue. This is her third similar experience, although the others were not so severe.

Canada Will Control Fleet.

London, Aug. 4.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Speaking to the Canadian Associated Press, with reference to The Times' suggestion that a cruiser squadron on the Pacific be established by Canada, Hon. L. P. Brodeur was emphatic in asserting that if it aimed at the formation of an imperial squadron to be controlled by the admiralty, it was losing time to suggest it, as Canada "will never consent to such control."

Toronto Girl Leads Strike.

St. John, N.B., Aug. 4.—Through the action of U.S. officials here, Mrs. Gallant, an elderly woman, a native of Summerside, P.E.I., but for twenty-four years resident in Boston, may be prevented from returning to her relatives in Boston.

The woman had been visiting in Summerside and on her way back to Boston was stopped here by the U.S. immigration officials as she was penniless. Relatives in Boston sent $60 to her, but through an attack of rheumatism, she is now helpless and U.S. officials refuse to allow her to proceed until her relatives file a $500 bond that she will not become a public charge. This, she claims, they are unable to do.

MICKEY IONS SURRENDERS

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Mickey Ions, the lacrosse player, gave himself up to Detective Nat Guthrie yesterday afternoon when he learned that there was a warrant out for his arrest, on a charge of committing an aggravated assault on George Kalls during the lacrosse match between the Torontos and Tecumsehs on civic holiday.

He was allowed out on his own bail of $200 and an added $100 by Chas. Querrie, manager of the Tecumsehs.

The case will be called in the Police Court to-day. Ions, who is the goalkeeper of the Tecumsehs, deliberately kicked Kalls in the face while the latter was tying his shoe strings.

DON JAIME STANDS ASIDE

Spanish Pretender Will Not Countenance Revolution

Vienna, Aug. 4.—Don Jaime, the pretender to the Spanish throne, declares in an interview here that he has no intention of interfering in the present crisis in Spain and that his retirement to Frohdorf, in Lower Austria, far from the Spanish frontier, is proof of his peaceful purposes.

DON JAIME.

"The Carlist party is a party of order," said Don Jaime. "I never will take upon myself to bring an entire people into danger for my own ends. Never will I lead Spaniard against Spaniard. Should I return to Spain at the head of an army it will be only to restore order. This might happen should the revolutionaries drive out King Alfonso, or the welfare of the country require it. The popularity of King Alfonso is declining through no fault of his own and Queen Victoria is certainly less liked than the King. Spaniards dread foreign influence; Victoria has remained a stranger too long, and the people never will forgive her."

Two Thousand Were Killed.

With the exception of the cruisers forming the escort of the Russian Emperor, the great fleet that was here on Monday has dispersed and the roadstead remains in the possession of the racing yachts, assembled for the regatta.

A SCARCITY OF TEACHERS

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Hon. Dr. Pyne, Minister of Education, has received from one of his inspectors a letter to the following effect:

"As the time approaches for the re-opening of the rural schools, it becomes necessary to draw attention once more to the available supply of teachers for vacancies occurring at this season. I may say that from the experience of a number of trustee boards, who have been advertising for teachers possessing the legal qualifications, it appears that no one so qualified can be secured for any salary less than $400."

Officers Help Aviators.

Petawawa Camp, Aug. 4.—Officers of Canadian permanent force are evincing enthusiastic interest in the science of aviation, and willing hands are assisting in assembling the various parts of "Baddeck No. 1."

Lisbon, Aug. 4.—Free thinkers from all parts of Portugal, represented by a Liberal committee, yesterday presented to the Cortes a petition for the suppression of the religious orders in Portugal and the abrogation of the existing laws against freedom of conscience. The committee was accompanied to the Houses of Parliament by an immense crowd. Among other things the petitioners asked the abrogation of the recent law permitting religious associations to acquire landed property.

Senor Camacho moved the consideration of the subject, and when the motion was voted down, the galleries broke out in protestation. The deputies engaged in a struggle in which desks and chairs were overturned and the chamber had to be cleared twice.

HIS RESCUER WAS NEARLY DROWNED

Kingston, Aug. 4.—In an effort to save a drowning lad at Brooklyn, N.Y., Dr. Harry Hunter, son of Justice of the Peace George Hunter, came within an ace of losing his life.

The lad took cramps and Hunter went in after him. His clothes held him down, and just as he was about to pull out the lad, his feet got fast in the mud and he, himself, fell face downwards. # ENGLAND MUST CONTROL G.T.R.

Montreal, Aug. 4.—"Financial control of the G.T.R. must remain on the other side," declared Sir Charles Rivers-Wilson, president of the road, in an interview here yesterday morning. British directors had the greatest confidence in General Manager Hays, and the management was left practically in his hands, but financial control was another matter. Canadian directors with no great financial interests at stake would be liable to be lavish with the company's money, and such a state of affairs, said Sir Charles, would be detrimental to any road.

Sir Charles said that the G.T. could make no alliance with the Allans or any other steamship company till their lines were completed.

ANDREW McKELVIE COMMITTED IS CHARGED WITH BRIBERY

Director in Temiskaming & Hudson Bay Mining Co. is Arraigned on a Charge of Giving J. Piche Money to Withhold Evidence in Suit.

Haileybury, Aug. 4.—Andrew McKelvie, a director in the Temiskaming & Hudson Bay Mining Co., prominent in the Cobalt district, was yesterday committed for trial by Magistrate Atkinson on a charge of having bribed John Piche to leave the country and avoid giving evidence in a suit intended to prove that the company's claim had been "blanketted."

Two witnesses, Mrs. Elizabeth Burwash and her brother John Piche swore that McKelvie had given him (Piche) $1,000, and 100 shares of the company's stock to disappear.

Magistrate Atkinson in giving the decision said, "It is better that I should commit Mr. McKelvie for trial, as in a higher court his innocence, if he is innocent, can be established, whereas, if I were to let the matter drop now, there always would be more or less doubt in regard to his sending Mrs. Burwash (Piche's sister), out west."

There was a large attendance in the magistrate's court yesterday, and intense interest was manifested. A. G. Slaght appeared for Mr. McKelvie. Crown Attorney Browning prosecuted. Mr. Slaght objected that, as the alleged offence occurred three years ago, the prosecution was debarred. He was overruled.

Mrs. Burwash swore that relations between the company and Piche, it's original prospector, became strained on account of the filing of certain affidavits. She then became the agent through which Piche and McKelvie got together and arranged the terms, $1,000 cash, and one hundred shares of stock.

She had seen McKelvie and then wired for her brother. She had not taken part in the conversation, as the men were inclined to be quarrelsome.

"McKelvie wanted to come to a settlement and my brother would not listen to him," she said. Asked to relate what had been said, she could not remember, nor whether an agreement was reached that night. She had seen McKelvie and demanded $2,000 and the stock, but McKelvie had only agreed to $200 cash and a check for $800 on the Union Bank, in addition to the stock, which was made out in her name. She said she sent the proceeds to her brother in the west. The check had been signed by one McCamus, payable to her.

She also said that she got $200 from McKelvie later to go out west and tell Piche there was a warrant out for his arrest, and have him keep out of the way.

After an hour and a half Piche was called. He was asked: "Are you the man who made the discoveries on the Hudson Bay?" and replied "Yes."

During cross-examination Piche said he knew he was to be the chief witness in the case of the Attorney-General vs. Thompson, and said that William Pinkerton of the law firm of Pinkerton, Clute & Bartram, Toronto, was dickering with him for the purpose of having him withhold certain evidence which he had. Piche said he was going to leave the country, anyway, as he was afraid of Pinkerton, as the former had got him to sign a paper that he had not read, and he also did not want to go on on the stand against the company and without evidence.

Mr. Browning: "Tell me again the exact reason for your leaving."

Piche: "It was because I expected to get something out of the hundred shares given to Mrs. Burwash, and at the same time, that I would not appear in court concerning the pending suits."

Mr. Slaght, in arguing for a dismissal, said that as no date had ever been fixed for the Attorney-General's action against the company, it could not be said that there was any occasion on which Piche was to appear as a witness, nor had he ever been subpoenaed. Hence Piche had been perfectly free to go where he pleased. He declared Piche had not been in concealment and charged that Piche and his sister were "accomplices up to the hilt."

THE SPAIN OF TO-DAY

Spain is a confederated gathering of provinces. Catalonia, Arragon, Castile, etc., are as unlike each other in racial characteristics and ambitions as Hungary and Austria. The Moors occupied Southern Spain for so long that they, too, felt a certain impress upon that portion of the peninsula. The Catalonians, in whose province the present farcicious uprising has occurred, are the most turbulent of all. They will not submit to the dictation of others, or even of themselves. The church and state are objects of hatred to them. They appear to be natural anarchists. The shutting-up of nuns in convents and the burning of them despite their screams and prayers is mere vengeance and common savagery. It is true, the Catalonians point to the burnings of the Inquisition, but that is no excuse. Because men burn and slay in the name of religion, that is no excuse for doing it in the name of humanity. Some people and some races desire freedom in order that they may give reins to their passions. Against them always will be arrayed, necessarily, the quiet forces that make for the more sane and kindly advancement of the world. It is plain also that the human race can emerge from primeval childhood and savagery only by being thrown upon its own resources. The system of tutelage has not worked well anywhere. The sense of manhood which prompts men to be men demands recognition and respect. To disregard it provokes dissatisfaction, and ultimately explosions of the most violent character. The character of mankind is not submissive. It is developed by the natural forces arrayed against it, and that development unless modified by the cultivation of science, art and moral philosophy, manifests itself in seismic disturbances. There is also a disposition to revert to the animal. The fury of the wolf is without one redeeming feature. Yet it seems to be the basic characteristic of the whole human race, varied in degree and time. It would appear also that those who claim to rule by right divine must justify the claim by ruling successfully as well, or else the results will betray them, if we are to judge, as the Bible bids us, from the fruits. It is a great mystery and will continue so until, in the far future, the elemental savagery of the cave-man has worked itself out by some means not yet visible to the ordinary spectator. Worldly or material prosperity does not produce the desired effect, rather the reverse It is at such times that nations fall into ruin and disappear, as did Babylonia, Rome, and Spain herself. The prevalence of the war spirit is a standing denial of the claims of optimists who are at the bottom of much of the prevailing trouble, since they cry "Peace!" when there is really no peace.

Havelock, Aug. 2.—Havelock's taxation rate for 1909 will be 27 mills, making a total of $9,450 in taxes, the assessment for the village this year being $350,000. Hundreds of persons are baptized publicly in the river every day, and the converts are sleeping out in the open air on the farm of one of the leaders.

VEGETABLES ALL WINTER.

Huge Market Garden Under Glass Planned in Quebec.

Not very far in the future—perhaps next year—Montreal will be supplied in the winter time with green vegetables at summer prices. It will be somewhat of a surprise to have young onions and radishes on the table during January, and fresh lettuce will be a striking contrast against the snow. All this is going to happen, and more. These greens will be grown in Quebec. Right in the County of Rouville a farm is in process of construction. It is tucked away in the shelter of the several mountains of Rougemont, St. Hilaire, and Abbotsford. To be more exact, it lies in a nook behind Rougemont. It is called Red Mountain.

There is a perceptible difference of atmosphere at Rougemont. It is nearly always dead calm. This is explained as due to the hills' shelter. In the hollow where the farm lies it is even warmer.

When visited recently the full light of the morning sun was reflected from the glass of a huge hot-house. It covered an acre of ground, and at one end was a brick structure with a big chimney. That is where the heat was generated. In the interior there was a smell of fresh earth. Vegetables were sprouting all about. The farm under glass is divided into sections, eleven in all, and on each section there is something different growing.

Lettuce had the advantage of space. That is because lettuce finds a better market in Montreal than anything else. The Boston lettuce, it seems, is a constant puzzle to the farm proprietors. It is imported to Montreal at a high rate of duty, and it beats most kinds of local growths. However, next year Cos lettuce, the pride of English market-gardeners, will be produced for the Montreal table, and there will be no chance for Boston competition.

Parsley flourishes in the rich black earth, and so does asparagus, young onions, and radishes. The vegetables cover 36,000 square feet of ground, and that ground is entirely protected by glass. A maze of pipes maintain an even summer temperature. Thus several crops of light green vegetables can be raised from the fine black soil during the season when the market is usually dead. The fame of this little glass farm reached the ears of the Minister of Agriculture. He was so impressed with the importance of the venture that he offered to pay half the labor expenses of the place on condition that farmers' sons were taken in as pupils. This system prevails.

Before the snows of next winter there will have been added five more acres of glass covering to the land. The farm will then begin to meet the demand in Montreal for green stuffs during the winter; it will also begin to compete successfully with imported vegetables, such as the Boston lettuce. The company that is responsible for this little industry behind Rougemont is composed of the principal fruit men of Montreal. They wish to localize fruit and vegetable growing; they declare that fruit farming is shamefully neglected in the province of Quebec.

Self Denial.

Teacher—What do you understand by the words "self denial?" Pupil—It is when some one comes to borrow money from father and he says he is not at home.

Bill Was Dead Slow.

"Didn't I tell you that Bill was too slow to live?"

"Why, what's 'e bin an' done now?"

"He's gone and got run over by a hearse!"—New York Journal.

Knew When to Stop.

The shrewd lawyer knows when to stop questioning, and none is more shrewd than the one who, conducting a case of bribery, questioned a man the other day who is rated high in the business world.

"Have you yourself ever refused a bribe?" he asked.

"No, but"—

"That is all," said the lawyer.

At a later time he was asked why he had dismissed the witness so soon.

"Because," he replied, "I knew by the 'but' that he was going to tell me no one had ever attempted to bribe him."

Here is a New Kind of Soap

You are now using some soap and naturally think it is good. But here is a kind that is different from any you know—one that has taken us 43 years to perfect.

Try one cake and compare it with what you now use. We welcome such a test as this for we know in advance the result. You will never go back to the other kind. Here is a soap made from vegetable oil pure enough to use on your table. We pay far more for this in France than we might pay. So we get only the best.

Cocoanut oil from the isle of Ceylon is brought over 12,000 miles and mixed with the olive oil. Then both are boiled doubly long.

After this we mill them by our own special process. We have scoured the best factories of England, France and Austria for almost half a century to perfect this process. We have combined the best ideas of foreign lands with our own improvements to attain perfection.

When milled, the soap falls like flakes of snow into enormous bins and is then crushed under a weight of 30 tons to press out the moisture. Then it passes through granite rollers and comes out in miles of silky ribbon.

After being dried eight times it is pressed into cakes and is simply perfect soap. It lathers into a rich creamy foam and wears as thin as a wafer. It leaves the skin rosy and pink like an infant's. So we call it Infants' Delight.

The perfume is dainty and pure—it suggests only the delicate scent of the roses. Use one cake today and see what a wonderful difference there can be in soap.

How to Shampoo

Place a pint of warm water on the stove and shave up a cake of Infants' Delight. Let it simmer until the soap is dissolved. Then pour into a wide jar to cool into jelly. Clean the hair with a brush, wet it with warm water, and rub the soap jelly into the scalp thoroughly. Rinse off the thick lather and dry the hair by rubbing and fanning with a towel. This will leave the hair soft, shiny and lustrous.

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

"Do you know why I came?" he asked.

Lillian looked up innocently. "It's so hard to be certain of anything in this world," she said. "But one is always at liberty to guess."

Again he was perplexed. Her attitude was not quite the attitude of one who controls the game, and yet— He looked at her with a puzzled scrutiny. Women for him had always spelled the incomprehensible. He was at his best, his strongest, his surest, in the presence of men. Feeling his disadvantage, yet determined to gain his end, he made a last attempt.

"How did you amuse yourself at Grosvenor square this morning before Eve came to you?" he asked. The effort was awkwardly blunt, but it was direct.

Lillian was buttoning her glove. She did not raise her head as he spoke, but her fingers paused in their task. For a second she remained motionless; then she looked up slowly.

"Oh," she said sweetly, "so I was right in my guess? You did come to find out whether I sat in the morning room with my hands in my lap or wandered about in search of entertainment?"

Loder colored with annoyance and apprehension. Every look, every tone, of Lillian's was distasteful to him. No microscope could have revealed her more fully to him than did his own eyesight. But it was not the moment for personal antipathies; there were other interests than his own at stake. With new resolution he returned her glance.

"Then I must still ask my first question. Why did you say, 'I thought it would be you?'" His gaze was direct—so direct that it disconcerted her. She laughed a little uneasily.

"Because I knew."

"How did you know?"

"Because"— she began; then again she laughed. "Because," she added quickly, as if moved by a fresh impulse, "Jack Chilcote made it very obvious to any one who was in his morning room at 12 o'clock today that it would be you and not he who would be found filling his place this afternoon. It's all very well to talk about honor, but when one walks into an empty room and sees a telegram as long as a letter open on a bureau"—

But her sentence was never finished. Loder had heard what he came to hear. Any confession she might have to offer was of no moment in his eyes.

"My dear girl," he broke in brusquely, "don't trouble. I should make a most unsatisfactory father confessor." He spoke quickly. His color was still high, but not of annoyance. His suspense was transformed into unpleasant certainty, but the exchange left him surer of himself. His perplexity had dropped to a quiet sense of self reliance. His paramount desire was for solitude in which to prepare for the task that lay before him—the most congenial task the world possessed—the unraveling of Chilcote's tangled skeins. Looking into Lillian's eyes, he smiled. "Goodby," he said, holding out his hand. "I think we've finished—for today."

She slowly extended her fingers. Her expression and attitude were slightly puzzled — a puzzlement that was either spontaneous or singularly well assumed. As their hands touched she smiled again.

"Will you drop in at the Arcadian tonight?" she asked. "It's the dramatized version of 'Other Men's Shoes.' The temptation to make you see it was too irresistible—as you know."

There was a pause while she waited for his answer, her head inclined to one side, her green eyes gleaming.

Loder, conscious of her regard, hesitated for a moment. Then his face cleared. "Right!" he said slowly. "The Arcadian tonight!"

CHAPTER XXIX.

LODER'S frame of mind as he left Cadogan gardens was peculiar. Once more he was living in the present—the forceful, exhilarating present, and the knowledge braced him. Upon one point his mind was satisfied. Lillian Astrupp had found the telegram, and it remained to him to render her find valueless. How he proposed to do this, how he proposed to come out triumphant in face of such a situation, was a matter that as yet was shapeless in his mind; nevertheless the danger, the sense of impending conflict, had a savor of life after the inaction of the day and night just passed. Chilcote in his weakness and his entanglement had turned to him, and he in his strength and capacity had responded to the appeal.

His step was firm and his bearing assured as he turned into Grosvenor square and walked toward the familiar house.

The habit of self deceit is as insidious and tenacious as any vice. For one moment on the night of his great speech as he leaned out of Chilcote's carriage and met Chilcote's eyes Loder had seen himself and under the shock of revelation had taken decisive action. But in the hours subsequent to that action the plausible, inner voice had whispered unceasingly, soothing his wounded self esteem, rebuilding stone by stone the temple of his egotism, until at last when Chilcote, panic stricken at his own action, had burst into his rooms ready to plead or to coerce he had found no need for either coercion or entreaty. By a power more subtle and effective than any at his command Loder had been prepared for his coming—unconsciously ready with an acquiescence before his appeal had been made. It was the fruit of this preparation, the inevitable outcome of it, that strengthened his step and steadied his hand as he mounted the steps and opened the hall door of Chilcote's house on that eventful afternoon.

The dignity, the air of quiet solidity, impressed him as it never failed to do, as he crossed the large hall and ascended the stairs—the same stairs that he had passed down almost as an outcast not so many hours before. He was filled with the sense of things regained. Belief in his own star lifted him, as it had done a hundred times before in these same surroundings.

He quickened his steps as the sensation came to him. Then, reaching the head of the stairs, he turned directly toward Eve's sitting room and, gaining the door, knocked. The strength of his eagerness, the quick beating of his pulse as he waited for a response, surprised him. He had told himself many times that his passion, however strong, would never again conquer as it had done two nights ago, and the fact that he had come thus candidly to Eve's room was to his mind a proof that temptation could be dared. Nevertheless there was something disconcerting to a strong man in this merely physical perturbation, and when Eve's voice came to him, giving permission to enter, he paused for an instant to steady himself. Then, with sudden decision, he opened the door and walked into the room.

The blinds were partly drawn, there was a scent of violets in the air, and a fire glowed warmly in the grate. He noted these things carefully, telling himself that a man should always be alertly sensible of his surroundings. Then all at once the nice balancing of detail suddenly gave way. He forgot everything but the one circumstance that Eve was standing in the window, her back to the light, her face toward him. With his pulses beating faster and an unsteady sensation in his brain, he moved forward, holding out his hand.

"Eve"— he said below his breath.

But Eve remained motionless. As he came into the room she had glanced at him—a glance of quick, searching question, then with equal suddenness she had averted her eyes. As he drew close to her now she remained immovable.

"Eve"— he said again. "I wanted to see you—I wanted to explain about yesterday and about this morning." He paused, suddenly disturbed. The full remembrance of the scene in the brougham had surged up at sight of her—had risen a fierce, unquenchable recollection. "Eve"— he began again in a new, abrupt tone.

And then it was that Eve showed herself in a fresh light. From his entrance into the room she had stayed motionless, save for her first glance of acute inquiry, but now her demeanor changed. For almost the first time in Loder's knowledge of her the vitality and force that he had vaguely apprehended below her quiet, serene exterior sprang up like a flame within whose radius things are illuminated. With a quick gesture, she turned toward him, her warm color deepening, her eyes suddenly alight.

"I understand," she said—"I understand. Don't try to explain. Can't you see that it's enough to—to see you as you are"—

Loder was surprised. Remembering their last passionate scene and the damper Chilcote's subsequent presence must inevitably have cast upon it, he had expected to be doubtfully received but the reality of the reception left him bewildered. Eve's manner was not that of the ill used wife. Its vehemence, its note of desire and deprecation, were more suggestive of his own ardent seizing of the present as distinguished from past or future. With an odd sense of confusion he turned to her afresh.

"Then I am forgiven?" he said. And unconsciously as he moved nearer he touched her arm.

At his touch she started. All the yielding sweetness, all the submission, that had marked her two nights ago was gone. In its place she was possessed by a curious excitement that stirred while it perplexed.

Loder, moved by the sensation, took another step forward. "Then I am forgiven?" he repeated more softly.

Her face was averted as he spoke, but he felt her arm quiver, and when at last she lifted her head their eyes met. Neither spoke, but in an instant Loder's arms were around her.

For a long silent space they stood holding each other closely. Then, with a sharp movement, Eve freed herself. Her color was still high, her eyes still peculiarly bright, but the bunch of violets she had worn in her belt had fallen to the ground.

"John," she said quickly, but on the word her breath caught. With a touch of nervousness she stooped to pick up the flowers.

Loder noticed both voice and gesture. "What is it?" he said. "What were you going to say?"

But she made no answer. For a second longer she searched for the violets, then as he bent to assist her she stood up quickly and laughed—a shaky, embarrassed laugh.

"How absurd and nervous I am!" she exclaimed. "Like a schoolgirl instead of a woman of twenty-four. You must help me to be sensible." Her cheeks still burned, her manner was still excited, like one who holds an emotion or an impulse at bay.

"Then I am forgiven?" he said.

Loder looked at her uncertainly. "Eve"— he began afresh with his odd, characteristic perseverance, but she instantly checked him. There was a finality, a faint suggestion of fear, in her protest.

"Don't!" she said. "Don't! I don't want explanations. I want to—to enjoy the moment without having things analysed or smoothed away. Can't you understand? Can't you see that I'm wonderfully, terribly happy to—to have you—as you are!" Again her voice broke—a break that might have been a laugh or a sob.

The sound was an emotional crisis, as such a sound invariably is. It arrested and steadied her. For a moment she stood absolutely still, then with something very closely resembling her old repose of manner she stooped again and quietly picked up the flowers still lying at her feet.

"Now," she said quietly, "I must say what I've wanted to say all along. How does it feel to be a great man?" Her manner was controlled, she looked at him evenly and directly; save for the faint vibration in her voice there was nothing to indicate the tumult of a moment ago.

But Loder was still uncertain. He caught her hand, his eyes searching hers.

"But Eve"— he began.

Then Eve played the last card in her mysterious game. Laughing quickly and nervously, she freed her hand and laid it over his mouth.

"No!" she said. "Not one word! All this past fortnight has belonged to you; now it's my turn. Today is mine."

CHAPTER XXX.

AND so once again, the woman conquered. Whatever Eve's intentions were, whatever she wished to evade or ward off, she was successful in gaining her end. For more than two hours she kept Loder at her side. There may have been moments in those two hours when the tension was high, when the efforts she made to interest and hold him were somewhat strained. But if this was so it escaped the notice of the one person concerned, for it was long after tea had been served, long after Eve had offered to do penance for her monopoly of him by driving him to Chilcote's club, that Loder realized with any degree of distinctness that it was she and not he who had taken the lead in their interview; that it was she and not he who had bridged the difficult silences and given a fresh direction to dangerous channels of talk. It was long before he recognized this, but it was still longer before he realized the far more potent fact that without any coldness, without any lessening of the subtle consideration she always showed him, she had given him no further opportunity of making love.

Talking continuously, elated with the sense of conflict still to come, he drove with her to the club. Considering that drive in the light of after events, his own frame of mind invariably filled him with incredulity. In the eyes of any sane man his position was not worth an hour's purchase, yet in the blind self confidence of the moment he would not have changed places with Fraide himself. The great song of self was sounding in his ears as he drove through the crowded streets, conscious of the cool, crisp air, of Eve's close presence, of the numberless infinitesimal things that went to make up the value of life. It was this acknowledgment of personality that upheld him—the personality, the power that had carried him unswervingly through eleven colorless years; that had impelled him toward this new career when the new career had first been opened to him; that had hewn a way for him in this fresh existence against colossal odds; the indomitable force that had trampled out Chilcote's footmarks in public life, in private life—in love. It was a triumphant paean that clamored in his ears, something persistent and prophetic, with an undernote of menace—the cry of the human soul that has dared to stand alone.

His glance was keen and bright as he waited for a moment at the carriage door and took Eve's hand before entering the club.

"You're dining out tonight?" he said. His fingers, always tenacious and masterful, continued to hold hers. The compunction that had driven him temporarily toward sacrifice had passed. His pride, his confidence and with them his desire, had flowed back in full measure.

Eve, watching him attentively, paled a little. "Yes," she said, "I'm dining with the Bramfells."

"What time will you get home?" He scarcely realized why he put the question. The song of self still sounded triumphantly, and he responded without reflection.

His eyes held hers, his fingers pressed her hand; the intense mastery of his will passed through her in a sudden sense of fear. Her lips parted in deprecation, but he, closely attentive of her expression, spoke again quickly.

"When can I see you?" he asked very quietly.

Again she was about to speak. She leaned forward, as if some thought long suppressed trembled on her lips, then her courage or her desire failed her. She leaned back, letting her lashes droop over her eyes. "I shall be home at 11," she said below her breath.

Loder dined with Lakeley at Chilcote's club, and so absorbing were the political interests of the hour—the resignation of Sir Robert Sefborough, the king's summoning of Fraide, the probable features of the new ministry—that it was after 9 o'clock when at last he freed himself and drove to the Arcadian theater.

The sound of music came to him as he entered the theater—light, measured music suggestive of tiny streams, toy lambs and painted shepherdesses. It sounded singularly inappropriate to his mood—as inappropriate as the theater itself with its gay gilding, its pale tones of pink and blue. It was the setting of a different world—a world of laughter, light thoughts and shallow impulses, in which he had no part.

It was the interval between the first and second acts. The box was in shadow, and Loder's first impression was of voices and rustling skirts, broken in upon by the murmur of frequent amused laughter. Later, as his eyes grew accustomed to the light, he distinguished the occupants, two women and a man. The man was speaking as he entered, and the story he was relating was evidently interesting from the faint exclamations of question and delight that punctuated it in the listeners' higher, softer voices.

"Ah, here comes the legislator!" exclaimed Leonard Kaine, for it was he who formed the male element in the party.

"The revolutionary, Lennie," Lillian corrected softly. "Bramfell says he has changed the whole face of things." She laughed softly and meaningly as she closed her fan. "So good of you to come, Jack," she added. "Let me introduce you to Miss Esseltyn. I don't think you two have met. This is Mr. Chilcote, Mary—the great, new Mr. Chilcote." Again she laughed.

Loder bowed and moved to the front of the box, nodding to Kaine as he passed.

"It's only for an hour," he explained to Lillian. "I have an appointment for 11."

Grateful to Aylesworth.

An amusing incident took place in the private office of Mr. Aylesworth a few months since. A petitioner for a pardon came from Toronto. If not forty, she was both fair and fat, and she came accompanied by her spiritual adviser—a "clergyman" of a rather peculiar sect. Her petition having been heard and the Minister having replied that he would do what he could to persuade the Governor-General to grant a pardon, the woman fell on her knees, and before Mr. Aylesworth could even guess what she intended, began to kiss his boot and was traveling upwards towards his stomach with every demonstration of wild affection. The mild Minister of Justice was non-plussed for the moment. He strove to drag himself away from her embrace, but in vain, until he ordered the "clergyman" to tell her to stop her foolishness, which that worthy did, at the same time adding:

"Don't mind her, sir! It's only her way of showing her gratitude!"

HUSBAND SUFFERED FROM HALLUCINATIONS WHEN DRUNK

Thought He Saw His Wife and Another Woman's Husband Embracing Each Other—Threatened to Cut His Wife's Throat—Case Was Dismissed.

Evidently the home life of an English couple residing in Aylmer street is anything but a happy one, and as is generally the case, the drinking habits of the husband are responsible for the most of the trouble. Anyway, he was arrested yesterday morning by P.C. Newhall, and at the police court this morning was charged with assaulting his wife.

The circumstances of the affair, as told this morning, are that the husband is a hard drinker, and on many occasions had threatened to kill his wife.

The defendant stated to the magistrate that on Saturday night, about the hour of ten o'clock, he came home, and on going out to the yard in the rear of his home, he found his wife in the arms of another man. He separated them, and the affair so preyed upon his mind that he went out on the booze. He did not remember threatening his wife at any time.

The complainant, in her version of the affair, stated that her hubby suffered from hallucinations when drunk and he had a bad attack Saturday night, as all she had done was to speak to the husband of her next-door neighbor, who, by the way, is sixty years of age. She denied that there had been any embracing. Yesterday morning the defendant had threatened her three times—twice that he would cut her throat and once that he would dash her brains out. Although he had not executed his threats, she did not feel safe, and wanted the court to protect her.

The magistrate expressed a wish that the two interested parties would go home and try to live peacefully in the future, and after he had exacted a promise from the defendant that he would endeavor to treat his wife with more respect, dismissed the case.

WHO KNOWS A FAT SINGER WHO WOULD ROB POOR-BOX

The Detroit News states that a man, who gives the name of O. M. Douglas, has been arrested and brought before Magistrate Jeffries, of Detroit, on the charge of robbing the poor box at a church there. He says he is a professional vocalist, and gives Peterborough, Canada, as his address. Furthermore, he weighs 200 pounds, which makes his offence all the more contemptible.

Nobody in this city seems to know of a big vocalist by the name of Douglas, and the alleged poor box thief is, apparently, giving the police misleading information as to his address.

This is the second time in a short while that prisoners have made a mistake in giving Peterborough as their address, a couple of Ottawa thieves doing so the other day. Is it that the town is so small that they think the authorities won't be able to locate the tank, or on account of it being so large a city that it would be difficult to trace their movements during a residence here? Probably for the latter reason.

CLOSING OF LAKEFIELD HOTEL CAUSES GREAT INCONVENIENCE

A Party of Americans Coming Down to the Village by the Afternoon Boat and Intending to Stay Over Night Were Compelled to Take a Long Drive Back to Burleigh.

The closing of the Frank Lawless hotel at Lakefield, last week, is already beginning to have its effect on the excursions of the surrounding cottagers. For the last two or three seasons it has been customary for these cottagers, who wished to do a little shopping, to take the boat to Lakefield, and stay there over night, returning in the morning by the same means.

On Monday afternoon a party of Americans from the Burleigh Falls hotel came down to the village by the afternoon boat, and as usual went to the hotel to get rooms for the night. They found that the Lawless hotel was closed, however, and that the Darcy hotel was already overcrowded. They tried several private boarding houses but they too were filled, and, as there was no return boat that evening, there was nothing for them to do but to get a livery horse and start on the long drive back to Burleigh.

COMMITTEE DID NOT GRANT THIRTY YEAR FRANCHISE

To Peterborough Light and Power Company—Representatives of Company and Members of Manufacturers' Committee Could Not Come to a Satisfactory Agreement.

The Manufacturers' Committee wrangled over the proposal of the Peterborough Light and Power Company for nearly five hours yesterday afternoon and last evening and adjourned at 10 o'clock without any decision being arrived at. The whole question dwindled down to rates and the company made its final offer, viz., to increase the rebate from 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. This the members of the committee who were present would not accept, claiming that all the members of the committee should be present. As a result the meeting adjourned. Another session may be called to-day.

THE COMPANY AGREED

To reconstruct the pole line on George street, and to erect new poles of uniform size and flush with the curb. This is to be done at once.

At the end of five years to put their wires in the business section in conduits, which the city would construct and rent to them.

To allow the city to string wires on their poles if the city desired to go in for street lighting. A reasonable rental to be paid.

To increase the rebate from 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. for the next five years, and at the end of that time to rearrange the rates before the Ontario Railway and Municipal Board.

The city was to grant the company a franchise to do business on the streets for 30 years. This is not to be an exclusive franchise.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Those present were Chairman Ald. Gillespie, Ald. Duffus, Ald. Morrow and Mayor Rush.

Mr. John Stuart, son of Mr. R. Stuart, Mr. Grey, of Chicago, general solicitor for the company, and Mr. J. H. Larmouth, were present as representatives of the Peterborough Light and Power Company.

The chairman announced that the object of the meeting was to consider the several clauses in the agreement which the city solicitor had drawn up, and which did not meet with the approval of the company. The city clerk then read over the proposed agreement.

There were several objections to the agreement, and it was admitted by both the city and the company that thirty years was a long time to be tied to. Ald. Gillespie suggested that these various points be adjusted every five years.

Ald. Morrow was of the same opinion, and he would support such an arrangement.

Mr. Stewart and Mr. Larmouth both said that they would desire to keep their plant abreast of the times and would not want the city to get ahead of them.

The first chief obstacle in the way was the poles on the streets in the business section. The committee's object was for only the business sections, but the agreement was so worded that any future Council could compel all wires to be put under ground.

Mr. Grey suggested that the company remove all poles on George street and erect new poles of a nicer appearance and flush up to the curb. This would get away with much of the unsightliness. Then at the end of five years provision could be made for laying the conduit.

Ald. Morrow suggested that the wires on the main business streets be placed under ground, and that no further extensions of the conduits be made until the city had reached a population of 30,000 people, and then the matter would be settled by the Board of Arbitration. Ald. Morrow's suggestion was that the city should have the right to lay the conduits at any time it was thought advisable. The district included from Murray to Sherbrooke, and Water to Aylmer.

Mr. Grey's idea was that the conduit scheme be left out of existence for five years, and the company would rebuild its George street pole line at once. This was agreed to by both parties.

The next question taken up was that of rates. Ald. Morrow wanted the commercial and domestic lighting to be the same, and he suggested a new and lower scale of prices.

To this the company objected, but suggested that the rates be left as they are now for the next five years.

Ald. Morrow also wanted a flat rate for domestic lighting and wanted to know why the company would not agree to it.

The representatives of the company stated that there was no telling how much the people would use on a flat rate. Many would use irons, toasters, etc., without making a report to the company. Mr. Larmouth said that he had figured out the amount of current used by their meter customers and the amount used by the flat rate customers, and found that the latter used 600 per cent. more. He also claimed that to give a flat rate they would have to place the cost so high that it would be almost prohibitive.

The committee adjourned at 5.30 to meet again at 7.30 in the evening.

EVENING SESSION.

In the evening the committee met again with Ald. Metheral, Ald. Duffus, Ald. Morgan, the Mayor, and Chairman Ald. Gillespie present.

The committee resumed the discussion on the meter rate question. The chairman asked the representatives of the company if they had anything to offer.

Mr. Stuart said that they had talked it over a little, and had come to the conclusion that they should be allowed the right to install meters as the flat rate was not at all fair. As far as the rate is concerned they did not think that they should be asked to reduce it any, as no other place had a cheaper rate. But if they secured the franchise they would increase the rebate from 25 per cent. to 30 per cent. for domestic lighting. This they thought was a fair concession as they had not made anything out of the plant as yet. By rights they were not justified in making any such concession. They would also agree to continue the flat rate for commercial lighting.

Ald. Duffus said the people were waiting to see what changes were going to be made, and they thought this was an opportunity to make the change, which would be satisfactory to both the company and the people.

"What we want is to get down to some system," said the alderman.

"We don't think that we have been harshly dealt with in the past, and we want to be fair, but I don't feel like recommending the proposition to the Council," said Chairman Gillespie. "I'd like to see the reduction at the end of five years."

Mr. Grey met this statement by saying that if the city thought the rate unfair at the end of the five years, then the Arbitration Board would adjust it to the satisfaction of all.

"Why, we are not as cheap as many other places and you still hold the right to insist on meters being put in," said Ald. Duffus.

"There is very little likelihood of the latter part being done," said Mr. Larmouth. "We could have insisted on it being done in the past and still have the right, but we have not done so."

Ald. Metheral said he would like to see the flat rate system, as then the working man could use as much as he wanted to.

"We wouldn't object to that," said Mr. Larmouth, "but this system is being abused by the people. Many use several different kinds of electrical appliances, and as a result the company is the loser."

Ald. Morgan thought the "extra light" used by those mentioned by Mr. Larmouth should be paid for by them, but the working man should not be made to suffer.

"Make it 33 1-3 and settle the question," said Ald. Metheral. "We ought to have that rate at the very least; and if that is not satisfactory let the Arbitrary Board adjust it. I refuse to pass the proposition on to the Council without this rate."

"We can't do it," said Mr. Stuart.

The aldermen and the company discussed the rate business at some length, but did not get much nearer a settlement.

It was pointed out that Peterborough, paying 7c. without a meter rate, was getting light cheaper than St. Catharines, which was paying 5.85c. and 25c. meter rent. As a matter of fact Peterborough will get its light as cheap or cheaper than any other city or town in Ontario, with the exception of probably one or two.

Mr. Larmouth said that he would like to have the by-law submitted to the ratepayers as soon as possible after it passes the Council. The company will pay the expense of submitting the by-law, which will be near $250. This is the usual custom.

Messrs. Stuart, Larmouth and Gray retired from the meeting at 9.45, and the aldermen discussed the rate among themselves, but they could not come to any agreement.

Mayor Rush said that he had gone into this question pretty well, and he would second a motion to send the recommendation to the Council, but no such motion was forthcoming and the meeting adjourned.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE PETERBOROUGH LIGHT AND POWER CO.

There seems to be some misapprehension regarding the negotiations now proceeding between the City Council and this company. The company, by which is meant the L. and P. Co., and not the Street Ry. Co., is asking for a guaranteed permission to use the streets for lighting and power purposes for thirty years. This request does not mean a monopoly. It is not a request for an exclusive franchise. It is simply asking the city to say that it will allow the company to go on with its business for that time. The reason is understood to be that in attempting to sell 30 year bonds any possibility of a revoking of such a privilege as the reasonable use of the streets would practically destroy the sale. Within reasonable limits, companies, like individuals, must have the use of the streets to carry on their business. Apparently the request made calls for no quid pro quo whatever. The Council, however, in return for the guaranteed permission above referred to demands certain modifications of the present contract which has yet five years to run. These modifications are that the street poles shall be used in common with other companies desiring to carry power that there shall be a reduction in rates both metre and flat for lighting purposes, that eventually conduits shall be laid to hold the wires, in central districts, etc.

The company has applied without setting up any conditions or promises because it considers that it is asking no favors.

The street railway must not be brought into the question at all since it has nothing whatever to do with the L. and P. Co., except to take power from it. Its franchise has still 26 years to run. The L. and P. Co. is alone affected.

The proposed scheme of municipal ownership of power is another matter. We cannot have the report of Mr. Rogers, C.E., who has been engaged by the Council, a moment too soon, on Burleigh Falls. If when his report is made, it is found that private companies can do just as well as the city could in providing power at low rates then few would care to argue the question farther. The Central Ontario Co. says that power from Burleigh can be delivered at the city limits for $7.00. The Hydro-Electric report of 2 years ago said that it could not be done for less than $18 but that is not the question just now.

We must not lag. Lack of attack and enterprise would do Peterborough a lasting injury. The Council must be encouraged in a sane forward policy by having the people at its back.

It would seem as if there were no question of vital public interest involved, therefore, in the present application which is simply a straight request for a guarantee that the city will not refuse the reasonable use of the streets for 30 years. The city is in no way debarred from dealing with any other company or from instituting municipal lighting if it pleases when the present lighting contract runs out in five years' time.

YOUNG MEN HAD A COSTLY MEAL

Refused to Pay C. Q. Woo Last Thursday, But the Account Was Collected This Morning—Only $12.25

The three young men who were disorderly in C. Woo's restaurant last Thursday afternoon, appeared before Magistrate Dumble this morning and two of the number paid $12.25 into court, as a result of their misbehaviour, and the other was discharged.

Mr. G. N. Gordon conducted the case for the complainant, C. Q. Woo. According to his statements, the defendants entered his restaurant last Thursday afternoon, and asked to be served with a meal, but when he asked for payment one of the number struck him on the nose and mouth, loosening several teeth. Shortly afterwards they ran out on the street and he followed them as far as the Cordage Works, and then gave up the chase.

The magistrate held that as long as foreigners abided with the laws in force here, and conducted themselves as they should, the law would protect them in all cases, and he imposed the above punishment.

SHOULD PAY YOUR DEBTS IS RIGHT

Why people do not pay their debts it is difficult to explain, as it is generally supposed that men have consciences and that it is an infallible guide between right and wrong. While some might possibly fail to meet their obligations because they cannot obtain the money, yet in this age of prosperity and activity it would seem that where there is a will there is a way. These moral reflections are offered by a man who has been trying to make collections and been only indifferently successful.

A SUGGESTION FOR LAUNCH-OWNERS

It has been suggested that the various launch owners of the city who intend to take their boats up to Stony Lake for the regatta next Monday do so in a body. If those who intend to go up would get together and appoint a time for a start, they would be saved a large amount of individual work and would not be such a source of inconvenience to the lockmaster.

MATINEE AT THE DRIVING PARK ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

Arrangements are being completed for the holding of a grand matinee at the Driving Park Civic Holiday, and it is expected that many horses from outside points will start. The programme will be the best that has been offered at the Driving Park for some time. There will be a race for the 2.30 class, one for the 2.25 class and a free for all. In the latter race Harry Direct and Billy W. will be seen in action for the first time this season. It will be the first appearance of Billy W. in this city, and as he has a splendid record on the track, the race should prove an interesting one. The track is being put in first-class shape for the events on the holiday, for which suitable prizes will be offered. As has been stated before, the officials in charge have always insisted that events at this place be put on in a creditable manner, and there will be nothing allowed which would be objectionable for those who patronize the matinee, which will start at 2 o'clock.

LINES ON SPORT

Now that the Toronto Leafs are up in second place and Kid Mahling is playing the game of his life, the Hogtown fans can now afford to throw bouquets at the other teams, who are enjoying a toboggan slide.

Look out for squalls at the City League fixtures for Saturday. The Strathconas hook up with the P.A.C., and as past experience has shown that the tailenders can play the game when they want to, it would not be surprising to see the Baptists take a fall.

Of course, the fans cannot see anything else but a win for the T.A.S. in their game with the West Ends. There will be a surprise for someone.

The winner of the league is not decided yet, and there will no doubt be a bumper crowd at the Oval Saturday to cheer for their respective teams.

Why cannot arrangements be made to have an outside team play here, say every week? The fans in the city are gradually realizing the fact that a good team can be secured here which can make a favorable showing with the best of them.

Arrangements have been made whereby Shrubb and Acoose, the Indian runner, will be the principals in a ten and fifteen-mile race at Winnipeg, the first-named to be run Saturday and the latter on the following Saturday.

Tod Sloan, the American jockey, has been granted a license by the Belgian authorities and will begin riding next Sunday.

Mathewson was touched up for 15 hits in a ten-inning game with Cincinnati yesterday, but won, 7-6.

Detroit lost two games to Boston yesterday before 29,000 people.

BEAUTIFUL SPOT IS A CREDIT TO THE CITY

A visit to the miniature park at the customs house would well repay anyone who is interested in the cultivation of flowers. Mr. Daddy Tayloy, caretaker of the building, has gone to no small amount of pains to make the property a credit to the city. The flower beds, tastefully arranged about the lawn, are looking at their best, and the fact that they are grown each year from slips or seeds reflects considerable credit on the person in charge. Mr. Taylor also has a small plot of ground on the south side of the building, in which are grown tomatoes, peas, radishes and other seasonable products, and which are now bearing the second crop of this season.

TARANTULA DISPORTS ITSELF IN GEORGE STREET WINDOW

An uninviting and very unwilling visitor to Peterborough is a tarantula or banana spider, on exhibition in the window of Lang & Maher's clothing store, George street. The big octopus-like insect was taken captive by Mr. Ross Kendry on May 12th of this year. Mr. Kendrey has a fruit ranch just outside Raymondville, Texas, and discovered the spider in his coat sleeve when the coat was hanging on the wall. After cautious manoeuvering Mr. Kendry took the uncanny guest into custody and brought it to Peterborough when he returned home this spring. It is in a glass globe in Lang & Maher's window, and puts in its time in making strenuous but futile efforts to regain its liberty.

In the window are the rattles of a couple of rattlesnakes, also brought home by Mr. Kendry. The largest string represents the alarm system of a snake that must have been fifteen or sixteen years old, when it was killed. Mr. Kendry was along on his pony when the animal suddenly balked and the first thing the rider knew he was bitten by the big rattler. The strike of a rattle snake is deadly unless quick measures are taken and the victim immediately slashed the bite until it bled very freely, and stopping the flow of blood by the use of caustic, which is always carried in regions where rattlesnakes are to be found, hastened to Raymondville to visit a physician, who made him drink so much whiskey that a confirmed toper would be almost willing to run the risk of a rattler's bite for the same generous potation. The alcohol in the liquor is a valuable antidote to the poison that the snake injects into the system when it employs its poisonous fangs.

BARN SCORCHED THIS MORNING

An alarm was sent in to the fire station this morning at 11.12 from box 54. The brigade responded to the call, and on their arrival on Rogers street, Ashburnham, found a barn on fire. A quantity of shingles on the roof were scorched, but otherwise the barn, which was empty at the time, was not damaged. The cause of the blaze was hot ashes.

TAXES CAME IN WELL THIS YEAR

$125,000 on the First Payment—Ratepayers Paid up Well

The taxes have come in well for the last payment, showing that there are not hard times in Peterborough. Tax Collector Green stated to the Review that $125,000 had been taken in at the last payment, which includes up to Aug. 22.

The next payment is on the 15th of November.

DESPATCH RE BURLEIGH FALLS

Special to the Review.

Toronto, Aug. 4.—Mr. R. J. McLaughlin, K.C., of Lindsay and Toronto, has written a letter to the Peterborough newspapers regarding the title of Burleigh Falls power owned by the Central Ontario Power Co., Limited, which shows that the recent underhand work of competitors or their assistants means a cipher. Peterborough wants cheap power, not monopoly and stagnation, and every alderman who has at heart the interests of the ratepayers who elected him, whether near the head or near the foot of the polls, should even then work for cheap power, and not monopoly.

PROTEST WILL BE LAID OVER

The protest of the T.A.S. against last Saturday's win of the P.A.C. has been received by the president of the City League, but no decision will be forthcoming just at present. The matter will be left over until another date.

GOLF

Mr. H. C. Hill made a fine 76 in a game yesterday, doing the first round in a perfect 36 and the second in 40.

Gun Shoot To-morrow

The regular shoot of the Peterborough Gun Club will be held at the Driving Park to-morrow evening at 6.30 sharp. This will be the final shoot for the trophy offered by the Nobels Powder Co., Montreal.

For Stoney Lake Regatta Day

Civic Holiday, August 9, is regatta day at Stony Lake. Several owners of launches propose making the trip up on Saturday afternoon, and it would be well if all those going would arrange to start together from above the lift lock promptly about one o'clock, then as many as make the trip could lock through the upper locks tog[illegible], materially reducing the labor and time of the trip.

A CRUMB OF BREAD.

Its Effect on the Tip of a Vivacious Woman's Nose.

"Isn't it terrible," said the society woman, "what a tiny thing can prove a tragedy to poor, self vaunting mankind! A speck almost invisible in the eye of an athlete may disempower him utterly and render him as helpless as a baby. And a lost hairpin or the breaking of a buckle may transform the most smartly groomed woman into an object of amusement to all observers.

"At a dinner I attended not long ago a lady sitting opposite me lodged in some inexplainable manner a large crumb of bread directly on the end of her nose without being conscious of the fact, and there it remained. The ludicrous effect was beyond the power of words to describe or of human risibles to resist. She is an extremely vivacious woman, generous with smiles and little bows and motions of her head, and as she chatted gayly with those about her it was impossible for us to restrain our unseemly mirth. Naturally she thought this was caused by her remarks, and she continued to toss off jests with a lightsome air. We were all in agony, but no one summoned courage to tell her, each of us preferring to leave that kindly act to another. After a time she addressed a remark to her husband, who sat next to her and had been devoting himself to the lady at his other side. He turned to look at his wife, and in an instant a clever touch of his napkin removed the distorting fragment, but I can never forget it as long as I live."

THE PENGUIN.

His Solemn, Laborious Hop and His Stone Lined Nest.

The penguin does not fly—he hops, balancing himself by his flippers, or rudimentary wings. He is about two feet tall, in some cases, however, reaching nearly four feet, and he has a solemn and heavy style of hop which is immensely funny to look at. It is not a bit of fun for the penguin, though, for when the ice is rough, as it almost always is, his webbed, clumsy feet soon become raw and bleeding. Whenever he reaches a snow slope he drops down and toboggans, urging himself on with his flippers, but for the most part he hops laboriously mile after mile when the nesting season comes, seeking a home that satisfies penguin requirements.

A penguin is made of sterner stuff than to need soft lining for a nest. A heap of irregular stones around a depression scratched in the ground is all that each pair asks for. Some penguins are industrious and collect stones all day. Others are lazy and steal theirs whenever a worker's broad black back is turned. It is a trifle hard to escape with the plunder, for a slow waddle is the best the thief can do. But the owner cannot pursue any faster, and the chase is very funny to see. Sometimes the thief is overtaken, and in that case there is a lively fight, while a third penguin, lingering near, usually bears away the coveted stone while the fight is on.—Forward.

It is announced th[illegible] ment is planning to expe[illegible] 000 [illegible] n Pedro, Cal.

SELECTED SEEDS AND PLANTS

With a view to giving greater publicity to the work which is being done in Canada by the Canadian Seed Growers' Association in the improving of cultivated plants, and in order that a medium may be provided through which the officers of the association may come in touch with a greater number of those who are specially interested in the problem of crop improvement, arrangements have been made to place a special educational exhibit of selected plants and seeds in the agricultural building of the Toronto Fair. This exhibit will be in charge of the secretary or some other officer qualified to discuss the general work of the association.

It is to be hoped that a large number will take advantage of this opportunity to learn more of this important movement.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

MAKING TOUR OF CANADA

New York Autoist in the City Last Night—Fishing at Hastings

Lindsay Post: A prominent visitor to town Saturday was Dr. Alexander of Randolph, N.Y. The doctor, who is president of the Sterling Oil Co. of Emlenton, Pa., one of the few companies that have withstood the onslaughts of the Standard Oil Co., was accompanied by his family, and is doing Canada in his handsome auto touring car. This car is a "beaut" and no mistake. It is fitted up with everything conceivable that would be likely to be needed on such a trip.

Dr. Alexander is combining business with pleasure and is making his annual call on the tanners of Ontario. Whilst in town he paid his respects to the Beal Leather Co. and spent the afternoon at Mr. Beal's residence. The party left for Hastings in the evening. Mr. Beal accompanied them as far as Peterborough. The party expect to do some fishing at Hastings and from there proceed to Ottawa.

FISHING IS GOOD IN STONEY LAKE

Reports from Stony Lake state that the fishing there has improved wonderfully in the last two weeks. While no unusually large catches have been made, still good sport can be had.

Mr. J. Graham has, during the three weeks that he has been at the lakes, caught over forty nice-sized 'lunge, which is certainly a creditable showing in such a short time.

HELP FOR THE BLIND

Principal Gardiner asks the assistance of the Review in impressing upon the parents and friends of children with defective eyesight the advisability of sending such children to the Ontario Institute for the Blind to be educated. The institution, located at Brantford, and maintained by the Government of Ontario free of charge for board and tuition, is a school for the education of children and youths of both sexes under the age of 21. It is not a hospital, nor an asylum, nor a home, but a school where children who cannot see well enough to attend the public schools are given an English education (including music) and taught to do such useful work as the blind are capable of doing. Such education and training must promote the comfort, happiness and independence of those who are deprived of the blessing of sight. Therefore the Review recommends those interested to correspond with H. F. Gardiner, Principal O. I. B., Brantford, in time to complete arrangements before the opening of the next session on Sept. 22.

SCHOOL FOR MOTHERS.

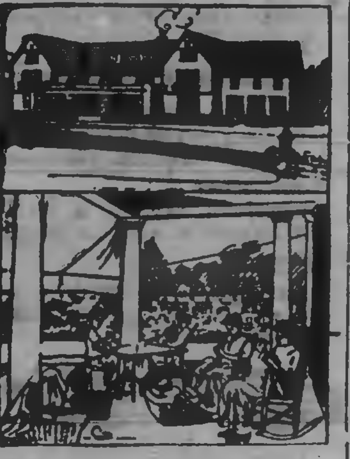
An Institution Which Gives Needed Instruction to Young Wives.

A train out of the Grand Central station, New York city, for Hartsdale recently carried some interesting passengers. They were tenement house mothers, some of them scarcely more than girls, and each had a two-weeks-old baby in her arms. They were for the most part factory girls who had jumped from the workroom into marriage and knew little about taking care of babies. The faces of the babies were white and wan. Occasionally children of two, three or maybe four years tagged at the heels of the mothers.

Had you asked the women where they were going they would have said "To school," not to a school like those near their city homes to which the older children go, but to a school for tenement mothers which George H. F. Schrader has started up among the hills of Hartsdale, New York state. It is called Caroline Rest, in memory of Mr. Schrader's mother.

It is not only a sanitarium where young mothers can go to rest and recuperate; it is also a school where the ignorance that kills some 5,000 newborn babies each year in the New York tenements can be overcome by knowledge of a scientific sort. It was two years ago that a cottage was secured among the hills of Hartsdale for the establishment of Caroline Rest.



CAROLINE REST SANITARIUM.

Here some ten young mothers were domiciled and cared for. Amid healthful surroundings they grew well and strong again, and their babies thrived.

Now the cottage has been replaced by a picturesque English structure which accommodates thirty mothers and their children. There is a wide veranda where the convalescing mothers may sit beside the big clothesbaskets in which, comfortable and happy, the babies rest. As you enter the house there is a reception hall in which on dull days, before a cheerful fire in the big fireplace, the mothers can sit. A sun parlor is another feature of the place, and there is a nursery for the older children.

It is the schooling which these mothers get that is to help them most. There is a well defined course followed by the pupils, a curriculum as carefully planned as that of a normal college.

On the day a mother arrives with her baby she is simply allowed to rest and adjust herself to her new surroundings. The next morning, if she is able, she gets her first lesson, which consists of how to wash the baby.

"You must remember," explained the nurse in charge, "that many of the mothers who come here are little more than girls themselves and have gone right from the factory into their own home and motherhood with no more preparation than a child. One young mother I have here now is only fourteen, and you can imagine how much she knows about bringing up her child.

"The first thing the mother is taught is the use of the bathtub and basin. It seems almost incredible that it should be necessary to teach this, but you know in many of the tenements the use of the tub is not considered necessary.

"After learning how to wash the bathtub and other utensils the mother is taught to bathe and dress the baby under supervision. She is instructed in the care of the icebox in which the milk is kept and sees how all the dishes used to prepare the baby's food must be sterilized. Preparing the barley mixtures and food comes next.

"It happens very frequently that a young mother cannot come to Caroline Rest unless she brings some of the younger children with her. So these, the runabouts, as they are called, are also looked over, and if any trouble exists it is used as an object lesson for the mother, so that she may avoid a repetition of it in the little new baby she brought with her.

"One of the features of Caroline Rest is that the time of the mother's stay is unlimited. She can remain two, three or six weeks, as the need may be, and some have remained three months."

Pitted Dates and Cheese Are Delicious.

Pitted dates masked with cream cheese which had been mixed with minced nuts were dressed with mayonnaise and served on lettuce leaves at a luncheon party recently. The dates are more tender if they are scalded with boiling water and allowed to soak for a few minutes before they are pitted. Dates for any purpose whatever are better treated in this way.

IN THE NURSERY.

A baby's eyes should be shaded from a strong light, especially from bright sunlight.

Hot cloths applied to the feet and to the stomach will often relieve colic much more quickly than internal doses.

Boil soft linen towels and put them aside for baby's exclusive use. In drying baby after his bath rub him gently to stimulate the skin to healthy action. Dust baby lightly with a good powder.

Violent noises which startle a child should be avoided, and an infant should under no circumstances be tossed in the air or shaken, as this treatment surely develops nervousness.

After washing the baby's mouth give him a drink of boiled water.

The tiny soft brushes so often given as presents to babes are useless, because everything used in the child's mouth should be burned.

A baby should be given pure cold water two or three times a day. Its mouth should be rinsed several times a day with borax water, a teaspoonful to a cup. This will prevent the mouth and gums from becoming sore and keep them sweet and clean.

Compensation For Injury.

Compensation for injury in the middle ages was in its infancy. The volume of the accounts of the lord high treasurer of Scotland, just published, tells incidentally of payments made to sufferers in the siege of Glasgow in 1544. To a carter who lost his horse $25 was paid, but $10.56 sufficed for a woman whose husband was killed, a like sum being given to the owners of two broken drums.

A Safe Rule.

"Is one apt to get bruised in learning to ride the bicycle?"

"Not if you make it a rule to stop when the bicycle stops."

"What do you mean?"

"Some riders keep on going."

A Boomerang.

"She broke him of smoking so that he could save money."

"And did he save money?"

"Yes, he got so interested in saving money that he broke off their engagement so that he could save still more."

A Hard Task.

"Do you think a woman could be a satisfactory juror?"

"No. She'd have to agree with eleven men, and she hasn't learned to agree with one yet."

A STORY WITH TEETH

Introducing a Mysterious Woman With a Strange Mission.

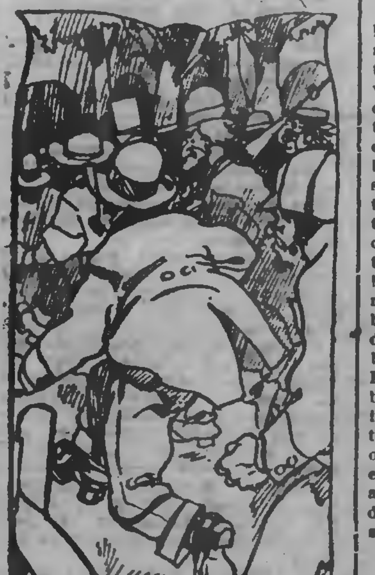
By M. QUAD.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

The village of Brinkly was and is today a place of about 1,200 inhabitants, and the country is thickly settled with farmers for seven miles around before coming to another village, but only one dentist has ever made it pay there since the place was founded. He didn't stay but a couple of months, but he carried away a roll of money as large as a log.

It wouldn't be polite to say that the villager and the farmer do not give proper attention to their teeth, but they are never in a great hurry about it. They hate to part with the old roots and snags and keep putting off the evil day when they have got to get into the executioner's chair. It might have been said of Brinkly and the surrounding country that not an adult had a good set of teeth and that up to a certain day no one was giving dentistry any serious thought. Then on a Monday morning a change took place. A traveling dentist who had his office in a van drove into town and opened shop. For two days no one went near him, although he hung out a sign of the most painless kind of painful dentistry.

Then a strange woman arrived. She was dark complexioned, dressed like a gypsy and passed for one. She was a mysterious woman on a mysterious errand. She had come to that locality to search for a great buried treasure. She couldn't search for it by her lonesome, as the spirits guarding it had put a ban on her, but the gold was to be found through some one else. That some one else must have a tooth drawn to propitiate the spirits. Then he would be led to the treasure and would whack up with her. The hours for finding the treasure were between midnight and 2 o'clock in the morning, and the searcher must on no consideration say a word to any one about what he was after. If not finding the treasure the first night he must have a second tooth pulled. He might have to lose three, but that would be the end.



THERE WERE A YELL AND A RUSH.

Had the woman gone about among the women telling this yarn she would have been laughed out of their houses. She did exactly the contrary. She interviewed the men. Her very first victim was known as the hardest headed old chap for fifteen miles around. He was so stingy and mean that when he had the mumps he refused to let any of his neighbors catch them free of cost. He bit at once. If there was any buried treasure around there he wanted his half of it. Indeed, he wanted it all if he could get it. He had heard about the traveling dentist, and within two hours of his talk with the woman he was at the van. It was 50 cents a pull, and the dentist selected a front tooth that might have continued business for several years longer. The pulling hurt like blazes, but as the man carried the molar away in his pocket he felt that the treasure was his. On a Sunday night, which was a week ahead, he was to stand alongside of an elm tree and watch for the flash of a firefly. Two feet under ground beneath the flash the box of gold would be found.

The next day the dentist pulled teeth for no less than five different men. Some of them met each other at the van and made all sorts of excuses for being there. Deacon Spooner said he had been thinking of parting with a tooth for the last fifteen years, and Elder Tompkins said that he had a loose tooth that had prevented him from eating boiled dinners ever since he became a widower. Each had a slight suspicion of the other, but tried to act carelessly and gave no information. The dentist numbered farmers as well as villagers among the callers, and when Saturday night came he could figure that he had performed on forty-eight men. On Sunday night between the hours named those forty-eight men were looking for elm trees and fireflies. The village was pretty well shaded by elms, but there were not enough to go round. In some instances two men found themselves under the same elm. Then they lied to each other like troopers as they watched for fireflies. The firefly is seen only on a certain night when the weather has some quality about it that calls them out, and this was one of the months when they are never seen at all. None of the searchers took this into consideration, but waited and watched and grew nervous as they thought of the treasure.

Before 10 o'clock Monday forenoon the dentist had men waiting while others were being served. There were some among them that had come to lose their first tooth and others to lose their second. The fellow was a lightning puller, but there were two or three patients left over when darkness fell and he closed his van. The new ones on this day had been told by the woman to stand under beech trees. There was just as big a crowd on Tuesday, and it was not fairly disposed of until Thursday. Of course it had got noised around the village that there was something up, but not a man peached. There was something more than suspicion among them now, and the only way was to lie to each other. They did lie. Men who had always scorned the slightest evasion now came out and lied as easily as if they had always made it a business. They lied to each other and to their wives, and some of them had three teeth drawn all at once, so as to have the bulge on the one and two tooth fellows.

Half a mile west of the village was a beech grove. Outside of that there wasn't a beech tree within two miles. On Sunday night more than 100 men were in that grove before the clocks were through striking midnight. They rubbed elbows and they crowded each other. Some pretended that they were walking in their sleep and others that they were looking for stray hogs or cows. When an hour had gone by some one saw or thought he saw a light moving about beyond the creek that skirted one side of the grove. There were a yell and a rush. As men ran they punched and kicked each other. They even jumped upon each other's back. Fifty men fell into the creek and fifty more on top of them. It was a grand battle royal, from which no one escaped scathless. Next day some of the crowd wanted to consult the woman and get closer particulars; but, though they drove all over the country, she was not to be found.

And then arose another complication. Fifty men, disregarding Sunday nights and elm and beech trees, began a daytime hunt for the treasure. They even went so far as to spade up each other's garden. It was three days before the search ended and the excitement died away, and then the bamboozled began to think of their teeth, though, strangely enough, they did not connect the gypsy woman with the loss of them. The dentist was ready. He could replace teeth as well as displace them. He sent for an assistant and had all the work he could do for two months, and his prices were just double those charged in the city. He didn't get quite all he had operated on before, but it is still contended in Brinkly that he went to Europe, bought an old castle and is still reveling in power and luxury. Now and then in the firefly season a man goes out at midnight and leans against an elm or beech tree, but if guided to any certain spot the most he finds by digging is an old oyster can or the skull of a dead and gone horse.

Chopin and the Children.

A chronicler of the life of Chopin, the great pianist, tells the following anecdote: On one occasion the pupils in his father's school, freed temporarily from the restraint of the elder Chopin, arranged to have some fun with their tutor. When the commotion was at its height Chopin entered and set himself to quell it. He told the boys that if they would remain quiet he would play for them. He darkened the room and started his improvisation, telling the skylarkers a romantic story of a band of robbers who approached a house, mounted by ladders to the windows, but were frightened away by a noise within. They fled into a dark wood, where they fell asleep under a starry sky. Chopin by this time was playing more and more softly, as if seeking to lull the robbers in the wood and incidentally the children in the schoolroom to rest. When he had satisfied himself that his hearers had actually fallen asleep, Chopin crept from the room and brought his parents to look at them. He turned up the lights, and the boys slept on until he reseated himself at the piano and struck a thrilling chord, at which they all awakened with a start.

The History of a Book.

Following is the story of the first edition of Fitzgerald's celebrated translation of "Omar Khayyam." The book was issued anonymously and found no buyers. Accordingly the author went to Bernard Quaritch's shop, dropped a heavy parcel of 200 copies of the "Rubaiyat" and said, "Quaritch, I make you a present of these books."

The famous bookseller offered them first at half a crown, then at a shilling, and, again descending, at sixpence, but no buyers came. In despair he reduced the book to a penny and put copies into a box outside his door with a ticket, "All these at 1 penny each. At that price the pamphlet moved. In a few weeks the lot was sold, and in this way one of the finest gems of English literature was dispersed among a not overdiscerning public.

The legend has it that Dante Gabriel Rossetti, Swinburne and Burton were among those who discovered the "hidden treasure in the penny box." Years passed, and the once despised volume rose in the market, and in 1898 Quaritch bought in for £21 a copy which forty years before he had sold for a penny.—London Queen.

A Thoughtless Druggist.

ONLY a thoughtless druggist would offer a preparation without the signature of Chas. H. Fletcher when Castoria is called for; the "delicate, faint and flickering light" that joins baby's life to its devoted parents being too sacred, to the self-respecting druggist, to be trifled with.

For over thirty years Mr. Fletcher has given, and still gives, his personal attention to the preparation of Castoria. It has won the confidence of mothers and physicians everywhere—never harmed the tiniest babe. This cannot be said of Imitations, Counterfeits and the "Just-as-good" rot.

The thoughtless druggist only offers the counterfeit because of a few pennies more profit. Any new preparation can be but an experiment, and they are experiments—mere guess work—irrespective of what their sponsors may say for them. It is experience of over thirty years, against wild and injudicious experiment.

LAFONTAINE.

LaFontaine, patriot and statesman great,
Colleague of Baldwin in those days of yore
When men strove not for self but for the State,
His people's champion, he their burden bore,
Loyal in service, by no devious ways
He won the fight and nobly played his part,
Conscience his guiding star, and not men's praise,
Firm for the right, his the true patriot heart.
Raise now aloft the monumental stone,
And as his name is blazoned to our sight
The lesson his life speaks in trumpet tone
Be ours to profit by in days of might,
And, bound as brethren, let us firmly stand
For lasting concord in our common land.

—Read by John Boyd at the recent laying of the LaFontaine monument corner-stone.

OLD-TIME REPORTERS.

W. H. Orr Tells of Historic Discussions at Quebec.

"No one ever reported Sir John A. Macdonald or Hon. George Brown without omitting about 25 per cent. of what they actually said when in the heat of discussion," said W. H. Orr, of Toronto, the veteran reporter, in addressing the Chartered Stenographic Reporters' Association recently.

Mr. Orr is the only survivor of the seven reporters who "took" the Confederation debates in the Quebec Parliament Buildings in February and March, 1865.

Speaking of Sir John and of George Brown, he said: "If any reporter had given their actual words, and had printed them as spoken, I feel sure there would have been a loud guffaw in the corridors of the House. They were both in the habit of frequently going a half or three-quarter way through the intended sentence, and then at a gesture, or 'Hear, hear' from some member, nervously abandoning it to its fate and dressing the bright idea in another form. Neither of them, so far as I know, ever took the trouble to revise his speeches before they were printed. The reporters gave the public what the speaker really intended the public to know, and in a really readable garb."

The pay then was $4 per column of 1,400 words for Parliamentary reporting, and Mr. Orr's earnings were about $125 per week.

A leading reporter of those days was Mr. J. K. Edwards, of the Globe, who was afterwards editor of the Montreal Daily Transcript. He was a skillful condenser, and was presented with a service of plate by the members of both sides of the Legislature for his work on the Confederation debates. It was he who organized the [illegible] staff for the Quebec conference.

JAPANESE HUSBANDS.

In Rising Sun Country Matrimony is Built on Equal Rights Plan.

The recent outburst of race antagonism in a Pacific coast city, directed against an American girl for marrying a Japanese, lends interest to the public assertion that "Japanese husbands are the best in the world," made by Mrs. Takamine, wife of the eminent Japanese chemist and scientist, for many years a resident of New York city. Mrs. Takamine was Miss Hitch, daughter of one of the old southern families, before she met the doctor and is a stanch defender of international marriages.

"No woman in the world is more protected and better cared for than the wife of a Japanese," she said. "The Japanese husband is considerate, faithful and patient. It is his philosophy, his religion. He is a home loving man, and naturally he is thoughtful of the little attentions to his home and family. Every woman loves these little attentions. Plenty of women prefer kind words and the thought that they are appreciated to diamond rings. If a Japanese sees some little piece of jewelry, ornament or painting he thinks his wife would like he takes it home to her. It is this sort of thing, the fact that he has thought of her during the day, that makes her happy.

"Contrast the American and the Japanese husband under the same circumstances. An American husband comes home from business tired, nervous and hungry. Something has happened to the oven or the cook has allowed the roast to burn. He is likely to become very impatient over the delay or the spoiled dinner. Under similar circumstances does a Japanese husband lose his temper? Indeed, he does not. He says pleasantly, out of consideration for his wife's feelings, 'Well, perhaps there are eggs in the house, and, after all, they might be better for us to eat.'

"If there is anything that will increase rather than diminish this consideration for his wife it is the fact that Japanese women are just beginning to go into business like their American sisters. With this change the men will realize, too, that should they not treat their wives well the women can leave them and earn their own livelihood. So far no such threats, I believe, have been put into practice, but it has been unnecessary, for it is born and bred and trained in the Japanese men as part of their religion to treat their wives with respect and courteous, thoughtful attention.

"In Japan matrimony is built on a sort of equal rights plan. Husband and wife have each his and her duties and his and her particular rights and privileges, and neither would think of encroaching on the other's well defined rights."

HORSE, CART AND THREE MEN TOOK FORTY FOOT SLIDE

Went Over Embankment at Waterworks Dam—Horse Was Backing Up With Load of Stone and Was Carried Over Edge—An Unpleasant Slide.

Yesterday evening, while backing up to dump a load of stone, a horse and cart employed in the work being done at the new waterworks dam went over the check piece at the edge of the place where the dumping was being done and went to the bottom of the embankment, about forty feet below.

Three of the men who are engaged in the work seized hold of the horse and stayed with the animal until the foot of the slope was reached. They managed to keep it steady until the bottom was made, and escaped without injury. The horse did not suffer any harm outside of a slight scratch.

The prompt action taken was most timely, for the animal might have been killed had it made the slide without resistance to its descent being provided.

Rev. Mr. and Mrs. Tucker and son are spending this month at Stony Lake.

Miss Loretta Kelly is in town visiting friendss.

The employees of Finlay's large factory were given a holiday Monday and most of them took in the regatta at Stony Lake.

Mr A. Finlay's new automobile is creating quite a stir around town. The horses don't seem to mind it at all as it is a very smooth and noiseless runner. On Monday a party was taken to the regatta at Stony Lake in it.

The band, which has not been out for two weeks, gave a fine open-air concert on Friday evening. The music, which is a credit to it, was much appreciated by all, especially a selection in which Mr. Breault, the bandmaster, rendered a cornet solo in fine style.

A runaway which nearly ended with serious results occurred Monday afternoon when Mr. R. Elphick and a couple of friends were enjoying an afternoon drive. The horse suddenly became unmanageable, and struck a lively gait for a considerable distance. Coming to a culvert, where the road drops off about seven feet on both sides, the horse jumped, taking the front wheel off the culvert, the hind ones in some miraculous manner keeping the road. In a few minutes the animal quieted down and save for a slightly battered buggy and broken harness, no serious accidents occurred. Close call, Dick.

The Hastings baseball nine will play the return game with the locals here on Wednesday afternoon. The locals, only losing by one run in Hastings, feel confident of victory on their own grounds.

It is with deep sorrow that we record the death of Thomas A. Robson at Norwood on the 28th of July. Deceased, who was 70 years of age, has been ailing for the past six months, but especially since the death of his son, Alfred Robson, four months ago.

Mr. Robson was married to Elizabeth MacNaughton in 1879, and she now lives to mourn his loss. Two daughters, Jean and Theresa, also survive him.

Mr. Robson was for a number of years a trustee of the High school and Public school, Norwood.

The funeral took place on Saturday and was largely attended. Rev. G. A. MacLennan officiated.

Mrs. Robson and daughters have the sympathy of the whole community in their double bereavement, that of the son and brother on March 16th, and now the husband and father.

When the Catholic-Baptist team lined up against the Methodist nine on Friday evening, the winners could not be chosen. The former by their brilliant work in the last game and the Methodists not having lost a game, put much doubt on the result.

However, when the game was called, to the surprise of the spectators and players of both teams, the score board read 11—4 in favor of the Catholics. The first three innings was good ball, the score standing three runs each. Wildon, the regular Methodist pitcher, was out of the game. Scriver doing good work till the 4th.

Then began the slaughter. Heavy hitting and four costly errors being responsible for seven runs. The Methodist tried hard to even up, but got no more than one run in when the side was retired. The last innings netted 3 more for the Catholics, who held their opponents to no score innings, the game going to the former with 11 runs lead. This now places the three teams a tie.

The game on Wednesday between the business men of Peterborough and Colborne street, was one of a jolly nature. Pearce, for Colborne street, striking out eight men, and allowing only six runs in five minutes. The Peterborough streeters batted five of their opponent's pitchers out of the box and netted a total of 29 runs. The return game is to be played next Wednesday, and a close game is to be expected as the losers are strengthening up for it.

Mr. Bruce McFee, an old Model school student, is renewing acquaintances in the village this week. Bruce is now situated in Ottawa.

Miss Maye Smith, of Toronto, is visiting friends in town.

The third annual regatta of the Upper Stony Lake Cottagers' Association was run off Monday, Aug. 2nd, with ideal weather. The usual large crowd were present, an excursion of about 450 from Bowmanville helped swell the afternoon crowd. Mr. John Roxborough, of town, was again successful in carrying off the Hon. J. R. Stratton silver cup, for the sailing race.

Many good races were pulled off and enjoyed by all. The concert in the evening was largely attended and in every way was a huge success. The only accident was when Miss Lennox and Miss McHarry were canoeing they were unfortunate enough to capsize their canoe. Both girls being fair swimmers reached and held on to the upturned canoe till help arrived. Outside of a wetting and a scare, the two girls are none the worse.

A large crowd from town attended many of the business men and clerks despite the fact that there was no holiday, spent the day at our popular resort and all join in saying it was a day jolly well spent.

A local option detective paid our village a visit the other day. We wonder what the report will say.

Miss Beatrice Wilson, of Toronto, is visiting her cousin, Miss Beatrice Sloane, of town.

The Misses Violet and Irene Wallis are holidaying with their parents in town.

Miss Regina Fry is spending her vacation with her parents of this village.

Mrs. Rapp, of Cincinnati, who is holidaying at Stony Lake, paid a flying visit to our town on Tuesday.

GRAND TRUNK PACIFIC RAILWAY

The laying out of the line for the new Grand Trunk Pacific Railway through British Columbia has verified many predictions and revealed new facts regarding the character of the country.

Inland from Prince Rupert some 200 miles, curtained off from the coast by the coast range, there are many fertile valleys ideal for ranching and dairying. The most interesting of these is the Bulkley Valley. The Bulkley River, which empties into the Skeena River near Hazleton, has a beautiful valley lightly timbered with an occasional cedar swamp, but exceedingly fertile. Pea-Vine in this valley grows high enough to hide a horse. Cattle and horses are fed on an average of 90 days in the year here in this sheltered vale. There are in the Bulkley Valley already established a number of ranches which are in reality experimental farms. Mr. Thompson on Thompson River, a small stream flowing into the Bulkley, is an old Colorado ranchman, and he declares this section is the most delightful in which he has ever lived. At the junction of the Maurice River the country is called Pleasant Valley, and it is aptly named.

The little lakes that lie up among the hills are literally alive with fish and salmon run up the Bulkley to a distance of 300 miles from the sea. Mr. Barrett, of Lake Barrett, has a splendid ranch and is the owner of 150 head of mules. These ranchmen have experimented with wheat, oats, barley and almost every variety of fruit and vegetable and seem to be able to produce almost anything that grows even in the fruit valleys of southern British Columbia.

Another sure indication of the desirable character of the climate and soil is the presence of wild strawberries, raspberries, blackberries, high and low bush blueberries, cranbberries and many other varieties. Where berries grow wild as they do here it is easy to imagine what might be done by cultivation.

The ranching, stock-raising, dairying and agricultural possibilities of this section are sufficient to make it a most attractive territory, but this is no all. The mineral prospects of the region round about are most encouraging. This is especially true of the Talqua River district. In fact the whole territory inland for 600 miles is good prospecting. Everything is here provided to make a great country and there is an abundance of timber and coal.

DAMAGED BY HAIL

Heavy Loss to Wheat in Parts of Manitoba

Winnipeg, Aug. 5.—Great damage by hail was done during the past twenty-four hours throughout Manitoba. Around Thornhill over seven thousand acres were thrashed out entirely. A large area around Strathclair suffered similarly, while Birtle, Carman and Stonewall also report severe damage. Around Pierson it is estimated that 175,000 bushels have been destroyed.

At Glenboro, Man., wheat cutting has commenced, L. McFadden having started his binder on Tuesday in a forty-acre field. He reports a good crop, and the sample promises to be of high standard. Numerous farmers are busy cutting oats and barley. Farm laborers are scarce, and the demand is great.

Portage la Prairie—Wheat-cutting started yesterday near Burnside. Barley and oat thrashing also begins this week.

Carman—Farmers are busy harvesting barley in Dufferin, and some expect to start in on wheat next week.

STILL ANOTHER MINE STRIKE

Nova Scotia Steel and Coal Co at Sydney Becoming Anxious

North Sydney, N.S., Aug. 5.—An official of the Nova Scotia Steel & Coal Co. is authority for the statement that the company look forward to a strike of the U.M.W. miners in their collieries as inevitable in the near future.

An active supporter of the U.M.W. said last night that there would be no strike at Sydney Mines. At No. 3 colliery, where he is employed and where about 90 per cent. of the men are U.M.W. supporters, there is no talk at present of such a step. There is a good deal of dissatisfaction among the men with the recent award of the conciliation board. The chief issue is recognition of the union, which the company is not disposed to grant.

Manager T. J. Brown is at present in New Glasgow, where a conference is being held by the chiefs of the Nova Scotia Steel Co.

The U.M.W. have very little strength in Sydney Mines, Florence being the only point in which they outnumber the P.W.A.

FORMER CASHIER UNDER ARREST

Brockville, Aug. 5.—Miss Grace Henderson, a young woman of Gananoque, is under bond of $6,000 to appear in Brockville Police Court next Monday for a preliminary hearing on the charge of stealing $2,620 in cash, and converting to her own use two checks for $572 and $96.04 respectively. The complainant is the Thousand Island Railway Co., in which offices at Gananoque Miss Henderson was employed as cashier and bookkeeper for four or five years previous to the end of January.

A Pastor Accused.

New Orleans, La., Aug. 5.—Thirty-one indictments against Rev. John J. Holtgrave, pastor of the Catholic Church at Plaquemine, La., were returned by the grand jury of Iberville parish yesterday. Twenty-eight of the counts charge grave crimes and the other three allege criminal libel.

THE SWEDISH OUTLOOK BAD CITIZENS GO ABOUT ARMED

Shops Are Practically Denuded of Small Arms by the Frightened Citizens and Troops Are on Guard Throughout the Capital.

Stockholm, Aug. 5.—The labor conflict in Sweden showed sign yesterday of becoming more acute and the ranks of the strikers were considerably swelled. But the general strike called for yesterday has not yet become entirely effective. Many organizations, although sympathizing with the strikers, hesitate to join them actively.

The employes of the street car lines and the cab drivers stopped work. Troops are protecting the gas works and the electric lighting plant, and this step has incensed the workmen, whose leaders threaten to call a strike unless the soldiers are withdrawn. The printers' union held a meeting yesterday, but resolved to postpone for the present any decision in the matter of going on strike.

A corps of workmen, some thousand strong, is being organized with the object of maintaining order and the people generally, bankers, merchants, etc., are arming themselves for self-protection. The gun shops of the city are practically denuded of revolvers and small arms.

All the tourists have left Stockholm, and the number of visitors now in the city is smaller than for many years past.

The streets of Stockholm present a curious appearance. They are filled with idlers who promenade back and forth, noting the changed conditions and chafing the volunteer street cleaners, many of whom belong to the better classes. All the saloons are closed, and only the best restaurants are permitted to remain open, and, even then it is possible to get wine only by ordering a solid meal.

All the ferries have stopped running, and there is little communication between Stockholm and the suburbs reached by water routes. This fact will result in a further diminution of food supplies. Trouble is expected when stocks of foods begin to run low.

NEW CABLE LINE IS COMPLETED

New York, Aug. 5.—The Colonia, the cable-laying steamship of the Telegraph Construction & Maintenance Co. of London has arrived in port, having just completed the laying of the Commercial Cable Co.'s new cable from St. John's, Nfld., to New York.

Long before the Colonia's big gray hull loomed up through the mist of the early morning the cable was carrying messages through the station at Cuckhold Cove, near St. John's, at the rate of 50 words a minute, and, according to the experts of the cable company, was showing excellent electric qualities.

According to Engineer Petley, the shore end of the cable weighs about 16 tons to the mile, while the deep sea cable, but an inch in diameter, weighs one-eighth as much. In the sweep of the circle made from St. John's here to avoid shoals the cable lies for more than 150 miles in 3,000 fathoms, or 18,000 feet, of water.

FORTUNE FOR EVA STRANGWAY

New York, Aug. 5.—The Herald says: If Eva Fox Strangway, a young English woman, who in September, 1907, was arrested in Toronto and was sentenced here to ten years' imprisonment, charged with having given dressmakers worthless checks, will go to the Tombs and ask for Rev. George Sanderson, chaplain, she will be placed in possession of information by which she may come into a large legacy, left by a relative in Ireland.

Loses Hand in Threshing Machine.

St Mary's, Aug. 5.—At the farm of W. H. Graham, when John McMaster, employed by R. S. Lang, implement agent, had his left hand taken off just above the wrist in the cutting box of a new threshing machine which was being put in operation for the first time. McMaster was helping to put up the machine.

A strike took place on a steamer at Port Huron because the cook missed two hams.

THE EMPEROR GOES ASHORE

Cowes, Aug. 5.—Emperor Nicholas who is here on a visit to King Edward, came ashore from the Imperial yacht Standart yesterday afternoon for the first time since his arrival last Monday, and in company with King Edward, visited the naval station at Osborne. Their Majesties drove in a closed brougham.

Before returning to the British Royal yacht Victoria and Albert for luncheon, Emperor Nicholas and King Edward visited Consuelo, Dowager Duchess of Manchester.

The Passing of A Noted Divine

THE LATE DR. MACLAREN.

ELOPES WITH AN HEIRESS

New York, Aug. 5.—It became known yesterday that on Saturday Miss Dorothy Lehrmann of Montclair, N.J., and Harry E. Marten of Calgary, Alberta, were married by Rev. Dr. Houghton of the "Little Church Around the Corner."

The fact of their elopment was made known by a letter received here yesterday by her sister, Mrs. Henry J. Lehrmann. The bride wrote the facts en route to her Canadian home.

The bride is an heiress, having inherited considerable money from her father's estate. Mr. Marten owns a large wheat farm near Calgary, and is also known to society in Toronto. The bride is well connected, pretty and a skilled musician.

REV. DR. MACLAREN IS DEAD WAS A PROMINENT DIVINE

At Age of 82 Years Venerable Presbyterian Clergyman Succumbs to a Brief Illness—Was Born in Carleton County, Ontario.

Toronto, Aug. 5.—Rev. William MacLaren, D.D., ex-principal of Knox College, died at 3 o'clock yesterday morning at the residence of his son, Rev. David MacLaren, 57 St. George street, who with his daughter, Mrs. Mowat of Edmonton, were with him when the end came.

The venerable clergyman, who had held the highest position in the gift of the Presbyterian Church in Canada was a few weeks ago arranging for a sojourn at the seaside. He was then in the best of spirits, and visiting the church offices at the Confederation Life Building. In speaking of his health at that time he said that the hot weather was affecting him, but despite his 82 years he hoped to be greatly benefited by a trip to the sea shore. Before he could complete his arrangements for the projected trip he was taken seriously ill.

The late ex-principal of Knox College had a distinguished career both as a minister of the Presbyterian Church and as an educationist. He was a native born Canadian, the town of Torbolton, Carlton County, claiming him as its most illustrious son. He was born on Jan. 26, 1828. His parents, David and Elizabeth MacLaren were natives of Perthshire, Scotland. He was the fifth son.

At the Ottawa Grammar School and Toronto Academy, William MacLaren gave early promise of distinction in the sphere of learning, and availed himself of the opportunity to take a theological and arts course. He was ordained to the Presbyterian ministry in 1853, and inducted minister of the Presbyterian church at Amherstburg, Ont., where he remained for four years. The young preacher's fame had become widely recognized to the people in Canada and the United States, and in 1857 he was induced to accept the pastorate of Knox Church, Boston, Mass., since known as Columbus avenue Presbyterian Church. An invitation from the Belleville, Ont., Presbyterian Church to the pastorate there led to his return to Ontario, and he remained at Belleville for eleven years.

In 1870, the Presbyterian Church, Ottawa, succeeded in securing him as pastor, and he ministered there until his coming to Toronto as a member of the faculty of Knox College in the year 1873. During these three years he lectured in apologetics in the Montreal Presbyterian College.

For the past 36 years he has been closely identified with Knox College, and the demise of the late Principal Caven in December, 1904, became acting principal and chairman of the Senate of the college, which position he held with great acceptance until the appointment of Rev. Alfred Gandier, as principal in November, 1908.

During these four years he was also ex-officio a member of the University Senate.

His professional chair at Knox College was that of systematic theology, his best energies being devoted to a course of lectures on the gospels and the life of Christ. He received the degree of D.D. from Queen's College, Kingston, in 1883, and of LL.D. from Toronto University in 1906.

Rev. Dr. MacLaren was a picturesque figure, and acting member of the Presbyterian General Assembly. He was for 16 years convener of its foreign mission committee. In 1884 he was elected moderator of the General Assembly of Canada.

BLOODSHED NOT OVER

Spanish Authorities are Now Exacting Retribution

London, Aug. 5.—The Barcelona correspondent of The Telegraph says that for the present quiet is restored, yet there are certain doubts whether the revolution has received its death blow. Martial law is still in force. The civil guards and police, armed with rifles, still patrol the streets. The wholesale shooting of prisoners after court-martial still goes on at the Fortress of Montjuich. Rumor states that the revolutionists will recommence outrages unless the remaining prisoners are released. Arrests continue on a large scale. Prisoners are constantly seen with their hands tied behind their backs and escorted by civil guards. Two well known journalists of Anarchistic tendencies were arrested Monday. Many officers and soldiers are deserting and crossing the frontier. Many bodies have been found under the ruins of the convents. Members of the Red Cross can be still seen transporting charred remains. Optimists should not omit to note the large bloodstains on the uniforms of the Red Cross men.

The correspondent, in a despatch dated Monday, describes children playing at revolution, shooting at each other with toy rifles, and crying "Viva la Republica." He declares it would take volumes to describe the desolation now spreading its cloak over Barcelona. In speaking of the convent Church of the Magdalen, he says: "The whole place is a heap of ruins, which are still smoking, although the place was set on fire five days ago. In the garden there were thirty vaults where dead sisters were buried."

AVIATORS WILL BE CAUTIOUS

Petawawa Camp, Aug. 5.—So rapid has been the progress of assembling Baddeck No. 1 that unless something unforseen happens the new aerodrome will be completely set up by Friday. The framework is ready for the motor, one wing and bow control have been attached, and the other wing is nearly ready.

A feature of the new machine is the entire absence of parts which cause any air resistance. The conical shaped gasoline tank is not seen, and the space formed by the construction of the double surfaces is utilized for the purpose. The radiator, common with all automobile motors, is inserted at the side. Wood has been displaced by steel and aluminum for the body.

Stories that flights over the Ottawa River may be attempted are fictitious. All tests will be developed when the performance of the aerodrome is seen. The aviators will proceed with caution.

FRENCH GOLD FOR CANADA

Montreal, Aug. 5.—Lemoyne De Martigny, a French Canadian banker, who has for twenty years resided in Paris, where he also represents L. J. Forget & Co., is now in the city and says that the time is very ripe for educational work amongst French capitalists as to the resources of the Dominion.

They are, he says, particularly well disposed towards us, and all they want is the knowledge that the investment is safe.

He says it was a great pity that C.P.R. shares had not got into the hands of French investors, when they went to Hollanders many years ago for such a transaction would have been a great "ad" for Canada all these years on the French money market.

SOMNAMBULIST PLUNGES TO DEATH

St. John, N.B., Aug. 5.—Victor Nicholson, a 15-year-old boy, plunged from a third storey window last night and fell 40 feet, crushing his skull, from the effects of which he died.

Nicholson was a somnambulist and arose from his bed while asleep. His mother heard a noise in his room and rushed in to find her son climbing out of the widow. She attempted to catch him but could not.

WAS KILLED BY TIGHT LACING

Cincinnati, Aug. 5.—Miss Elsie Gasser, eighteen years old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Gasser of No. 2,419 West McMicken avenue, is dead. Dr. Gustave Strohbach, the family physician, says her death was caused by the tight lacing of corsets and clothes.

Miss Gasser was stricken about ten days ago with what appeared to be appendicitis. An operation followed, but the surgeon could trace no harm to the appendix. All of the consulting physicians who attended her joined with Dr. Strohbach in saying that the young woman was a victim of fashion.

PROHIBITION IS BAD FOR CITIES

Chicago, Aug. 5.—"That the establishment of prohibition in Chicago, or other large cities, would be impracticable and would put a premium on the illegal sale of intoxicating drinks," was the opinion expressed yesterday by Cardinal James Gibbons of Baltimore.

Coming from the only cardinal of the Roman Church in America, and in Chicago at a time when fifteen thousand Catholic total abstinence advocates are gathering here to adopt measures for a further advancement of their cause, the observations of Cardinal Gibbons are considered of especial importance.

"In the rural parts of the country and in the smaller towns and cities there are signs of progress which must mean widespread prohibition. However much I am in favor of total abstinence, though, I fear that in the larger cities like Chicago it would not prove feasible," he said.

SUICIDES AFTER A WHIPPING

Harrisburg, Aug. 5.—Because she had received a whipping in the morning, thirteen-year-old Clara Braithwaite last evening hanged herself in her father's orchard.

She chose a tree which her father, G. J. Braithwaite, an hotelkeeper, would pass on his way home.

Neighbors, however, discovered the body about 7 o'clock, when it was thought there were signs of life, but as telephone wires were out of order it was not for over an hour that doctors could be secured.

The little girl had hanged herself with a strap, and she had drawn her legs up to be clear of the ground.

It appears the girl had been chastised by her stepmother yesterday morning. She was around the village yesterday in a despondent mood, and was seen in the vicinity in which the body was found. She had been out gathering apples previous to this at a neighbors.

Sugar Beets in the West.

Calgary, Alta., Aug. 5.—It is yet impossible to determine what the yield of sugar beets will be this year, but everything points to even more favorable returns than last year, when from $40 to $116 an acre was paid.

Colleges Cause Race Suicide.

Boston, Aug. 5.—Prof. Emerick of Smith College, a leading educator here, says that the modern college is responsible for race suicide and for the prudence of families which bars infants.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Caused Collision to Prevent Arrest.

Sebastopol, Russia, Aug. 5.—Lieut. Aquilonoff, in command of the submarine sunk off Sebastopol last June by collision with a battleship, with the loss of twenty lives, has been sentenced to five years' penal servitude for embezzling naval funds. The newspapers accuse Aquilonoff of intentionally causing the collision to hush up the embezzlement charges.

Perhaps Fatally Hurt.

Guelph, Aug. 5.—Arthur Skinner, commercial traveler, brother of Dr. Skinner, sustained serious injuries yesterday morning and may not recover. Falling from a load of hay, he was trampled under the feet of the frightened horses.

With the intention of working on the farm for a short time for his health, Skinner had gone to the country. Yesterday morning was his first on the farm.

WHAT OF THE POWER POLICY?

The Power Policy seems to be hanging fire. For a time the Council seemed to be thoroughly alive to the desirability of doing something in the way of commanding cheap power for Peterborough, both for municipal and general purposes. Mr. R. B Rogers, C.E., was appointed, as the newspaper reports show, to make a thorough investigation of Burleigh Falls power, and to report upon it. There was a time limit set by the company, and Mr. McLaughlin is not a mere bluffer. He is a good, solid business man, who understands both the law and the facts. The title of the company to the Burleigh Falls power, which has been much discussed of late, appears to be indefeasible. The company has, apparently, full possession of what it proposes to sell. To omit the river-powers in the proposed new policy, would be to secure a bird with one wing. It must not be supposed that the people are not thinking of these matters. They are thinking deeply regarding them, and it will not do to neglect our opportunities of providing cheap power for the people any more than it would do to ignore the necessity of municipal water for drinking and fire purposes. It is the age of providing ample means for the establishing of industries of all sorts, and the best and surest way of doing so is by providing cheap municipal power.

THE CANADIAN NAVY IDEA

There have been preposterous ideas before this emanating from the Liberal train such as "Free-trade or bust," a Quebec bridge at any price, a tariff that will kill the woollen factory, the wool, and then the sheep, an immigration policy that lowers the race, the standard of living, and the scale of wages, etc., but the wholly Canadian navy idea beats them all. Liberal journals following the Laurier lead lay great stress on the "firm determination" of Canada to maintain her naval independence and to preserve her autonomy and soforth. If a war breaks out Canada is to be consulted pr (by the living jingo!) she won't go into the thing at all. And then if the war is not a righteous one! Whew! Now we are coming to it. A country whose government departments are a hot-bed of corruption, and whose whole administrative service is corrupt to the core, wants to know what the war is about or it won't send its fleet into action. Surely this absurdity isn't true! Yes That is the new naval policy of the Laurier Administration. Why not declare national independence at once! It is plain that that is what we are steering for.

THE BASIS OF LAW

"Bystander" arraigns the Whitney Government regularly each week in a pointed paragraph in the Weekly Sun. The same people who object to this Government's legalising its own doings are most inclined to seek the Government's help for themselves in similar cases of need.

The rights of property are pretty much like those of wrestlers except that the "strangle hold" is not barred. The Government, however, has barred the strangle hold, and the rights of property (that is, the property of a few) are in a commotion accordingly.

What is the basis of law; not the protective or militant basis, but that of ultimate sanction? Manifestly the sense of the pupils brought to as high a state of mental and moral efficiency as possible.

Now the Government, in order to protect the public, has, in the first instance, legalised certain hydro-electric contracts. If the people do not wish to continue them after the whole case has been, with fairness, laid before them, then the Government's action will have been thereby superseded. No irremediable wrong has been done in any case. The hue-and-cry against the Government is based on what we must presume to think is an incorrect view of the power, as well as of the responsibilities, of government. The people said plainly to the Government, "Go on with the hydro-electric scheme, and don't let us be juggled out of it." If the people find that the Government has gone too far, it is for them to say so. Meanwhile, the Whitney administration keeps within the law as interpreted by the courts.

In the Cobalt case, the merits which are now part and parcel of the law, require that bona fides shall characterize the actions of those seeking redress. The consensus of opinion appears to be that the Government did well in rescuing popular rights and property from the purely technical possession of the grabbers. There does not seem to have been any moral wrong-doing, such as some papers try to make out. Mere legal possession is no longer a sufficient reply to the demands for fair play. It is the Government's business to see that the people get fair play. When it ceases to do so, and becomes merely a Justice Dry-as-dust, listening to the learned blather of the lawyers, then it will be high time to do away with it. In the meantime, it seems to be doing extremely well. The Ross Government, if it could be reasonably so called, favored the rights of private property before all others. It had no idea of Protection of the rights of the people as a whole. It gave away that very Niagara power property to favorites for a song, which the Whitney Government is turning to the immense advantage of the people. "Bystander" said nothing about that. The fact is that a man is entitled to no more than he earns. This idea that everything that a man or company finds is, therefore, theirs, is the progeny of a bygone era of greed and privilege. The Cobalt case is a glaring instance of it.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is said that we love what suits our natures best. Probably, Women who "dote on" cats must be mousers, naturally.

It will be observed, from Mr. McLaughlin's letter, that the Burleigh Power Co. has a lease for sixty years of certain rights to water. At the end of sixty years what guarantee is here of what will happen!

The Brockville Recorder says that anyone visiting Belleville has all kinds of luck if he escapes the undertaker. The Belleville journals reply that Brockville people are afflicted with the sleeping sickness. That reminds us of the rivalry that once existed between Lindsay and Caygean.

A great deal of resentment and dissatisfaction has been expressed lately on account of the fact that the Dominion Government has charge over the minerals of the province. All that the province will get is a grant, and the people of Prince Albert look upon the regulation as an unfair one. It is expected that his will figure as the biggest political issue in the next provincial election.—Exchange.

The Weekly Sun keeps hammering at protection, as if protection were supposed to be "something in itself." It is not. It is a process by which the standard of living is maintained, and the home-markets are not allowed to become sweat-markets. Free trade in the last analysis is slavery for the unprotected workingman. He is a victim of the law of supply and demand, which is the most heartless, godless and altogether contemptible weapon of the rich, as against the poor, known to mankind. Let the Sun look at free trade countries. Is the condition of the workingman in Great Britain comparable with his condition in Germany, United States or France? Great Britain's masses are distressed and unhappy. The other countries named, excepting the United States, carry a military load of appalling proportions, and yet maintain their reasonable happiness and prosperity. As Lieut.-Col. Denison, himself a Liberal, says, the comparison between France and England in this particular is most striking.

THIS SHOULD BE ATTENDED TO

People who have been passing the scene of the recent fire at the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets are complaining of the horrible stench which has arisen from the ruins since the fire. Something should be done quickly in regard to the matter, as the health of the citizens in the locality is in danger.

The gentleman who is at the head of the party, Mr. Nugent M. Clougher, is a personal friend of Dr. F. C. Neal, who was largely instrumental in arranging for the present trip to Peterborough.

This is the first of a series of annual trips, with a view to interesting English engineers in the possibilities and resources of Canada.

CORPS VS. CORPS

Real Live Competitions in the Military Competions at the Canadian National

The Military Display and Tournament at the Canadian National Exhibition, Toronto, will have more features of real interest this year than anything of the kind previously attempted in Canada. In such competitions as the Victoria Cross and wrestling on horse-back, corps will be arrayed against corps, the Royal Canadian Dragoons stationed at Toronto, against the Royal Canadian Horse Artillery stationed at Kingston. The rivalry between these corps is very keen, so much so that, the men are also anxious to mix things up a bit with the single stick in the Balaclava Melee, if the permission of the officers can be obtained. However, the officers have not yet decided. Some think a few hard knocks would not hurt the men, while others are inclined to think that the competition would resolve itself into something too much like actual warfare.

Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

"Only an hour! Oh, how unkind! How should I punish him, Lennie?" Lillian looked round at Kaine with a lingering, caressing glance.

He bent toward her in quick response and answered in a whisper.

She laughed and replied in an equally low tone.

Loder, to whom both remarks had been inaudible, dropped into the vacant seat beside Mary Esseltyn. He had the unsettled feeling that things were not falling out exactly as he had calculated.

"What is the play like?" he hazarded as he looked toward his companion. At all times social trivialities bored him. Tonight they were intolerable. He had come to fight, but all at once it seemed that there was no opponent. Lillian's attitude disturbed him; her careless graciousness, her evident ignoring of him for Kaine, might mean nothing, but also it might mean much.

"It is a good play," she responded. "I like it better than the book. You've read the book, of course?"

"No." Loder tried hard to fix his thoughts.

"It's amusing, but far fetched."

"Indeed?" He picked up the programme lying on the edge of the box. His ears were strained to catch the tone of Lillian's voice as she laughed and whispered with Kaine.

"Yes; men exchanging identities, you know."

He looked up and caught the girl's self possessed glance. "Oh?" he said. "Indeed?" Then again he looked away. It was intolerable, this feeling of being caged up! A sense of anger crept through his mind. It almost seemed that Lillian had brought him there to prove that she had finished with him, had cast him aside, having used him for the day's excitement as she had used her poodles, her Persian cats, her crystal gazing. All at once the impotency and uncertainty of his position goaded him. Turning swiftly in his seat, he glanced back to where she sat slowly swaying her fan, her pale, golden hair and her pale colored gown delicately silhouetted against the background of the box.

"What's your idea of the play, Lillian?" he said abruptly. To his own ears there was a note of challenge in his voice.

She looked around languidly. "Oh, it's quite amusing," she said. "It makes a delicious farce—absolutely French."

"French?"

"Quite. Don't you think so, Lennie?"

"Oh, quite," Kaine agreed.

"They mean that it's so very light and yet so very subtle, Mr. Chilcote," Mary Esseltyn explained.

"Indeed?" he said. "Then my imagination was at fault. I thought the piece was serious."

"Serious!" Lillian smiled again. "Why, where's your sense of humor? The motive of the play debars all seriousness."

Loder looked down at the programme still between his hands. "What is the motive?" he asked.

Lillian waved her fan once or twice, then closed it softly. "Love is the motive," she said.

Now, the balancing—the adjusting of impression and inspiration—is, of all processes in life, the most delicately fine. The simple sound of the word "love" coming at that precise juncture changed the whole current of Loder's thought. It fell like a seed, and like a seed in ultraproductive soil, it bore fruit with amazing rapidity.

The word itself was small and the manner in which it was spoken trivial, but Loder's mind was attracted and held by it. The last time it had met his ears his environment had been vastly different, and this echo of it in an uncongenial atmosphere stung him to resentment. The vision of Eve, the thought of Eve, became suddenly dominant.

"Love?" he repeated coldly. "So love is the motive."

"Yes." This time it was Kaine who responded in his methodical, contented voice. "The motive of the play is love, as Lillian says. And when was love ever serious in a three act comedy—on or off the stage?" He leaned forward in his seat, screwed in his eyeglass and lazily scanned the stalls.

The orchestra was playing a Hungarian dance, its erratic harmonies and wild alternations of expression falling abruptly across the pinks and blues, the gilding and lights of the pretty, conventional theater. Something in the suggestion of unfitness appealed to Loder. It was the force of the real as opposed to the ideal. With a new expression on his face, he turned again to Kaine.

"And how does it work?" he said. "This treatment that you find so—French?"

His voice as well as his expression had changed. He still spoke quietly, but he spoke with interest. He was no longer conscious of his vague uneasiness; a fresh chord had been struck in his mind, and his curiosity had responded to it. For the first time it occurred to him that love—the dangerous, mysterious garden whose paths had so suddenly stretched out before his own feet—was a pleasure ground that possessed many doors and an infinite number of keys. He was stirred by the desire to peer through another entrance than his own, to see the secret, alluring byways from another standpoint. He waited with interest for the answer to his question.

For a second or two Kaine continued to survey the house; then his eyeglass dropped from his eye, and he turned round.

"To understand the thing," he said pleasantly, "you must have read the book. Have you read the book?"

"No, Mr. Kaine," Mary Esseltyn interrupted. "Mr. Chilcote hasn't read the book."

Lillian laughed. "Outline the story for him, Lennie," she said. "I love to see other people taking pains."

Kaine glanced at her admiringly. "Well, to begin with," he said amiably, "two men, an artist and a millionaire, exchange lives. See?"

"You may presume that he does see, Lennie."

"Right! Well, then, as I say, these beggars change—identities. They're as like as pins, and to all appearances one chap's the other chap—and the other chap's the first chap. See?"

Loder laughed. The newly quickened interest was enhanced by treading on dangerous ground.

"Well, they change for a lark, of course, but there's one fact they both overlooked. They're men, you know, and they forget these little things!" He laughed delightedly. "They overlook the fact that one of 'em has got a wife!"

There was a crash of music from the orchestra. Loder sat straighter in his seat. He was conscious that the blood had rushed into his face.

"Oh, indeed?" he said quickly. "One of them had a wife?"

"Exactly!" Again Kaine chuckled. "And the point of the joke is that the wife is the least larky person under the sun. See?"

A second hot wave passed over Loder's face. A sense of mental disgust filled him. This, then, was the wonderful garden seen from another standpoint! He looked from Lillian, graceful, skeptical and shallow, to the young girl beside him, so frankly modern in her appreciation of life. This, then, was love as seen by the eyes of the world—the world that accepts, judges and condemns in a slang phrase or two! Very slowly the blood receded from his face.

"And the end of the story?" he asked in a strained voice.

"The end? Oh, usual end, of course. Chap makes a mess of things and the bubble bursts."

"And the end of the wife?"

"The end of the wife?" Lillian broke in, with a little laugh. "Why, the end of all stupid people who, instead of going through life with a lot of delightfully human stumbles, come just one big cropper. She naturally ends in the divorce court!"

"Outline the story for him, Lennie," she said.

They all laughed boisterously. Then laughter, story and denouement were all drowned in a tumultuous crash of music. The orchestra ceased; there was a slight hum of applause, and the curtain rose on the second act.

CHAPTER XXXI.

A FEW minutes before the curtain fell on the second act of "Other Men's Shoes" Loder rose from his seat and made his apologies to Lillian.

At any other moment he might have pondered over her manner of accepting them—the easy indifference with which she let him go. But vastly keener issues were claiming his attention, issues whose results were wide and black.

He left the theater and, refusing the overtures of cabmen, set himself to walk to Chilcote's house. His face was hard and emotionless as he hurried forward, but the chaos in his mind found expression in the unevenness of his pace. To a strong man the confronting of difficulties is never alarming and is often fraught with inspiration, but this applies essentially to the difficulties evolved through the weakness, the folly or the force of another; when they arise from within the matter is of another character. It is in presence of his own soul, and in that presence alone, that a man may truly measure himself.

As Loder walked onward, treading the whole familiar length of traffic filled street, he realized for the first time that he was standing before that solemn tribunal—that the hour had come when he must answer to himself for himself. The longer and deeper an oblivion the more painful the awakening. For months the song of self had beaten about his ears, deadening all other sounds; now abruptly that song had ceased, not considerately, not lingeringly, but with a suddenness that made the succeeding silence very terrible.

He walked onward, keeping his direction unseeingly. He was passing through the fire as surely as though actual flames rose about his feet, and whatever the result, whatever the fiber of the man who emerged from the ordeal, the John Loder who had hewn his way through the past weeks would exist no more. The triumphant egotist, the strong man who by his own strength had kept his eyes upon one point, refusing to see in other directions, had ceased to be.

Keen though it was, his realization of this crisis in his life had come with characteristic slowness. When Lillian Astrupp had given her dictum, when the music of the orchestra had ceased and the curtain risen on the second act of the play, nothing but a sense of stupefaction had filled his mind. In that moment the great song was silenced, not by any portentous episode, not by any incident that could have lent dignity to its end, but, with the full measure of life's irony, by a trivial social commonplace. In the first sensation of blank loss his faculties had been numbed. In the quarter of an hour that followed the rise of the curtain he had sat staring at the stage, seeing nothing, hearing nothing, filled with the enormity of the void that suddenly surrounded him. Then from habit, from constitutional tendency, he had begun slowly and perseveringly to draw first one thread and then another from the tangle of his thoughts, to forge with doubt and difficulty the chain that was to draw him toward the future.

It was upon this same incomplete and yet tenacious chain that his mind worked as he traversed the familiar streets and at last gained the house he had so easily learned to call home.

As he inserted the latchkey and felt it move smoothly in the lock a momentary revolt against his own judgment, his own censorship, swung him sharply toward reaction. But it is only the blind who can walk without a tremor on the edge of an abyss, and there was no longer a bandage across his eyes. The reaction flared up like a strip of lighted paper; then, like a strip of lighted paper, it dropped back to ashes. He pushed the door open and slowly crossed the hall.

The mounting of a staircase is often the index to a man's state of mind. As Loder ascended the stairs of Chilcote's house his shoulders lacked their stiffness, his head was no longer erect. He moved as though his feet were weighted. He had ceased to be the man of achievement whose smallest opinion compels consideration. In the privacy of solitude he was the mere human flotsam to which he had once compared himself—the flotsam that, dreaming it has found a harbor, wakes to find itself the prey of the incoming tide.

He paused at the head of the stairs to rally his resolutions. Then, still walking heavily, he passed down the corridor to Eve's room. It was suggestive of his character that, having made his decision, he did not dally over its performance. Without waiting to knock, he turned the handle and walked into the room.

It looked precisely as it always looked, but to Loder the rich, subdued coloring of books and flowers—the whole air of culture and repose that the place conveyed—seemed to hold a deeper meaning than before, and it was on the instant that his eyes, crossing the inanimate objects, rested on their owner that the true force of his position, the enormity of the task before him, made itself plain. Realization came to him with vivid, overwhelming force, and it must be accounted to his credit in the summing of his qualities that then, in that moment of trial, the thought of retreat, the thought of yielding, did not present itself.

Eve was standing by the mantelpiece. She wore a beautiful gown, a long string of diamonds was twisted about her neck, and her soft, black hair was coiled high after a foreign fashion and held in place by a large diamond comb. As he entered she turned hastily, almost nervously, and looked at him with the rapid, searching glance he had learned to expect from her. Then almost directly her expression changed to one of quick concern. With a faint exclamation of alarm she stepped forward.

"What has happened?" she said. "You look like a ghost."

Loder made no answer. Moving into the room, he paused by the oak table that stood between the fireplace and the door.

They made an unconscious tableau as they stood there—he with his hard, set face, she with her heightened color, her inexplicably bright eyes. They stood completely silent for a space—a space that for Loder held no suggestion of time. Then, finding the tension unbearable, Eve spoke again.

"Has anything happened?" she asked. "Is anything wrong?"

Had he been less engrossed the intensity of her concern might have struck him, but in a mind so harassed as his there was only room for one consideration—the consideration of himself. The sense of her question reached him, but its significance left him untouched.

"Is anything wrong?" she reiterated for the second time.

By an effort he raised his eyes. "No man, he thought, since the beginning of the world was ever set a task so cruel as his. Painfully and slowly his lips parted.

"Everything in the world is wrong," he said in a slow, hard voice.

Eva said nothing, but her color suddenly deepened.

Again Loder was unobservant, but with the dogged resolution that marked him he forced himself to his task.

"You despise lies," he said at last. "Tell me what you would think of a man whose whole life was one elaborated lie." The words were slightly exaggerated, but their utterance, their painfully brusque sincerity, precluded all suggestion of effect. Resolutely holding her gaze, he repeated his question.

"Tell me! Answer me! I want to know."

Eve's attitude was difficult to read. She stood twisting the string of diamonds between her fingers.

"Tell me!" he said again.

She continued to look at him for a moment; then, as if some fresh impulse moved her, she turned away from him toward the fire.

"I cannot," she said. "We—I—I could not set myself to judge—any one."

Loder held himself rigidly in hand.

"Eve," he said quietly, "I was at the Arcadian tonight. The play was 'Other Men's Shoes.' I suppose you've read the book 'Other Men's Shoes?'"

She was leaning on the mantelpiece, and her face was invisible to him. "Yes, I have read it," she said without looking round.

"It is the story of an extraordinary likeness between two men. Do you believe such a likeness possible? Do you think such a thing could exist?" He spoke with difficulty. His brain and tongue both felt numb.

Eve let the diamond chain slip from her fingers. "Yes," she said nervously. "Yes, I do believe it. Such things have been"—

Loder caught at the words. "You're quite right," he said quickly. "You're quite right. The thing is possible. I've proved it. I know a man so like me that you, even you, could not tell us apart."

Eve was silent, still averting her face.

In dire difficulty he labored on. "Eve," he began once more, "such a likeness is a serious thing—a terrible danger, a terrible temptation. Those who have no experience of it cannot possibly gauge its pitfalls"— Again he paused, but again the silent figure by the fireplace gave him no help.

THE EGYPTIANS' SECRET.

The Egyptians of Pharoah's time were a wonderful people. The pyramids, for instance, put our modern buildings to shame. Where such huge blocks of stone were carved—how they were moved and put in place—are mysteries to modern minds.

The Egyptians were skilled physicians, too. We know that they used fruit juices in treating many diseases. Some years ago, a physician in Ottawa discovered a method of combining the juices of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, by which the most remarkable results have been obtained.

Whether "Fruit-a-tives" (these combined fruit juices in tablet form) are a re-discovery of the prescriptions of the ancient Egyptians, will probably never be known.

Certainly, the ancients never had a more effective remedy than "Fruit-a-tives" for all Stomach, Liver, Kidney and Bowel Troubles. "Fruit-a-tives" are sold by dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial box, 25c—or sent postpaid on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE LIVERY STABLE DOG.

Some Ways In Which He Differs From the Fashionable Pets.

The common livery stable dog is totally unlike the "powder puff" or "toots and skigums" dog, but his disposition is infinitely better. To lie on a cushion and growl and snap at the hand that would caress it is considered the height of folly in the livery stable variety.

The livery stable dog approaches you ingratiatingly and offers you a dirty paw to shake. After you have shaken it he solemnly gives you the other. Then he crawls up in your lap and licks you on the mouth.

The livery stable canine is a most industrious digger of holes. The theory is that he is going to lie down in the hole he digs, but he does no such thing. He goes and lies down right in the middle of the sidewalk, where people will have to step over him. He will never get out of anybody's way. He even lies down in the middle of the street and tries to make carts, wagons and automobiles avoid him.

He doesn't enjoy as large a vocabulary as the powder puff or skigums dog. A phrase like "Does ums want ums itty bass?" would scare him to death. His advantages have not been such as to acquaint him with such hifalutin talk, but he does know a few simple phrases like "Git to blazes out of here, you darned pest!" He understands that perfectly.

The American Youth.

If the truth were told most young American men are not especially interesting. They do not keep up their reading. They have a national obtundity when it comes to music, to art, to literature, nor do many of them take any of these things at all seriously. The young among them are not good conversationalists. Our cleverest men are monologists pure and simple. They lecture admirably. They are born orators along modified lines. They are inevitable story tellers. None of this is conversation, and women like conversation, like its courtesies, which at least pretend a little interest when their turn comes in the game. Knowledge of people and affairs outside our own country pricks more than one bubble about our young men.—Anna A. Rogers in Atlantic.

A very pretty wedding was solemnized yesterday morning at 8.30, at the residence of Mr. Jas. Brownlee, Chamberlain street, when his second daughter, Miss Margaret, was united in marriage to Mr. William Young, of Owen Sound. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Mr. Bennett, who is supplying at St. Andrew's church, in the presence of only the immediate relatives. The bride and groom were unattended. The bride looked very pretty in a dress of pale blue silk mull.

After the ceremony, a wedding breakfast was served, after which Mr. and Mrs. Young left on the 8 o'clock train for Owen Sound, where they will in future reside.

The bride's going-away costume was of champagne chiffon trimmed with sky blue.

NUMBERS FOR THE REQUEST CONCERT

Six Have Been Named for To-morrow Nights Band Concert

In connection with the request programme to be played to-morrow night by the 57th Regimental band, the Review has been given the names of six selections. They are: Hemack's Hits, No 6, which the band has not played yet; Rainbow, Barber of Seville, Dublin Daisies, The Gingerbread Man, and William Tell.

It will be convenient for the band to play the first four numbers, but the score of The Gingerbread man is not in the band's library, and it would require longer notice to rehearse William Tell before Rossini's difficult overture could be given with proper effect.

Mr. Giddon has received a request for three numbers to be given at the band concert to-morrow night. These, with the four numbers that will be played as mentioned above, makes seven selections altogether, and only two more will be required to fill out the programme.

The names of the three selections suggested to Mr. Giddon are: Dervish Chorus in the Soudan, and the scores of the two comic operas, The Yankee Consul, and The Explorers.

OUTFIT WAS BACKED DOWN HILL

Several citizens near the market square this morning had a good laugh this morning at the expense of a Jew with a horse and waggon, who was hauling the debris away from the scene of the recent fire at the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets. The driver was preparing to unload the waggon near the end of Charlotte street, but, unfortunately, the horse was backed up too far, and the result was that driver, waggon and animal all went down the hill into the old river-bed.

COUNCIL WILL NOW HAVE TO CONSIDER THE FRANCHISE

Only Progress Made at Meeting Yesterday Afternoon Was That the Matter Was Referred to the Whole Council—Thirty Years is a Long Time—What Might Happen?

At another special meeting of the Manufacturers' Committee held yesterday afternoon it was decided that the matter of the thirty-year franchise be left over for the whole Council to consider.

Those present at the meeting were Mayor Rush, Chairman Gillespie, Ald. Morrow, Bradburn, Hicks and Duffus, and Mr. R. H. D. Hall, city solicitor. Mr. Stuart and Mr. Larmonth represented the Light and Power Co. When asked by the chairman whether he had any further concessions to make, Mr. Stuart stated "that the company could not do any better. We might come down to 33 1-3 if allowed to charge between 25 and 30 cents for meter rent, said Mr. Stuart. The fact that the city would be securing a greater control over the streets found favor with the members of the company, but thirty years was a long time, and at this point they were puzzled as to which way to act in the matter. Another point in the franchise is that the company will not guarantee to go ahead and build the railway extension. The committee were not inclined to look favorably at this, as there is a feeling that the company is not making enough concessions for what the city is giving, or would give if the franchise was granted.

After considerable discussion on the subject, it was moved by Ald. Morrow and seconded by Ald. Duffus, that the matter be referred to the whole Council.

Mrs. William Chase, said to have been a relative of President Taft, was struck by a train and killed at Middletown, N.Y.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

WARNING FOR ORCHARD ROBBERS

Two Youths Fined $1.00 at Police Court This Morning

The season of the year has arrived when the young lad gathers about him a number of companions and goes "swiping apples," or other fruit, as the case may be. In many cases, the "orchard robbers" are not content to take a small quantity and behave themselves, but try to make things unpleasant by using the passerby as a target at which to hurl some of the stolen fruit. The young lads will be much better off if they take the tip and keep out of other people's orchards. Two youths appeared before the magistrate this morning, charged with stealing apples yesterday. Both pleaded guilty and were each fined one dollar, to be paid in three days. Not content with taking and eating the fruit, they threw several at a younger boy in the street, hitting him about the body, but on this charge they were allowed to go on suspended sentence.

LETTER ON THE HORSE EPIDEMIC

Vetenary Surgeon Claims the Bad Water Caused Most of the Trouble

Dr. W. H. Blanchard has the following to say in regard to the epidemic which has broken out among the horses of this locality. The letter was written to the Kingston Standard:—

To the Editor of the Standard.

Dear Sir,—In regards to the statement in the Daily Standard, Thursday, (July 29, "Fifty horses dead in the city of Peterborough". It is not that number. In fact I do not exactly know how many, but quite a few of the horses have died I know, but not that number in a radius of five miles. The epizootic referred to is correct. It is the third year we have had the same, only this year it is worse than in former years. I myself have several cases, and only lost one, and that case had sunstroke for several days before the disease came on.

Now, in regards to the name of the epizootic, it is electric fever. I know, because I had it myself in South Africa, and the symptoms are the same, and so is the treatment. In regards to the report that it is caused by grass, it is not so "alone," because I have treated cases which did not have any. But, if any horse is eating grass in a low swampy pasture, then you could easily understand it. So it stands to reason that it is drinking bad water which caused all or most of the enteric in South Africa. If I am not mistaken we lost more men from enteric and dysentery than from bullets.

Yours truly,
W. H. BLANCHARD,
Vetinary Surgeon

Peterborough, July 31, 1909.

A Complaint

To the Editor of The Review.

Dear Sir,—Please allow me, through your valuable paper, to ask whose duty it is to see that our streets in Peterborough are not allowed to remain in a filthy condition, especially through the summer months. I would like to call their attention to Chambers street. One has only to stand at the corner of Hunter and Chambers streets and look north. There he can easily see a collection of ashes, boxes, papers, and samples of old rags which would give discredit to any back yard, and this right in the heart of our city.

Thanking you very kindly for your valuable space.

One Who Lives on the Street.

Is God in This House

To the Editor of The Review.

Sir,—I noticed a letter in your issue of Monday evening from Mr. E. Butcher, not being pleased with the S. A. in playing past the street meeting of the City Mission. He also speaks about the courtesy to the lady who was speaking when the Army went by. Mr. Butcher's memory must be very poor, for, if he will remember, two weeks ago last Sunday as we came by, the band stopped playing as one of the City Mission ladies was speaking. I consider that the band gave all the reverence that was possible to give, but when we came alongside of their ring Mr. Butcher, in spite of the young lady, exorting the crowd to seek "God," shouted at the top of his voice, "Some God's way," twice, which he meant as an insult to the Salvation Army followers. You could hear him a block away. We all thought that he should hang his head in shame at his interruption of the lady's address. If he was not ashamed, the people standing around were. Now, Mr. Editor, what was the use of the band stopping when Mr. Butcher made nearly as much noise as the band did? I think this accounts for the band not stopping last Sunday, as they don't believe in being insulted on the street. They don't get any pay for playing. They play for the honor and glory of God and for the good of mankind. I think Mr. Butcher should read his Bible right, and perhaps a little more, and not be such a busy-body about other men's matters. Let him find 1. Peter, 4, 15. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your valuable space. I remain,

Yours truly,
AN OLD COMRADE.

It is a great pity that the good which has been, and is being, done by these "seekers after God" is being also cast into a shadow of recrimination and ill-feeling. "To err is human; to forgive, divine." This should be more frequently thought upon. There is an old Zouave motto which, being translated, says, "Love God and go thy way," which means "Practise the virtues of the simple Christian, and leave the rest to God," for "Vengeance is Mine saith the Lord," and to Him let all forms of admonishment and punishment be left. We venture to suggest this in the true interests of both parties.—Ed.

SPOKE ON SIGHT TO THE BLIND

Splendid Service at Evangilistic Meeting Last Night — Mr. Wheeler to Speak To-night

Quite a number gathered at the evangelistic tent last night, and the service commenced sharp at 8 o'clock and closed at 9.15. Mr. W. J. Whelen was leader, and Mr. A. G. Young speaker. The meeting started with a service of song. The speaker took his text from St. John's Gospel, 9, 25. He spoke of Christ as sometimes presenting Himself as a shepherd, sometimes as a Saviour, and in this particular case as the "Light of the World." The man before Him was blind, and his greatest need was light. The disciples asked the reason for the condition of the man, but Jesus saw in the man a possible witness for Himself, and one who may manifest the glory of God.

Jesus used His own method of cure. He asked the man to act on it. The man did so, without question, accepting what was done as the plan of God for him. The result was he saw, and he knew it. He was questioned severely by his friends, and by the Pharisees, but he did not swerve. He knew he could see. He knew Jesus did it and he was led to call Him a prophet, and later the Son of God. The people were strongly exhorted to fall in with the plan of God for them, and if any needed light or peace, to come to the same Christ who could come to the same Christ who could even now give knowledge of sins forgiven.

The service to-night will commence at the usual hour. Mr. W. J. Whelen will be the speaker, and Mr. S. H. Poper will lead. Good singing. All are welcome to these services.

LOCAL MAN SEES LAUNCH ACCIDENT, AT KINGSTON

Mr. W. Campbell on Spot When Gasoline Explosion Occurred on Launch Owned by Mr. R. W. Travers of This City---Not Much Damage Done.

Some days ago an article appeared in these columns, telling of an accident to a gasoline launch near Kingston. The launch was the property of Mr. W. R. Travers, of the Bank of Montreal, and it was being overhauled, prior to being shipped to this city for use on the Otonabee. In some manner which is not quite clear the gasoline in the boat became ignited and a bad explosion occurred.

Mr. W. P. Campbell, of the Best Stove Company, was in Kingston at the time, and was but a short distance from the spot when the explosion occurred. While he did not see the events leading up to the accident, still he saw and heard the explosion proper, and according to his account it was of no mean proportions. A dull roar and a bright flash and the boat was a mass of white flames. The men worked hard to save it, and poured pail after pail of water on to the boat. At first the water was of little use, and merely served to spread the fire, but by degrees it had its effect, and the flames were quenched.

While a good deal of damage was done to the launch, still it was not as bad as would be expected, the fire seeming to direct its efforts to burning up the floating gasoline, rather than to attack the woodwork. However, it will be some time yet before the boat will be ready for the water.

TROUBLE WITH UNION AT THE PUBLIC LIBRARY, GEORGE ST.

There is trouble at the new public library building. Stone-cutters were being taken on to dress Longford stone but when they learned that part of the stone was to be dressed at Longford by non-union men they refused to go on. A fine of $50 a day is the penalty inflicted by the union for going on with the work under the conditions. A fine will now be levied against the non-union workers at Longford which they will have to pay before being admitted to a stone-cutters' union anywhere in America, if they do not quit the job at once or join the union. A good deal of resentment is felt by the cutters in the city against permission being given to have the work done outside the city and in the way described. Meanwhile it is understood the contractor proposes ignoring the union men and going on with the work at Longford, if possible, where it will all be done by the non-unionists.

PETERBOROUGH MAN GIVES EVIDENCE IN GYPSY CASE

The Ottawa Free Press says:—The Bulgarian and Hull gypsies were conspicuous again in the Hull court this morning when the case against Katrina Miguel, Alexis Miguel, Purima Miguel, Eli Stokes, John Stokes and Mrs. Eli and Mrs. John Stokes for perjury in the kidnapping trial was commenced.

George Mitchell, one of three witnesses brought up from Peterborough by the prosecution, was a special constable sworn in at Peterborough to see that there was no disorder at the gypsy camp. He testified that there was a wedding ceremony at the camp though it was not after the custom of this country. He believed that some money had been paid for the girl.

On the court table, as an exhibit, stood a large tray, a bottle which had contained vichy water and some gold. The 200 pounds in gold paid for the little Katrina Miguel, the bride on the occasion of the wedding, was supposed to have been deposited on the tray.

RESIDENTS NEAR BURNED WAREHOUSE HAVE COMPLAINT

There is an odor in no way suggestive to sweet smelling incense coming from the rotting peas in the burned warehouse at the corner of Simcoe and Bethune streets, that was owned by Florence & Sons. The air is so heavily laden with the objectionable smell that the residents in the vicinity are complaining vigorously about it.

The question is, who is to remove the peas? The insurance company carrying the policy on the premises refuse too do so, and Mr. Florence won't tackle the job.

Mayor Rush has promised that unless the nuisance is removed to-day he will issue an order for its removal made out to-morrow.

AN EXPLANATION OF WHY THE BAND STOPPED PLAYING

There is some explanation called for in connection with the 57th Band refusing to continue to play on the moonlight excursion on the steamer Otonabee on Monday evening. The band had played one selection when it was discovered that a non-union orchestra was supplying music for dancing. As the 57th is a union band there was nothing left to do but stop playing, not at all as a matter of personal inclination on the part of the musicians, but because the members of the band did not want to violate the rules of the union. For the infraction they would be liable to a fine of $10 from the local branch and $25 from headquarters.

The members regretted that they could not see their way clear to finish out the evening on the boat, but the incident has not aroused the slightest animosity between the band and the navigation company, the latter conceding that the course taken was the only one open under the circumstances.

JEFF GLAD THAT JOHNSON'S MONEY HAS BEEN POSTED

When Sam Berger, manager for Jeffries, was informed by a reporter for the Evening World, yesterday afternoon, that Johnson had posted $5,000 forfeit, Berger expressed considerable delight. "Well, I guess there will be a fight," he said.

"But how about these conditions named by Johnson?" asked the reporter.

"Conditions! What conditions?" asked Berger, in surprise.

"Why, that Jeffries name the time and place for the fight before he goes to Europe."

"Well, say, isn't that about the richest thing you ever heard. How can Jeffries name any time or place for the fight—particularly a place—before a bid has been received from a promoter? Say, we would like to know when and where just as well as Johnson, but we are not mind readers.

"Now, I'll tell you just what you tell the readers of the Evening World about the matter," continued Berger. "You say that we are delighted that Johnson has posted his $5,000 and that we hope it's real stuff and that it is in hands where it can remain. You can also say that if Johnson means business he should come here to New York as soon as the bids for the fight are in, and he and myself will go over them, and anything that looks reasonably good to us both we will accept."

JEFFRIES HAS NO CLAIM TO THE HEAVYWEIGHT TITLE

He Retired and Gave Championship to Man Who Was Beaten by Tommy Burns--Boilermaker Won't Strengthen His Standing by Disputing Johnson's Place as Champion

When Jim Jeffries claims the heavyweight championship of the world he is four flushing. There's no doubt that Jeffries is a good man, and that the white people would like to see him retain the title for the white race, and all that, but in justice to Johnson it must be said that Jeffries has no more claim to the heavyweight championship than the rankest fifth-rater.

When a champion retires from active work in the ring it is generally taken for granted that he loses all claim to his title, and quite properly so, for he ceases to defend it. Jeffries forsook the roped arena and passed on the heavyweight honors to Marvin Hart. Hart was defeated by Tommy Burns, and Burns was beaten by Johnson. In spite of Jeffries' contentions, Johnson is champion, and it would show much better taste on the boilermaker's part if he would concede the negro the honors he has legitimately earned, and to meet him in a championship battle for the title, without so much foundationless talk about being champion.

A short time ago Jeff posted his forfeit with Robert Edgren, the sporting editor of the New York Evening World. There seems much roundabout business in Johnson putting up his forfeit for the match. He left his $5,000 with Eddie Smith, sporting editor of the Chicago American, instead of with Edgren, and Smith has forwarded the champion's money to New York, but not to Edgren, it is claimed. So the question of who shall hold the money has not yet been decided, and the fact of the forfeits being up does not promise a fight for the heavyweight title.

No reason has been given why Johnson did not forward his end of the forfeit directly to Edgren, but it is a comparatively safe surmise to say that the black objects to the New York man holding the money on account of the unkind editorial jabs that Edgren has made at the champion.

THE ANNUAL STONEY LAKE REGATTA CIVIC HOLIDAY; THE RACING PROGRAMME

The programme of events for the Stony annual regatta this year is an interesting one, and judging from the interest being shown in the regatta by the cottagers, summer visitors and those likely to be competitors in the races, the event should be highly successful. The date fixed this year is Monday, Aug. 9, and the racing commences at 1.30 sharp. The committee has been very thorough in making arrangements, and valuable and valuable prizes will be offered. In the evening an "at home" will be held at the pavilion at Juniper Island. A concert will be held from 9 to 10 o'clock, and dancing will commence at 10.

The programme of events is as follows:—

GOOD RACES FOR CIVIC HOLIDAY

From present indications the Victoria Harriers' meet, at Riverside Park on Civic Holiday, will prove a rousing success. Many entries for the races are coming in, and the secretary is being kept busy looking after the many inquiries as to the races. The programme includes distances from 100 yards up to three miles, with a couple of handicap affairs thrown in.

The Victoria Harriers is a new organization in this city but it has been going ahead with rapid strides and the success of the meet is assured.

AN AMERICAN DAN McCABE

Venice, O, July 31.—Venice fans think their town has Philadelphia beaten when it comes to having a freak phenomenal ball player.

The Quaker City has a one-armed lad named Mooney playing second base on an amateur team. The Venice ball team has one-handed pitcher who has won seven straight games this season by remarkable work in the box. He is Joe Brumer, clerk in the Venice post office.

Brumer has only his right hand. He received his injuries in a railroad wreck several years ago. Despite this handicap, he continued pitching ball, and has done so single-handed for three years. Each year he gets better. He can bat too, having made six hits, one a two-bagger, in the seven games.

LAWN BOWLING

The Keene Bowling Club met two Peterborough rinks last Friday and were defeated by the narrow margin of six shots. Taking into consideration that the Keene club is in its infancy, the result is by no means discouraging, when pitted against such experienced bowlers as the Peterborough club. The games were played in the afternoon and after tea.

The afternoon results were as follows—

| Keene. | | Peterborough. | |
|---|---|---|---|
| W. E. Gillett | | R. N. Merrit | |

Majority for Keene, 8 shots.

After supper, the rinks having changed, and Peterborough retaining the same grass, Peterborough secured 24 to Keene's 10.

MR. JOHNSON TALKS FIGHT

Heavyweight Champion in Toronto—Not Sure Jeff Will be on Deck

The Toronto Telegram says:—Big Jack Johnson, the world's heavyweight champion pugilist, arrived in town at noon, accompanied by his new manager and backer, George Little, of Chicago. The big fellow drove his new motor car himself, and they came from London, 115 miles, in 4 1-2 hours. They met with no accidents, not even a puncture, though they came through some bad roads. The machine insisted on skidding at every graveyard along the route, but the champion isn't superstitious.

MONEY PUT UP.

Mr. Little is not at all sanguine of Jeffries' meeting Johnson. He deposited $5,000 in Chicago before he left to cover Jeff's money to bind a match, and it was immediately forwarded to New York, but not to the same stakeholder that Jeffries chose. Little has the receipt for the money with him, and evidently means business.

HOPE TO MEET JEFF.

While they hope to meet Jeffries in New York they have had no word from him to that effect, and will not go there from here unless they do hear that he is ready to deal directly with them in a conference as to terms. They are ready to jump on there tomorrow and make the match if Jeff only says so.

DEMANDS NOT STIFF.

Mr. Little said that while Johnson was champion and Jeffries was coming to him for terms, they would not be anything but fair, with the winner taking the big end. More than that, the big negro was willing to fight in England, Australia, or even in Jeffries' own club at Los Angeles.

More than that it would be difficult to concede, but Jeffries was apparently dodging the issue, and did not care to settle down and clinch matters for the match. He was close enough to them half a dozen times, but never came near them or sent them word of his willingness to buckle into the match-making in earnest.

The $10,000 on deposit in Chicago has been cancelled.

CAME HERE FREE.

Johnson came here for these exhibitions this afternoon and to-night at the Island ball grounds without charging a cent. He did this because of the bad weather during his three-days' stay recently. At any rate, it shows good sportsmanship. He goes on with three local heavies for two rounds each at 4 and 8.

CIVIC PROMOTER FOR THE FIGHT

Denver, Aug. 4.—In a resolution introduced by Ald. Thomas Hyder, the Board of Aldermen was asked last night to use its influence to obtain for Denver the fight for the heavyweight championship between James J. Jeffries and Jack Johnson. The city's interest, Mr. Hyder declares, would come from the advertisement receive by reason of the attendance of people from all parts of the country. The resolution states that prominent business men have expressed their readiness to raise sufficient money to bring the fight to this city. Considerable opposition developed on the ground that the city was interested "in more important matters than the promotion of prize fights," and a facetious member moved that the resolution be referred to the funeral committee. Hyder resented the attempt at humor, and declared he was sincere in having Denver "benefitted" by the proposed battle.

Chairman Markey finally referred the resolution to the judiciary committee.

JEFF BOOKED TO SAIL TO-DAY FOR EUROPE

New York, Aug. 3.—Unless he changes his mind at the last moment, Jas. J. Jeffries will sail for Europe at 10.00 o'clock to-morrow morning on the North German Lloyd steamer George Washington. The boilermaker intends to take the baths at Carlsbad and will not return to this country till late in September or early in October. He has posted $5,000 as a forfeit to bind a match with Johnson, who has put up a similar amount in the hands of a stakeholder o this own. Jeffries has not consented to meet Johnson to talk over the terms of the proposed articles of agreement. Several Texan say they will give a $100,000 purse if the big fellows will fight in the Lone Star State, but every sensible sporting man knows that a championship heavyweight battle would be prevented by the authorities in that State. Unless offers, therefore, come from promoters in California and Nevada, there is not a state in the Union where they will be permitted to fight. Hugh D. McIntosh, the Australian promoter, has repeatedly offered $50,000 to the men, but may do even better if they will agree to come together in Australia. McIntosh is in London and intends to have a talk with Jeffries when he reaches the other side.

FIFTH LETTER FROM WALTER F. STEWART OF PORT COBALT

Port Cobalt, July 24, 1909.

During the few weeks since I last wrote to your valuable paper great changes have taken place here.

The whole townsite has changed hands. A wealthy syndicate composed of Canadian and American capitalists have purchased all the right, title and interest vested in good old North Cobalt, for a goodly sum, and I was thrown in just to even up on the deal.

Now, in a short ten days' time, by proper and judicious handling, the place is going ahead in leaps and bounds. An electric railway, the Nipissing Central, is being constructed through the heart of the town, passing along four of our principal streets. An electric lighting system and waterworks are already being planned, gangs of men are now ditching, stumping, grading and bridge-building. And old Cobalt has simply broken loose and is there buying lots and building. The late fire there has caused a panic, and the majority of the population are moving here. The new owners have changed the name to Port Cobalt, and are about to build substantial docks on our lake-front, and establish a shipping port. At this point every attention will be given to encourage tourists throughout the summer months. Large hotels and cottages are to be built at an early date, as well as a country club and race track. Everyone is working overtime. Four additional stores have been opened this week, with a gramaphone on every counter.

Our quiet little North Cobalt that I built up and nursed along for a little over two years is now a bustling, busy bee-hive, with a new name, a new nature, and many new people. The very individuals who a few months ago sneered and jeered at the idea of North Cobalt being anything better than a village on a cow pasture, are to-day predicting that it will have a population of at least 10,000 in two years, and are numbered among our heaviest buyers of choice lots.

So far, very few speculators have got .... Most of the purchasers are people who are building or arranging to do so, and are numbered among Cobalt's best business men.

Port Cobalt's future is now assured, and I think the time is not far distant when we will see one of the most attractive little towns of the north built on a solid foundation, surrounded by all the facilities that make up a place in which people can enjoy life.

I can only say in conclusion that there is nothing more fascinating or more interesting than to grow up with a new town in a new country right from the stump roots of the virgin forest, watching the progress and assisting in its building day by day. In other words, shaping the destiny of a place for its future usefulness to mankind.

Those who have read my former letters were led step by step through some of the developments of Port Cobalt up to a crisis which is now taking place. I leave you now to hear from other sources the result of this crisis and the future development of our pretty little town.

Yours truly,
WALTER F. STEWART.

Ketchel like a book, says that Ketchel will beat Langford decisively when they come together at the Fairmont A.C. on September 3rd. Papke states that Langford will not be able to stand up under Ketchel's tremendous body punches, and that he will be outpunched and outgamed all the way.

In the twenty-six mile Marathon bicycle race at Scarboro Park last night Walter Andrews, W. Andrews and H. McDonald were winners in the order named.

Providence had the best of the argument which went ten innings at Toronto yesterday, and won 2—1. Newton twirled for the Leafs and had the only error marked against his team.

STURGEON POINT REGATTA TO-DAY

Programme This Year is Larger Than Ever

The annual regatta, under the auspices of the Sturgeon Point Cottagers' Association, takes place to-day on Sturgeon Lake. The probabilities say "fine weather," and the weather man hardly ever lies. Special boat service has been arranged for from Lindsay and Chemong, and the steamer Stoney Lake will run three round trips from the local dock. The Sylvester band will be in attendance all day, and will render a very enjoyable concert. The programme this year is larger than ever, and no doubt will be better than ever before. The committee in charge anticipate a most delightful day.

Just the Opposite.

"When I first met you," cried the woman who had been married for her money, "you occupied a low, menial position, but now, thanks to me, your position"—

"Is a hymeneal one," her husband interrupted.

A Reflection.

"To my annoyance," she said, "I found he had a lock of my hair. How he got it I can't imagine."

The older girl smiled oddly.

"When you were out of the room, perhaps?" she hazarded.

Foresight.

Little George, who was four years old, had been told many Bible stories. Among them was the story of the flood and the building of the ark by Noah. One day a storm threatened. The clouds grew darker, the wind arose, and suddenly the rain began to fall.

"Auntie," said George, "do you think it is going to storm?"

"Yes, I think it will," was the reply.

"Do you think it will be a hard storm?" asked the little fellow.

"Yes, I think it will be a hard storm," the aunt replied.

"Well, don't you think some of us had better begin building an ark?" he asked.

SHE EARNS $10,000 A YEAR.

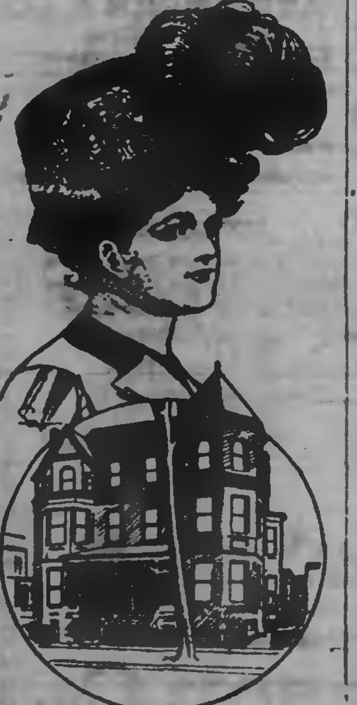
Miss Katherine I. Harrison, Private Secretary to the Late H. H. Rogers.

Katherine I. Harrison, private secretary to the late H. H. Rogers, is harder to reach than J. P. Morgan, James Stillman, John W. Gates or any other of the kings of finance. She is the one woman in the world who knows everything that goes on in Standard Oil. For doing what she is required to do—and not the least of her duties is to keep her mouth sealed—she receives $10,000 a year. You might count on your fingers the women in the United States who receive this salary.

What made Katherine I. Harrison so valuable to H. H. Rogers and his partners in the Standard Oil? A hundred answers could be given to this question. Other women are as bright, and other women are possessed of equal executive ability. But the best answer of them all may be summed up in two words—absolute trustworthiness.

Miss Harrison can keep a secret. She can hold information inviolate that would make a poor man a millionaire.



MISS KATHERINE I. HARRISON.

There are men who would pay a king's ransom to know a tithe of what she knows.

This important personage in the Standard Oil is tall and spare—close to six feet. Her face is stern, but comely. Altogether she is an attractive type of the American business woman. She dresses well, but severely. Her favorite office dress is a plain but short skirt of dullish blue, a white shirt waist, a blue four-in-hand tie and a turndown collar. When she goes out she wears a short, closely cut jacket of covert cloth and a toque trimmed with feathers. Her shoes are low cut and have broad soles.

But first of all the observer notes Miss Harrison's eyeglasses. They are set in a golden bow and have great, thick lenses. When you try to look at her through these fortresses of glass you see yourself reflected in tiny replica. On the contrary, they magnify to you Miss Harrison's steady, insistent eyes until they wring from you your secret.

Miss Harrison wrote most of Mr. Rogers' letters. She signed many of his checks. She never committed her employer to anything.

Miss Harrison lives with her mother and two sisters in a handsome Queen Anne house at 1354 Dean street, Brooklyn. She contributes to the welfare of the family and has a pretty fortune.

And how old is Miss Harrison? Well, she was Mr. Rogers' private secretary for eighteen years. She may be thirty-five; she may be more.

Next to Mrs. Hetty Green she ranks today as probably the most important business woman in all New York.

New View of Education of Women.

Dr. Charles W. Eliot has been exceedingly gracious to college women's clubs since he laid down the burden of Harvard direction, and only spiteful women recall what strenuous opposition he made to certain innovations in Radcliffe. He has been addressing the intellectual women in and out of season, and he has urged them not to henpeck the men because of those intellectual attainments. In a recent address before a college club of Baltimore he praised higher education for women enthusiastically, but he deprecated the limited view generally assigned to it. He thinks that in the home education is of more genuine benefit to society and for the future of the race than in the professions and that in the last analysis knowledge benefits women only in so far as it trains them for their natural duties. Instead of seeing the menace other great educators see in the desire which the modern woman has for obtaining the best educational advantages, Dr. Eliot takes vast comfort in the idea. The next generation, he thinks, being trained by intelligent and intellectual mothers, will swing the pendulum the other way for the men of the American race. Instead of being consumed with business ambitions to the exclusion of mental culture, he holds, they will be trained from their cradle upward to estimate properly the necessity of college training.

THE RED RIVER ROUTE.

Jim Hill Made His First Money In Steamboat Company.

The arrival of the first steamer from American territory at Winnipeg for twenty-nine years a few days ago has revived memories of the old-timers of the pioneer day in the West, when the Red River was the sole method of transportation between Winnipeg and the outside world. It is interesting to note that the captain, Sylvestre Petro, of the steamer Grand Forks, which arrived this week, was the commander of the last steamer which sailed between Grand Forks and Winnipeg in 1879.

The trip was taken with a view of discovering whether the Red River is still navigable and whether it would be a good business proposition to place a line of steamers thereon. The trip was highly successful, and as a result steamers will start running immediately from Grand Forks to Winnipeg. When the St. Andrews locks, north of Winnipeg, on the Red River are completed the boats will be able to run from Grand Forks clear to the head of Lake Winnipeg.

In the halcyon days before the advent of the C.P.R., the arrival of the steamboat from the south was a great event in little old Fort Garry. As for the day when the first steamer arrived in the spring after a six months' silence for the little frontier town, the whole population turned out and there was a celebration and carousing.

It was in the steamboat business along the Red River that Jim Hill, the railway magnate, made the foundation of his fortune. He was a frequent visitor at Winnipeg; in fact, made Winnipeg his headquarters for two years. Winnipeg old-timers can tell many tales of Jim Hill.

Some three years ago Hill made his first visit to Winnipeg since he left twenty-five years before. It was perfectly astonishing how he remembered the old friends and events of the early days. He said that things which had transpired twenty-five years ago were more firmly impressed on his memory than events of a few years previous. An interesting incident which took place at the Manitoba Club at that time illustrate this. An old Frenchman who said he knew Hill came to the club and asked to see the magnate. Hill had him ushered in and remembered the Frenchman well. They spent several minutes chatting and laughing about the old days.

"You sold me a horse once," said Hill suddenly.

"Oui," added the old man.

"An old grey mare and its name was Marie."

"Oui, oui," responded the Frenchman.

"It developed a spavin, too, later on," said Hill; and the Frenchman's answer was lost amidst the roars of laughter of those present.

"ORAN AMOK!"

The Bloodthirsty Malay When He Is Maddened by Frenzy.

"Amok" is a religious fanaticism, a madness under which a man makes up his mind to kill any one he can until he himself is killed. Brought on by drink or religion or from whatever cause, the process is the same. The madman seizes his creese and rushes headlong down the street, cutting at every one he meets. To any one who has seen a creese or a parang further detail is unnecessary.

A man running amok is as a dog with hydrophobia, but the panic caused by the former is by far the worse. Like the mad dog, the madman is followed by a noisy rabble, who sooner or later run into their man and exterminate him. When this vengeful rabble is made up of bloodthirsty Malays and Chinamen its wild rage and fury are beyond control, beyond description. The clamor and bloodcurdling yells of the pursuing crowd and the ever nearing shout of "Oran amok, oran amok!" are incidents which can never be forgotten by any one who has seen or heard them. The bravest quails when suddenly turning the corner of a street his ears are greeted with the cry of "Oran amok!" and a few yards off he sees a Malay running straight at him, brandishing in his hand the bloody creese with which he has already slaughtered all in his way.—London Chronicle.

THE USEFUL SWALLOWS.

Light Cavalry of the Avian Army and Friends of the Farmer.

From the standpoint of the farmer and the orchardist perhaps no birds more useful than the swallows exist. They have been described as the light cavalry of the avian army.

Specially adapted for flight and unexcelled in aerial evolutions, they have few rivals in the art of capturing insects in midair. They eat nothing of value to man except a few predaceous wasps and bugs and in return for their services in destroying vast numbers of noxious insects ask only for harborage and protection.

It is to the fact that they capture their prey on the wing that their peculiar value to the cotton grower is due. Orioles do royal service in catching weevils on the bolls, and blackbirds, wrens, flycatchers and others contribute to the good work, but when swallows are migrating over the cotton fields they find the weevils flying in the open and wage active war against them. As many as forty-seven adult weevils have been found in the stomach of a single cliff swallow.—Bulletin of Department of Agriculture.

Breaking Away From Work.

Our business men ought to break away from trade exactions long before they do—ought to do so as a matter of volition and ethical judgment rather than of physical necessity. They ought to get and give more enjoyment in life. They ought to do less for self and more for others. They ought to live more in books and more in the open and less at their desks and realize better health and longer lives as a result. More and more culture in all its forms is exercising a growing influence, which must manifest itself in lessened effort along the lines of money getting and the devotion of more time on the part of our business men to the pursuits which naturally accompany fortified leisure. Aristotle said, "The end of labor is to gain leisure," and Aristotle was a wise man.—A. Barton Hepburn in Century.

Sleeping Car Trips.

"I have noticed one thing about sleeping car journeys," he remarked, "and that is that I always sleep better coming home than I did going away. Whatever may be the cause, such is the case. Sometimes leaving home a man has worries or thoughts that won't let him rest easily, and by the time he finishes his work in the place he went to his mind has swung around all right again. It doesn't make the slightest difference whether I have an upper or a lower berth when I make the trip away. Then I can't sleep. On the contrary, I can sleep anywhere on the way home."

His Worthless Son.

There lives an old negro truck farmer in Alabama who has frequent occasion to reprove his children for their lack of industry.

"Yo' suttinly is a wuthless son," the old fellow declared one day to his oldest. "It's a doggoned good thing fo' yo' I ain't a rich nigger!"

"What yo' talkin' 'bout, pap?" asked the son. "What yo' think yo' do den?"

"I'd disinherit yo'! Dat's what I do!" exclaimed the old man wrathfully.—Lippincott's.

Sidestepped.

Father (at supper table)—Well, Johnny, how did you get along at school today? Johnny—Papa, my physiology books says conversation at meals should be of a pleasant character. Let's talk about something else.

Musical Reception.

Brown—What did your wife say about your being so late home the other night?

Jones—Nothing at all. She just sat down at the piano and played "Tell Me the Old, Old Story."

Preaching and Practice.

Ted—I hear he's giving a lecture on "How to Live on 15 Cents a Day." Is he doing well with it? Ned—Fine. I met him in a restaurant after the lecture, and he was eating a two dollar dinner.—Puck.

Old fools are more foolish than young men.—La Rochefoucauld.

THE TRUE HEIR.

How the Old Mansion Was Turned Into a Real Home.

By ALICE VAN ZAARN.

[Copyright, 1906, by Associated Literary Press.]

The old house, with its coat of fresh paint, gleamed among its magnificent elms in the bright August sunshine. In the upstairs front room Priscilla stood before the mirror giving a last critical look at herself. Her hair was done high on her head in a style of bygone days, and an ancient shell comb was at the back. Her dress was a gorgeous brocaded silk which had belonged to her great-great-grandmother. It had never been altered, and it fitted her tall, straight figure to perfection.

"There," she said, "I guess that will do! Now I will sit down and wait till they come."

She went over to one of the west windows and sat where she could look down the road. Her face was alight with joy. This was the happiest day of her life. It was what she had looked forward to and worked for.

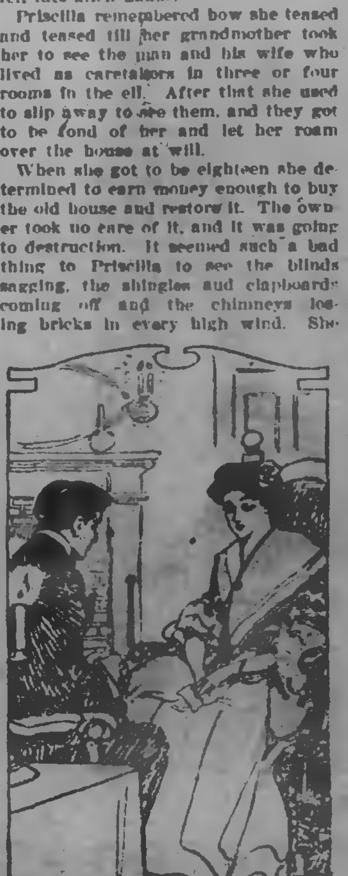
As she sat waiting for her expected guests her mind traveled back over the years that had led up to this day which seemed to her to be the fulfillment of all her hopes.

She remembered how when she was a little girl and lived with her grandmother in the house she could see from where she sat she had looked with awe upon the mansion which stood on the hill, and all the stories she cared to hear must be about the old house.

Her grandmother could tell her many stories of the old place, of the young people who had lived there and made it gay with their happy voices, of the noted general who courted and married his fair bride there and of the sad times that came when the young people all went away and the old folks grew feeble and died and the old house fell into alien hands.

Priscilla remembered how she teased and teased till her grandmother took her to see the man and his wife who lived as caretakers in three or four rooms in the ell. After that she used to slip away to see them, and they got to be fond of her and let her roam over the house at will.

When she got to be eighteen she determined to earn money enough to buy the old house and restore it. The owner took no care of it, and it was going to destruction. It seemed such a bad thing to Priscilla to see the blinds sagging, the shingles and clapboards coming off and the chimneys losing bricks in every high wind. She would buy it and save it from ruin, and it would stand there in all its old time dignity, a valuable historic landmark.



"IT ALL SEEMS SO FUTILE!" SHE CRIED.

She told no one of her plan, but set about deciding on her work. She had always intended being a nurse, and this work would serve her purpose as well as any.

So by the time she was twenty-one she had finished her course at the training school, had taken her first case and deposited her first money in the bank toward buying the old place.

Then came a disappointment. The great-aunt for whom she was named sent for her to come and take care of her. Priscilla rebelled inwardly, for the old woman was crossgrained and miserly and grudged her the food she ate. But Priscilla knew that it was her last sickness, and she could not find it in her heart to leave her alone in her misery.

For two long years, therefore, she devoted herself to her kinswoman and gave her as good care as if she had been a wealthy, paying patient. And the aunt's disposition softened wonderfully at the last, and Priscilla confided her secret about the old house to her.

After her death there was a great surprise for Priscilla. Her aunt had left all her property to her. There was more than any one had suspected, and the will expressed the old lady's wish that Priscilla should use the money to buy and repair the old place on the hill.

After the place was actually bought there was much to be done. Carpenters and masons and painters were kept at work for weeks. The yard was made tidy, and after that the inside of the house was cleaned and repaired.

It was in June that everything was done and Priscilla had moved her aunt's old fashioned furniture into the house. The old couple who had lived in the ell still stayed, and the woman was Priscilla's housekeeper.

Then Priscilla found that her legacy was greatly reduced and that she must go to work. So she went to nursing again with a light heart.

And now it was old home week, and as one feature of the occasion she had thrown open her house and was to read a paper to the guests telling some of the most interesting stories about the place. She had furnished the rooms as nearly as possible like what they had been when the family lived there. There was not a modern piece of furniture in the whole house, and she had even been able to procure some of the very articles that had once furnished it.

At last she saw her guests coming. She colored as she recognized one figure among the others. He was the only one of the old family name who had taken the least interest in the old place. To be sure, he was merely the great-grandson of the last of the family to live there, and he had never seen it till this week. But he had taken an intense interest in what Priscilla had done, and somehow she had seen a good deal of him during the week.

Priscilla's heart beat high as she went slowly down the old staircase to meet her guests.

* * * * * * *

Richard looked uncertainly about the dim old room. In a moment his eyes became accustomed to the darkness, and he went quickly over to where Priscilla crouched sobbing on the floor. Her old brocaded gown lay in folds about her, and the arm on which her head was bowed rested on the old chair by the fireplace.

"What has happened?" cried Richard in alarm. He lifted her gently to her feet, and for a moment she rested heavily against his shoulder. Then she drew away and sank into her chair.

"I am very sorry you found me this way," she said tremulously. "I—I thought you were gone and that I was all alone."

"Wait a minute," said the young man, with practical thoughtfulness, "till we have some light, and then you must tell me what troubles you."

Priscilla sat silent. She could hear the low murmur of voices in the next room, where the housekeeper and her husband were. Richard lighted the candles on the high mantel and one on the table; then he drew his chair nearer and sat down facing Priscilla.

They were two striking figures in the dim setting of the old room. Both were very good to look upon, she in her gown of a century ago, he in modern dress.

"I suppose it is foolish," she said, "and hysterical and all that, but I couldn't help it. I was so happy this afternoon, and this is the reason."

"But what is it?" he asked, looking perplexed.

"It all seems so futile!" she cried. "You know how I have worked and planned to restore this house to what it was, but it is no use. It was a home, but it is not now, and I cannot make it a home. Besides that, it seems, now that I have done all I could, that I was presumptuous to undertake it. Every one seems to think I have done great things, but what right had I? Oh," she cried passionately, "why couldn't you have done it? You are one of the family!"

"Priscilla," he said, and she gave a little start and looked at him with dilated eyes.

"I understand how you feel, and I wish I had done it, but there is a better way—a way in which you can make it a home and even bear the old family name." His face was very serious, and he looked at her with searching earnestness.

He rose to his feet and held out his arms. "Don't you understand, Priscilla?" he said in a thrilling voice.

And Priscilla understood and smiled at him through happy tears.

MR. R. J. McLAUGHLIN, K.C., SETS RUMORS AT REST RE BURLEIGH

Title Same as That of Any Other Piece of Property Held in Fee Simple—Says City Solicitor Can Easily Verify Statement.

To the Editor of The Review,
Peterborough.

Dear Sir,—I have been told that statements have been made in the city of Peterborough that the Central Ontario Power Company's title to Burleigh Falls power is a lease, and that the city might get this cancelled and obtain the power from the Dominion Government.

I am well satisfied that no underhand work would be thought of by the aldermen of Peterborough, but to allay all doubts, I wish to distinctly say that the original title of the company is a patent in fee simple from the Crown issued more than fifty years ago. An agreement was made since between the company and the Dominion Government for the use by the Government of water for lockage purposes, and the use by the company of the dam at the head of the rapids for sixty years, including any rights that the Government might have.

This agreement was made between the company and the Government in lieu of the company receiving cash damages for abstraction of water for canal purposes.

For instance, the owners of the Nassau power received some twenty-three thousand dollars cash damages for abstraction of water for canal purposes. The owners of Burleigh power, instead, simply accepted the agreement of the Government to maintain the dam at the head of the rapids for sixty years and allow the company the use of it.

The title of the Central Ontario Power Company, Limited, to Burleigh Falls power is good against the Crown and all other persons, just as good as the title to any piece of real estate in the city of Peterborough. The city solicitor can easily verify this.

CROP BEING CUT AT CENTRAL PARK OVER THREE FEET HIGH

The crop of weeds which succeeded the unsightly remains of the late dead and decayed drill shed is being cut to-day. The entire Laurier Government is up for congratulations, but in all fairness, the chief credit must be given to the local representatives. The crop of weeds, like public opinion, was ripe for its removal. The system of rotation usually employed on all well-regulated farms has been carefully observed here. First of all, there was the old drill shed; then a fire removed all of it that had any semblance of good looks, leaving the black, charred and cheerless remains to call loudly, if in vain, for their own burial. Public opinion got to work again and insisted that these remains be removed. It was done. It had to be done, for the public would stand it no longer, and it was done accordingly. This was away back in June, since which time the present crop of weeds has been growing like the hirsute appendage of a polar bear. Public opinion again got busy. Indignation became general. The Great Government and its representatives were prayed to cut the crop, and the edict went forth and lo! the crop of 1 1-2 acres was cut this morning by a hard-working man with a scythe. It looked very pretty to see him at work to-day. Enterprise is characteristic of the city, and nowhere less than at the place indicated.

Excursions were this summer being run to the city to get a look at the Lift Lock and the Drill Hall "lawn." Both were worth it, but for different reasons. Photographs of the "late unpleasantness," as the Americans used to call the late civil war, will no doubt command a large sale. Souvenirs of such things always do. There is room for another banquet here somewhere. Let the claquers get busy.

THIRSTY RESIDENTS GET WHISKEY AT BARNS IN THE TOWN OF HAVELOCK

Havelock, Aug. 4.—He was justified in styling himself an oddfellow.

He had habits that most men do not possess, and that gave him an individuality. Then, too, he did not have some habits that most men have, and that made him appear all the more odd.

He was not born twins, so, as he put in styling himself an oddfellow.

Raised on a farm, he had early in life felled the monarch of the forest, and during his later existence in a small town he had lived by and played in a brickyard.

Yet he could not qualify as a fraternity man.

A knight of the grip, he knew not the grips, and, as he told it to The News, that was his one great regret while a sojourner in Havelock.

He was a stranger, and they took him not in. The reason was "they" were afraid of being themselves taken in.

He had a thirst—a thirst of that kind that it is not convenient to have in Havelock. Havelock is a local option town. But the thirst was not of the local option variety.

"Blind pigs" some term these stables and sheds, but that is a misnomer. They are not blind, nor are they asleep. They do business every day, all day.

A short time ago one stable in the town was searched. Whisky was found, but the authorities had no proof of a sale having been made, and no charge could be laid against the keeper.

And there is also a store where one may procure whisky if he is known or is a member of "our lodge."

When the mountain would not go to Mahomet, the prophet went to Hamilton. And so it is with the liquor dealers of Havelock, when business does not come to them they go out after business. Whisky is sold in Havelock as Milk is in Toronto, in sealed bottles delivered to the homes. Residents of the town say men call at their homes soliciting orders for whisky. And the agents offer excursion rates—$1.50 bottles are sold for $1.

WILL CLOSE HOTELS IN WINTER

"Does your business pay with local option in force?" an hotelkeeper was asked.

"Well, it just pays, and that's all. There's not a decent profit. It will not pay to run the house in winter, and we will close it up then."

Havelock has now three hotels, the same number as it had before the restrictive measure passed. The travelling public are afforded fair accommodation for a place of the size. But there will be no hotel at all in Havelock this winter. The hotelkeepers say they have agreed to close all three houses.

In a misdirected attempt to save its boys, Havelock has abolished the bar. Liquor is still sold in the town and in large quantities; sold into the homes and at "blind pigs," and it is brought into the town to effect the evil work of "the passing bottle." Soon the town will be without a place of public accommodation. Morally and commercially the town appears to have suffered.

Notes From the West

Pipestone:—This is a small village in Southern Manitoba, about fifty miles south of Brandon. The population does not number 200. It has three grain elevators, and they are equal to the demands. There are others about six miles west of this place. The land is mostly broken up and it appears to be of grain-producing quality. It is a grand sight to see hundreds of acres of wheat waving before the summer's breeze, fast ripening for the harvest. Warmed by the sun, watered by the showers and fanned by the breeze during the past few weeks, its developmnet has been rapid and satisfying. In about two weeks men will be busy filling the barns of the husbandmen with plenty. Shall we receive such needed but unmerited blessings and never tell God we are thankful? My son-in-law, Mr. W. Forde, who resided in Cartwright, Ont., has a farm of 640 acres, and about 200 acres are in wheat, with about 50 with other grains. The prospect of an abundant harvest in this locality is good as no storm has blighted the anticipation of the anxious farmer.

The C.P.R. runs through this village, and in fact it has most of the leading and side lines in Southern Manitoba. In the village is a good public school house, and a church, in which three ministers preach. Two of them reside here in comfortable parsonages. The Church of England minister preaches at 11 am., Sunday school being held at 1.30. The Presbyterian minister preaches at 3, and and the Methodist minister at 7. We admire the spirit of unity between ministers and people. But why have three ministers representing as many denominations to conduct three services every Sabbath, with the Sunday school crowded in between, while many congregations in Ontario have but one service, and some once a fortnight, and while there is also such a demand for men in the west?

On the 20th of this month I glided into my 80th year under very favorable circumstances.

W. KENNER.

MR. P. J. TOWNS GENERAL STORE, DOURO

The above cut represents the general store conducted by Mr. P. G. Towns of Douro. Thirteen years ago Mr. Towns commenced the work of constructing the store and when it was first opened the business was carried on on a very small scale. It has been greatly enlarged and improved since that time as the result of Mr. Town's own ideas and workmanship. He was at a great inconvenience in his operations, having no capital to start on.

From the driving of the first nail to the finishing of the work on the building, Mr. Towns has performed it all and has been his own architect, carpenter, bricklayer, stone mason, painter, etc. The present building includes its owner's place of residence as well as the store.

Mr. Towns also constructed the stables and sheds on the property.

The building, which includes store and dwelling, is a frame structure, 70x40 feet, and the original building was only 30x24 feet. At first, Mr. Towns worked only in his spare time towards the construction of the place and his days were often 19 and 20 hours in length.

The store is very neat in appearance and presents an attractive front as will be seen by the cut. By strict attention to business and enterprising methods, Mr. Towns has built up one of the best businesses in rural Peterborough.

Mr. Towns is a large buyer and shipper of fowl and eggs. He also takes an interest in the welfare of Douro, and is responsible for getting the telephone connection for the township. He has been postmaster for five years and township treasurer for two.

Corporation With a Soul

It is reported that big Corporations have no soul, but to-day we had brought to our notice the liberality of one of the big ones that leads us to believe that there are big corporations that have souls. Mr. Rothwell, Superintendent of the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co., was in our office and showed us twenty-two cheques that were made payable to claimants on death claims which he had already settled.

The Company had increased their death benefits on these policies, and they thought it was only fair that these claimants should derive the benefits of the increase. Some of these claims had been settled over two years, and the Company at that time paid everything that the policies called for, so that these extra cheques are voluntery gifts on the part of the Company.

J. E. G. ANDERSON ARRAIGNED FORMER BANK CLERK IN COURT

Young Man Who Was Captured in Vancouver While Trying to Cash a Check Appears in Police Court—Had Long Tour of Europe and America.

Toronto, Aug 6.—John E. G. Anderson, the young Bank of Montreal clerk, who was arrested in Vancouver, B.C., charged with forging checks in various parts of the world, was brought back to Toronto last evening by Detective Alex. Murray. To Murray he has admitted having forged two checks cashed by the T. Eaton Co. for $50 and $75.

Anderson says the toughest proposition he ran up against was a pawn broker in Chicago. He was pawning some articles and suggested that if he could only find a bank open he'd be alright, as he had a marked check for $200.

The markings and other endorsations satisfied the broker and he said he'd cash it, but insisted on a 10 per cent. discount. After considerable parley, Anderson got $180 for the paper and bought the broker a cigar in the bargain.

He says he had a good time in his various rambles, and met City Treasurer Coady at the Hotel Cecil, London. His itinerary included Buffalo, New York, Liverpool, London, Paris, back to New York, to Denver, Los Angeles, San Francisco, Chicago, one day in Toronto, when he cashed the checks, Detroit, St. Paul, Denver, Seattle, Victoria, and finally Vancouver. He was trying to pass a $100 check when caught.

His success was due, he told Detective Murray, to two rubber stamps, "Entered" and "Marked" which he had made in the States.

In the Police Court this morning his counsel, T. C. Robinette, K. C., reserved election and plea and asked for a week's remand. He appears in good spirits and in splendid health.

THINGS GOING WRONG WAY

Colonial at Imperial Defence Conference is Pessimistic Over Outcome

London, Aug. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—A colonial delegate to the Imperial Defence Conference remarked yesterday, "All we are doing is so far absolutely secret. All I can tell you is that things are going the wrong way, and I'm sorry for it."

At the United Service Club dinner to the Imperial Defence Conference delegates, Major-Gen. Arbuthnot presided. Sir Frederick Borden, Canadian Minister of Militia, speaking in response to the toast, "Our Guests," said that some few years ago the forces of Canada were an unorganized mob; now they had got their different departments of the army in the Dominion, and could at once put 50,000 men in the field, and in a few weeks another 50,000. They were also going to try to do their duty with regard to the navy at the moment.

They in Canada were convinced that if there was danger or risk they would do as they did at the time of the South African war. They would come to the rescue of the Empire with all the money they could get and all the men that might be necessary in order to help this country man its fleets. They in Canada were going to begin at once to do their duty to lay the foundation in building up a navy which could co-operate with and be part when trouble arose of the great British navy. (Cheers.)

Gen. Smuts of South Africa said blood was thicker than water, yet in another sense there was something that was thicker than blood. The tie of honor was even greater and stronger. (Cheers.) He hoped that as time went on it would be more and more realized that it was no tie of blood which held them together, but the tie of community of interests, justice, fair play and equality.

ENTITLED TO [illegible] MONTH'S NOTICE

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 6.—Judge Finlayson yesterday decided against the Dominion Coal Co. in a test case brought to evict Angus Young, one of the U.M.W. miners, from one of the company-owned houses. Young's defence was that he was illiterate and had been unable to read the agreement he signed with the company and which he believed was simply an agreement to pay $3.50 per month rental. The judge held that the agreement was not a lease and that the tenant was entitled to a month's notice of removal.

CANADIAN BOUNTIES

London, Aug. 6.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Respecting bounty-fed steel, The Glasgow Herald asks the grave question: "Is it right from an imperial viewpoint that Canada should grant bounties on the production of material exported in competition with the Mother Country? Is it right that bountied Canadian iron should be shipped over to the Mother Country if it is to be there sold against British iron?

"This question of bounties on manufactures within the Empire will have to be fought out. It should be one of the subjects taken up with earnestness at the next Imperial Conference."

THE STOCKHOLM FAMINE GROWS

Stockholm, Aug. 6.—Stockholm today is suffering seriously from a shortage of food, a result of the labor conflict. Bread is held at terms practically prohibitive, the restaurant prices for meals are very high.

The strikers themselves are living practically on fish. Thousands of them are camping out and spend their time in angling.

Soldiers are distributing milk in limited quantities and supervising the sale from milk cars at the railroad stations. Deliveries of ice have ceased.

Paupers from the state poor houses have been enlisted to replace the striking grave-diggers and undertakers, and instead of hearses, stretchers are being used to carry corpses through the streets to the cemeteries under military escort.

TWO MARINE ACCIDENTS

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Aug. 6.—After lightering about 500 tons of pig iron from the cargo of the Canadian steamer Mapleton, ashore on Grave Island shoal, near Detour, the vessel was released with her fore peak full of water. The accident occurred in a dense fog, the boat being on her maiden trip up the lakes.

The steamer Gargentwa, belonging to Ganley Bros. here, struck something while making the turn near the dark hole yesterday morning, and it was necessary to beach her.

4,500 MEN ARE NOW AT WORK

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 6.—The general situation at the collieries of the Dominion Coal Co. is considered satisfactory by the company, which has now 4,500 men at work, all told. Of these 3,000 are at work in the collieries, 2,200 being underground. The output Wednesday was 9,400 tons, an actual increase in the quantity taken from the collieries. The falling off is in the amount taken from the banks.

Fourteen men were arrested at No. 2 for loitering.

WOULD BRIBE DEPOSED SHAH

Teheran, Aug. 6.—It is understood that the Government has now offered Mohammed Ali, the deposed Shah, an annual pension of $75,000 on condition that he will deliver up the jewels enumerated in the Nationalist inventory, or inform the Government how he disposed of the missing gems. It is believed that Mohammed Ali will accept this new offer, and his departure from Persia, probably for Russia, is expected within a fortnight.

EXPRESS DITCHED

Atlantic is Wrecked at Woman River and Several Hurt.

North Bay, Aug 6.—The C.P.R. Atlantic Express, due at North Bay at 8.55 last night, was ditched at Woman River, 200 miles west of here, at two o'clock yesterday afternoon.

Details are meagre as yet but it is known that the express was speeding along at good rate when, without warning, the passengers were startled by terrible shocks and the crash of smashing timbers as the cars left the rails, buckled and reared, and then rolled down a six-foot embankment.

Two Pullmans, one observation car and a first-class car were piled up in the ditch and investigation revealed a number of passengers injured, but none seriously as far as has been ascertained. The names of the injured passengers cannot be obtained yet.

The cause of the accident is unknown here. Traffic was delayed from five to ten hours.

HALF BURIED RANCHER DIES

Lethbridge, Alta., Aug 6.—Norman Lewis Johnson, aged 36, single, a homesteader in Porcupine Hills, dug a hole beside a huge boulder, with the intention of burying it. The boulder, however, slipped in prematurely, half burying Johnson and forcing his pickage into the leg from ankle to knee. He was pinned there forty-eight hours before neighbors found and rescued him. He was hurried to Pincher Creek Hospital, where he soon died. His brother is a doctor in Toronto.

FOUR MEN DROWNED

Charlottetown, P.E.I., Aug. 6.—A drowning accident, resulting in the loss of four lives, occurred here yesterday. A party of eight left the city for a pleasure resort opposite Charlottetown, in a lobster boat to prepare for a picnic to be held next Monday. It was necessary to land in a punt, a leaky craft. Seven of the men were on board it, and when half the distance had been traversed, sank. The drowned are: Ephraim Gallant, Harry Gallant, James Barnett and Daniel McAuley. Ephraim Gallant leaves a widow and one son. The others were from 20 to 25, unmarried.

BOY CHARGED WITH MURDER

Guysboro, N.S., Aug. 6.—The preliminary enquiry into the charge of murder against Andrew Joby Issard a colored boy, for beating Maggie Ash to death, in the absence of his parents, was held yesterday. He was sent to the Supreme Court on the murder charge.

It appears that Joseph Issard, father of the boy, was paid by the overseers of the poor for Manchester district, to look after Annie Ash and her two children, Maggie, aged 6, and a younger sister, aged 2, all being parish charges.

On Tuesday the boy's parents left to attend a picnic. As soon as they had gone, the boy attacked the mother of the children, Annie Ash, who is a cripple, and beat her brutally. He then turned on Maggie, knocked her down with a stick and then struck her on the head with a rock, killing her.

The dead child's mother and the boy's young brother were eye-witnesses and gave evidence.

PROBABILITIES.

TO SELL THE GILLIES LIMIT WILL DISPOSE OF 380 ACRES

Ontario Government Issues Prospectus of Public Silver Property Which Was Exempted From Settlement at Beginning of Cobalt Rush.

Toronto, Aug. 6.—The sale of the provincial mine on the Gillies' Limit, which comprises some 30 acres immediately south of the Nipissing mine and Cart Lake, has been decided on by the Ontario Government.

The other portions of the limit, which have not been previously disposed of, about 350 acres in extent, will also be offered for sale at the same time. These have been divided into 20 parcels. Surface prospecting has been done on these.

Public tenders will be received for the purchase of the properties up till September 13.

The conditions of sale include the payment of 10 per cent. royalty at the mouth of the pit, which should net a substantial revenue to the province.

An official prospectus of the condition of the mine, with particulars of its operations and the results achieved is being prepared by Thomas W. Gibson, Deputy Minister of Mines, after conference with Hon. Frank Cochrane for the guidance of intending purchasers.

It is understood that the Government experts thus set free from actual mining operations, will be utilized to make further explorations on the limit.

Diamond drilling in July on a vein in the provincial mine on the eastern boundary of the property near the Savage claim, resulted in a strike of ore at a depth of 125 feet, while two or three other veins were cross cut deeper down. A shaft has been sunk here to a depth of 70 feet.

There is also another shaft 140 feet deep on another vein, with levels at 65 and 125 feet respectively.

There are good buildings and a good boiler and compressor plant on the property, with all the other machinery necessary for the working of the mine.

Three cars of ore have been shipped to date, two of cobalt and one of silver, and there is still some ore in stock.

THAW TO BE AN AUTHOR

New York, Aug. 6.—Harry K. Thaw will devote his life to literature if he wins his fight for freedom from the Matteawan Asylum, and, anticipating such a victory, his mother, Mrs. William Thaw, and her daughter Alice, the former Countess of Yarmouth, have spent about $25,000, it is reported, in fitting up a corner of the new Thaw home on Fifth avenue, Pittsburg, as a literary den for Thaw.

Alice Thaw has also decided to cast her lot with her brother in his literary career in case he is liberated, and she has already shown herself a good business woman by making contracts for Thaw's writings.

RATES OF CATHOLIC ORDER FORESTERS

Montreal, Aug. 6.—Although the motion to increase the rates of the Catholic Order of Foresters carried yesterday, the two-thirds vote required was not obtained, consequently the matter is tied up for the present.

The officers elected are: High Chief Ranger, Thomas Cannon, Chicago; high vice-chief, F. X. Bilodeau, Montreal; high secretary, Thomas F. McDonald, Chicago; high treasurer, H. G. Keller, Appleton, Wis.; high medical examiner, Dr. J. P. Smyth, Chicago; high trustees, Thomas F. Flynn, Chicago; J. A. Collier, Shakopee, Minn.; M. J. Herbert, Cleveland; J. G. Stephen, Chicago; S. Viger, Lawrence, Mass.; M. H. Kern, Menominee, Mich.; L. J. Nicholl, Chicago; J. E. McGuiley, Chicago. Auditors, C. C. Kolara; Lesueur Cener, Minneapolis.

Sockeyes in Canadian Waters.

Seattle, Washington, Aug. 6.—Dr. David Starr Jordan, the American fishery expert, and Prof. Prince, the Canadian commissioner, announced yesterday that the sockeye salmon are all Canadian hatched. This point, it is said, will be brought forward by the Canadians if the American fishermen, protesting against the Canadian hatcheries, carry out their threat to procure retaliatory measures forbidding export of fresh salmon.

Cranbrook will buy the town waterworks for $70,000.

SERIOUS LOSS BY HAIL STORM

Many Farmers in West are Suffering From Much Damage

Winnipeg, Aug. 6.—The present are anxious days with the western farmer. Mid-August frequently sees night frosts, which occasionally do great damage, but so far the lowest temperatures have been well up in the forties. However, a danger peculiar to extremely high temperatures is violent rain, which is not infrequently preceded by hail. Manitoba and Saskatchewan are being daily visited by these storms, traveling erratically. The areas affected usually are small and individuals are sufferers rather than communities, and the aggregate will not materially suffer from this cause.

Rosthern, in central Saskatchewan, had 2,000 acres devastated by hail on Wednesday, while yesterday Langham, Yorkton and Hanley, in the same province, suffered, four townships in the latter and two in Langham being reported totally destroyed, Yorkton's loss being appraised at a thousand acres.

The rain will invigorate and help to fill the later grains. It will delay the maturing of riper grains, giving rust and fungoids a chance to attack the grain, but this is not likely to affect anything seriously, and with the settling of the weather it is safe to say that better than an average crop will be garnered.

The heaviest rain of several seasons fell here yesterday afternoon, preceded by hail.

TENNYSON'S CENTENARY

To-day is the hundredth anniversary of the birth of Tennyson, the greatest modern English poet. He compares to Longfellow like a cathedral to a lovely English home, the one all art and technic, the other, nature with only a touch of art. Longfellow's "Hiawatha" is the most haunting and thoroughly characteristic poem we ever read. Tennyson's "In Memoriam" is, of course, a work of much greater intellectuality, though possibly not of greater genius. Tennyson seemed to be, as he looked, a man of superfine humanity, of superior sort of man, a poet of the schools, if not of the fields. Browning is described by the French as more profound. He may be, but in common with many others, we are not within the sphere of his influence or appeal. His poetry seems to be necromantic without being romantic, esoteric without being profound. There are poets and poets. Alfred Austin and Emerson are of the former class, undoubtedly, but the universal judgment of mankind is that, if not of the Homeric or Miltonic class, yet Tennyson was a real poet, whose technic would have won him enduring fame, even if his prophetic depth had not done so. The difference between prose and poetry is, perhaps, best illustrated by taking the sources of poems and comparing them with the finished production.

MAN'S RESPONSIBILITY

"He will do well, however, to remember that God gives man common sense as well as Divine guidance, and expects him to use that common sense when occasion demands it."—The Catholic Register.

In a recent article, censuring the editor of Saturday Night for his chaffing reference to certain alleged Divine calls, which the latter asserted were largely human pulls, the Catholic Register avers that:

"It is true that the human element enters more or less into all clerical appointments, but some at least appointing churchmen prayerfully and with a single eye to the honor of religion."

Are not these statements of the Register an admission that the human element of common sense is the prevailing means through which such selections are made, and that Divine guidance is, therefore, not the prevailing factor? It is impossible, one would think, to maintain both positions at the same time. Men are either the sole and single instruments of God, chosen, set apart and designated by Him, or else they are the appointees of men like themselves; one or the other, surely. Where does the Divine revelation come in? We do not refer to the correct-mindedness of those concerned. It is all simply a matter of statement of fact. The Register's position is exactly what Protestants maintain.

If, then, while we depend on God for guidance in the abstract, He depends on us to use common sense, and therefore guide ourselves, have we not arrived at the only rule of faith, viz., the use of private judgment as being the fulfilment of the Register's advice to use common sense? In fact, as one may fairly interpret it, the Register goes much farther in the matter of common sense than even the Protestant journals. It puts individuals more completely on their own resources, and does away with the necessity of leaning upon the infallibility of the Church or the sin-forgiving power of the clergy or the guiding hand of God. Our two quotations are not altered in meaning by the context which we have not quoted, and we are sure they will do much to dispel the usual non-Catholic idea of Catholic claims, viz., that men have, of themselves, no common sense or capacity for independent action, and that the inspired power of the Church in faith and morals must, therefore, be looked to at every step. The Register's position will surprise many. If a Catholic replies to a command of the clergy that his common sense tells him to do something else, what then? Could such a man be considered a good Catholic?

MR. ROOSEVELT'S DISCOVERY

Mr. Roosevelt, who is usually considered a fine type of the modern man of the world of enterprise, has discovered in British East Africa a new and desirable place for those seeking land and opportunities. It is the same old thing. Advice to young men to go west or east is all the same. At bottom it means that conditions in the more thickly-settled districts at home have become intolerable, and that better and more tolerable conditions can be found only in places remote from what ought to be real centres of civilization. It is a singular thing that a half-settled country like England—for there is a vast amount of cultivable farm land lying fallow there and unoccupied—should present so few opportunities for the willing and industrious that the latter must seek the very ends of the earth if they would escape starvation. It is plain that the cause of this absurd anomaly is the unjust and unequal conditions of government, and of the state of the country brought about by the conditions of government, and what arises from, or is due to, those conditions. Given a willing and industrious people and their failure to succeed in a half-occupied and fertile country must be due to those conditions.

It is said that Sir James Whitney is considering the desirability of holding share, mining, grain, and other forms of brokers, strictly responsible for all damage done to the public by reason of the passion the people have acquired for gambling on change. Ninety-nine per cent. of the brokers are a menace to the community; they practise it. Their manner of doing business flourishes most in the unsteady market, and it is the unsteady market that drives men and their families to dispute with the wild animals the possession of the wilderness. The day will come, at least it may come, when every man who is willing to work shall have, in a country like England, a chance to work and to provide, as God and Nature intended, for the temporal and general welfare of his family. Until governments put bridles on those who live by lucky throws, and upon those who hold nations in their hands because they deal in the monopoly of money, there can be no real freedom. The great majority must be the slaves of the few. Sir James Whitney has a heart as well as a head.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

OF INTEREST

Servetus and Calvin

After the best that is said about Calvin there is a worst that can not be denied. How shall the case of Servetus be judged? The Congregationalist and Christian World, New York, puts it picturesquely in saying that "Servetus hangs about the neck of Calvin's fame as the albatross hung about the neck of the Ancient Mariner." Servetus was a French theologian and physician who denied the doctrine of the Trinity and who suffered martyrdom for his faith. Calvin being instrumental with others in bringing about his death. Calvin is now defended on the ground that other times bring other morals and twentieth-century standards ought not to be applied in judging him. "If we had lived in Calvin's time," says the Congregationalist journal, "we would have carried faggots to the burning." Yet it urges us to "admit that Calvin was a sinner—not even imitating the pious sons of Noah, but facing and declaring the nakedness of his shortcomings that we may have done with them forever." The Christian Intelligencer, New York, takes a somewhat similar stand, saying—

"Of course we can not approve of the execution of Servetus. The fact that Calvin entered a plea for the mitigation of the sentence, entreating that death should not be administered by fire, does not wholly relieve the situation. The fact that his fellow reformers were all agreed as to the justice of the proceeding does not justify it. Nor does the fact that the proceeding was in accord with the universal sentiment and practise of the time warrant us in approving it.

"On the other hand, we are called upon to disapprove it. Judged by the standards of our time, the whole business was barbarously cruel. But it happened some hundreds of years ago. To judge a man of the sixteenth century by the canons of the nineteenth, would be as savagely unfair as Calvin's severest critics have adjudged his attitude to be. Those who bemoan the wrong inflicted on Servetus do not better matters by denying the 'square deal' to those who perpetrated it.

"He who sits upon the woolsack at the present stage of the world's progress is bound to throw the case out of court altogether as not belonging to this jurisdiction. Who are we, that we should reprobate the universal conscience of three centuries ago? Had we been there——? What shall we say, then, as to Calvin vs. Servetus? Say nothing, but thank God for the brighter light of these days.

"Were Calvin living now, what would he do in a similar case? He would—from what we know of his life and character—be in the front rank of those who, having opinions and the courage to maintain them, are quite willing that others, even the rankest of infidels, shall do likewise. This is the spirit of the age."

But the Chicago Interior thinks there is "no object whatever in so often repeating that Calvin was a child of his times; that he couldn't be expected to be more tolerant than age." The defense along these lines at the Pan-Presbyterian Council held recently in New York "missed the point entirely," this journal asserts. "It is his ecclesiastical descendants who are actually on trial in the matter—not Calvin." Going on from this point it is said:

"The question that interests the contemporary world is not particularly the degree of blame that Calvin ought to be given for the affair, but the kind and extent of apology his present-day admirers are willing to put up for him. The world isn't baiting Calvin—there'd be no fun in that—but Calvinists, Presbyterians and their congeners are usually very vehement in denouncing the wickedness of intolerant papists in the time of the Inquisition; all the world wants to know now is whether they will be as vigorous in denouncing the same kind of thing in a great Protestant. Are there Roman villainies which make Protestant virtues? Unhappily some of the things said on the subject in New York might suggest that there were. But of course, the only right thing for any Protestant to say about this Servetus business is that Calvin was wrong about it; that notwithstanding some insignificant extenuations, like his attempt to substitute beheading for burning, the whole business was a shame to him—a black spot on his memory. If Calvin had been thoroughly imbued with the spirit of his Master, he wouldn't have been involved in the affair at all. Let Presbyterians only be square and manly about the case, and the world will soon lose its concern for the affair. Efforts to say smooth things about it, on the contrary, can only end in shaming those who attempt the apology, and worse than that, in imparting to Servetus a halo of martyrdom altogether beyond the man's deservings."

Linen of Snowy Whiteness

The real beauty of linen lies in its whiteness. It must come from the washing spotlessly clean. So, naturally enough, it is always rubbed twice as hard, and so wears out twice as fast.

But here is a new way to wash linen as well as other fabric—a way that saves half the rubbing and doubles the life of the garment.

This new way is the way of Taylor's Borax Soap. For no other soap saves both labor and garments as does this wonderful soap—it saves its own cost many times over.

Taylor's Soap

Here is the Taylor way: Place the white clothes in warm, soapy water and let them soak over night. Then draw them out one by one and rub them lightly with Taylor's Borax Soap. When well soaped, roll them up and lay them in the bottom of the tub under water. Let them soak in this way for half an hour. Then rub them gently on the washboard, rinse and wring them out. Hang them on a rope clothes line, for wire may put iron rust spots on the clothes.

Scalding is never necessary with this soap, for it removes the dirt by itself. The borax softens the water, so less soap is required, and also much less rubbing.

Colored clothes are washed the same, only they should not be left to soak over night, and never boiled.

Follow these simple directions and your clothes will come out fresh, clean and free from any "soapy smell." The white goods will be whiter, the colored goods brighter and the woolens softer than ever before.

Borax not only softens the water, but also softens the hands—it leaves them even whiter than ever before. Also it purifies and sweetens—it destroys every germ and prevents the possibility of contagion.

Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

"Eve," he exclaimed suddenly, "if you only knew, if you only guessed what I'm trying to say"— The perplexity, the whole harassed suffering of his mind showed in the words. Loder, the strong, the resourceful, the self contained, was palpably, painfully at a loss. There was almost a note of appeal in the vibration of his voice.

And Eve, standing by the fireplace, heard and understood. In that moment of comprehension all that had held her silent, all the conflicting motives that had forbidden speech, melted away before the unconscious demand for help. Quietly and yet quickly she turned, her whole face transfigured by a light that seemed to shine from within—something singularly soft and tender.

"There's no need to say anything," she said simply, "because I know."

It came quietly, as most great revelations come. Her voice was low and free from any excitement, her face beautiful in its complete unconsciousness of self. In that supreme moment all her thought, all her sympathy, was for the man—and his suffering.

To Loder there was a space of incredulity; then his brain slowly swung to realization. "You know?" he repeated blankly. "You know?"

Without answering, she walked to a cabinet that stood in the window, unlocked a drawer and drew out several sheets of flimsy white paper, crumpled in places and closely covered with writing. Without a word she carried them back and held them out.

He took them in silence, scanned them, then looked up.

In a long, worthless pause their eyes met. It was as if each looked speechlessly into the other's heart, seeing the passions, the contradictions, the shortcomings, that went to the making of both. In that silence they drew closer together than they could have done through a torrent of words. There was no asking of forgiveness, no elaborate confession, on either side. In the deep, eloquent pause they mutually saw and mutually understood.

"When I came into the morning room today," Eve said at last, "and saw Lillian Astrupp reading that telegram nothing could have seemed farther from me than the thought that I should follow her example. It was not until afterward—not until—he came into the room—until I saw that you, as I believed, had fallen back again from what I respected to what I—despised—that I knew how human I really was. As I watched them laugh and talk I felt suddenly that I was alone again—terribly alone. I—I think—I believe I was jealous in that moment"— She hesitated.

"Eve!" he exclaimed.

But she broke in quickly on the word. "I felt different in that moment. I didn't care about honor or things like honor. After they had gone it seemed to me that I had missed something—something that they possessed. Oh, you don't know what a woman feels when she is jealous!" Again she paused. "It was then that the telegram and the thought of Lillian's amused smile as she had read it came to my mind. Feeling as I did—acting on what I felt—I crossed to the bureau and picked it up. In one second I had seen enough to make it impossible to draw back. Oh, it may have been dishonorable, it may have been mean, but

"There's no need to say anything," she said simply.

I wonder if any woman in the world would have done otherwise! I crumpled up the papers just as they were and carried them to my own room."

From the first to the last word of Eve's story Loder's eyes never left her face. Instantly she had finished his voice broke forth in irrepressible question. In that wonderful space of time he had learned many things. All his deductions, all his apprehensions, had been scattered and disproved. He had seen the true meaning of Lillian Astrupp's amused indifference—the indifference of a variable, flippant nature that, robbed of any real weapon for mischief, soon tires of a game that promises to be too arduous. He saw all this and understood it with a rapidity born of the moment; nevertheless, when Eve ceased to speak the question that broke from him was not connected with this great discovery—was not even suggestive of it. It was something quite immaterial to any real issue, but something that overshadowed every consideration in the world.

"Eve," he said, "tell me your first thought—your first thought after the shock and the surprise—when you remembered me."

There was a fresh pause, but one of very short duration; then Eve met his glance fearlessly and frankly. The same pride and dignity, the same indescribable tenderness that had responded to his first appeal, shone in her face.

"My first thought was a great thankfulness," she said simply. "A thankfulness that you—that no man—could ever understand."

CHAPTER XXXII.

As she finished speaking Eve did not lower her eyes. To her there was no suggestion of shame in her thoughts or her words, but to Loder, watching and listening, there was a perilous meaning contained in both.

"Thankfulness?" he repeated slowly. From his newly stirred sense of responsibility pity and sympathy were gradually rising. He had never seen Eve as he saw her now, and his vision was all the clearer for the long oblivion. With a poignant sense of compassion and remorse, the knowledge of her youth came to him—the youth that some women preserve in the midst of the world when circumstances have permitted them to see much, but to experience little.

"Thankfulness?" he said again incredulously.

A slight smile touched her lips. "Yes," she answered softly—"thankfulness that my trust had been rightly placed."

She spoke simply and confidently, but the words struck Loder more sharply than any accusation. With a heavy sense of bitterness and renunciation he moved slowly forward.

"Eve," he said very gently, "you don't know what you say."

She had lowered her eyes as he came toward her. Now she lifted them in a swift upward glance. For the first time since he had entered the room a slight look of personal doubt and uneasiness showed in her face. "Why?" she said. "I—I don't understand."

For a moment he answered nothing. He had found his first explanation overwhelming. Now suddenly it seemed to him that his present difficulty was more impossible to surmount. "I came here tonight to tell you something," he began at last, "but so far I have only said half"—

"Half?"

"Yes, half." He repeated the word quickly, avoiding the question in her eyes. Then, conscious of the need for explanation, he plunged into rapid speech.

"A fraud like mine," he said, "has only one safeguard, one justification—a boundless audacity. Once shake that audacity and the whole motive power crumbles. It was to make the audacity impossible—to tell you the truth and make it impossible—that I came tonight. The fact that you already knew made the telling easier, but it altered nothing."

Eve raised her head, but he went resolutely on.

"Tonight," he said, "I have seen into my own life, into my own mind, and my ideas have been very roughly shaken into new places.

"We never make so colossal a mistake as when we imagine that we know ourselves. Months ago, when your husband first proposed this scheme to me, I was, according to my own conception, a solitary being vastly ill used by fate, who, with a fine stoicism, was leading a clean life. That was what I believed, but there, at the very outset, I deceived myself. I was simply a man who shut himself up because he cherished a grudge against life and who lived honestly because he had a constitutional distaste for vice. My first feeling when I saw your husband was one of self righteous contempt, and that has been my attitude all along. I have often marveled at the flood of intolerance that has rushed over me at sight of him—the violent desire that has possessed me to look away from his weakness and banish the knowledge of it—but now I understand.

"I know now what the feeling meant. The knowledge came to me tonight. It meant that I turned away from his weakness because deep within myself something stirred in recognition of it. Humanity is really much simpler than we like to think, and human impulses have an extraordinary fundamental connection. Weakness is egotism, but so is strength. Chilcote has followed his vice; I have followed my ambition. It will take a higher judgment than yours or mine to say which of us has been the more selfish man." He paused and looked at her.

She was watching him intently. Some of the meaning in his face had found a pained, alarmed reflection in her own. But the awe and wonder of the morning's discovery still colored her mind too vividly to allow of other considerations possessing their proper value. The thrill of exultation with which the misgivings born of Chilcote's vice had dropped away from her mental image of Loder was still too absorbing to be easily dominated. She loved, and as if by a miracle her love had been justified! For the moment the justification was all sufficing. Something of confidence, something of the innocence that comes not from ignorance of evil, but from a mind singularly uncontaminated, blinded her to the danger of her position.

Loder, waiting apprehensively for some aid, some expression of opinion, became gradually conscious of this lack of realization. Moved by a fresh impulse, he crossed the small space that divided them and caught her hands.

"Eve," he said gently, "I have been trying to analyse myself and give you the results, but I shan't try any more. I shall be quite plain with you.

"From the first moment I took your husband's place I was ambitious. You unconsciously aroused the feeling when you brought me Fraide's message on the first night. You aroused it by your words, but more strongly, though more obscurely, by your underlying antagonism. On that night, though I did not know it, I took up my position; I made my determination. Do you know what that determination was?"

She shook her head.

"It was the desire to stamp out Chilcote's footmarks with my own, to prove that personality is the great force capable of everything. I forgot to reckon that when we draw largely upon Fate she generally extorts a crushing interest.

"First came the wish for your respect, then the desire to stand well with such men as Fraide—to feel the stir of emulation and competition—to prove myself strong in the one career I knew myself fitted for. For a time the second ambition overshadowed the first, but the first was bound to reassert itself, and in a moment of egotism I conceived the notion of winning your enthusiasm as well as your respect."

Eve's face, alert and questioning, suddenly paled as a doubt crossed her mind.

"Then it was only—only to stand well with me?"

"I believed it was only the desire to stand well with you. I believed it until the night of my speech—if you can credit anything so absurd. Then on that night, as I came up the stairs to the gallery and saw you standing there, the blindness fell away, and I knew that I loved you." As he said the last words he released her hands and turned aside, missing the quick wave of joy and color that crossed her face.

"I knew it, but it made no difference. I was only moved to a higher self glorification. I touched supremacy that night. But as we drove home I experienced the strangest coincidence of my life. You remember the block in the traffic at Piccadilly?"

Again Eve bent her head.

"Well, when I looked out of the carriage window to discover its cause the first man I saw was—Chilcote."

Eve started slightly. This swift, unexpected linking of Chilcote's name with the most exalted moment of her life stirred her unpleasantly. Some glimmering of Loder's intention in so linking it broke through the web of disturbed and conflicting thoughts.

"You saw him on that night?"

"— — and the sight chilled me. It was a big drop from supremacy to the remembrance of—everything."

Involuntarily she put out her hand.

But Loder shook his head. "No," he said; "don't pity me! The sight of him came just in time. I had a reaction in that moment, and, such as it was, I acted on it. I went to him next morning and told him that the thing must end. But then—even then—I shirked being honest with myself. I had meant to tell him that it must end because I had grown to love you, but my pride rose up and tied my tongue. I could not humiliate myself. I put the case before him in another light. It was a tussle of wills, and I won, but the victory was not what it should have been. That was proved today when he returned to tell me of the loss of this telegram. It wasn't the fear that Lady Astrupp had found it. It wasn't to save the position that I jumped at the chance of coming back. It was to feel the joy of living, the joy of seeing you, if only for a day!" For one second he turned toward her; then as abruptly he turned away again.

"I was still thinking of myself," he said. "I was still utterly self centered when I came to this room today and allowed you to talk to me, when I asked you to see me tonight as we parted at the club. I shan't tell you the thoughts that unconsciously were in my mind when I asked that favor. You must understand without explanation.

"I went to the theater with Lady Astrupp ostensibly to find how the land lay in her direction—really to heighten my self esteem. But there fate or the power we call by that name was lying in wait for me, ready to claim the first interest in the portion of life I had dared to borrow." He did not glance toward Eve as he had done in his previous pause. His whole manner seemed oppressed by the gravity of what he had still to say.

"I doubt if a man has ever seen more in half an hour than I have tonight," he said. "I'm speaking of mental seeing, of course. In this play, 'Other Men's Shoes,' two men change identities—as Chilcote and I have done—but in doing so they overlook one fact—the fact that one of them has a wife! That's not my way of putting it. It's the way it was put to me by one of Lady Astrupp's party."

Again Eve looked up. The doubt and question in her eyes had grown unmistakably. As he ceased to speak her lips parted quickly.

"John," she said, with sudden conviction, "you're trying to say something—something that's terribly hard."

Without raising his head Loder answered her. "Yes," he answered, "the hardest thing a man ever said"—

His tone was short, almost brusque, but to ears sharpened by instinct it was eloquent. Without a word Eve took a step forward and, standing quite close to him, laid both hands on his shoulders.

For a space they stood silent, she with her face lifted, he with averted eyes. Then very gently he raised his hands and tried to unclasp her fingers. There was scarcely any color visible in his face, and by a curious effect of emotion it seemed that lines, never before noticeable, had formed about his mouth.

"What is it?" Eve asked apprehensively. "What is it?"

By a swift involuntary movement she had tightened the pressure of her fingers, and, without using force, it was impossible for Loder to unloose them. With his hands pressed irresolutely over hers he looked down into her face.

"As I sat in the theater tonight, Eve," he said slowly, "all the pictures I had formed of life shifted. Without desiring it, without knowing it, my whole point of view was changed. I suddenly saw things by the world's searchlight instead of by my own miserable candle. I suddenly saw things for you, instead of for myself."

Eve's eyes widened and darkened, but she said nothing.

"I suddenly saw the unpardonable wrong that I have done you, the imperative duty of cutting it short." He spoke very slowly in a dull, mechanical voice.

Eve, her eyes still wide, her face pained and alarmed, withdrew her hands from his shoulders. "You mean," she said, with difficulty, "that it is going to end? That you are going away? That you are giving everything up? Oh, but you can't! You can't!" she exclaimed, with sudden excitement, her fears suddenly overmastering her incredulity. "You can't! You mustn't! The only proof that could have interfered"—

"I wasn't thinking of the proof."

"Then of what? Of what?"

Loder was silent for a moment. "Of our love," he said steadily.

She colored deeply. "But why?" she stammered. "Why? We have done no wrong. We need do no wrong. We would be friends, nothing more, and I—oh, I so need a friend!"

For almost the first time in Loder's knowledge of her her voice broke, her control deserted her. She stood before him in all the pathos of her lonely girlhood—her empty life.

The revelation touched him with sudden poignancy. The real strength that lay beneath his faults, the chivalry buried under years of callousness, stirred at the birth of a new emotion. The resolution preserved at such a cost, the sacrifice that had seemed well nigh impossible, all at once took on a different shape. What before had been a barren duty became suddenly a sacred right. Holding out his arms, he drew her to him as if she had been a child.

"Eve," he said gently, "I have learned tonight how fully a woman's life is at the mercy of the world, and how scanty that mercy is. If circumstances had been different I believe—I am convinced—I would have made you a good husband—would have used my right to protect you as well as a man could use it. And now that things are different I want—I should like"— He hesitated a very little. "Now that I have no right to protect you, except the right my love gives, I want to guard you as closely from all that is sordid as any husband could guard his wife.

"In life there are really only two broad issues—right and wrong. Whatever we may say, whatever we may profess to believe, we know that our action is always a choice between right and wrong. A month ago—a week ago—I would have despised a man who could talk like this and have thought myself strong for despising him. Now I know that strength is something more than the trampling of others into the dust that we ourselves may have a clear road; that it is something much harder and much less triumphant than that; that it is standing aside to let somebody else pass on. Eve," he exclaimed suddenly, "I'm trying to do this for you. Don't you see? Don't you understand? The easy course, the happy course, would be to let things drift. Every instinct is calling to me to take that course—to go on as I have gone, trading on Chilcote's weakness and your generosity. But I won't do it. I can't do it!" With a swift impulse he loosed his arms and held her away from him. "Eve, it's the first time I have put another human being before myself."

Eve kept her head bent. Painful, inaudible sobs were shaking her from head to foot.

"It's something in you, something unconscious, something high and fine, that holds me back, that literally bars the way. Eve, can't you see that I'm fighting—fighting hard?"

REQUEST CONCERT THIS EVENING

At Victoria Park by 57th Band—the Programme

So many request numbers have been received for to-night's band concert that Mr. Giddon found it impossible to arrange a programme with them all, but "Remick's Hits," the latest arrangement; "Cherry," "The Anvil Chorus," and other selections will be given as encores.

The opening number on the programme, "Tipperary," will be played at the request of that well-known lover of the strains of the Emerald Isle, Mr. John Cronin.

The programme to be given is as follows:

March—Tipperary.
Overture—Zampa.
Intermezzo—Dublin Daisies.
Selection—Yankee Consul.
Oriental Sketch—Dervish Chorus in the Soudan.
Selection—The Explorers.
Scotch Selection—Gems of Scotland.
Descriptive—Forge in a Forest.

Owing to the length of the programme, the members of the band are asked to be on hand early that the concert may be commenced at 8.15.

ACCIDENT AT C.G.E. THIS MORNING

A somewhat serious accident happened this morning at the C. G. E. works, and as a result Miss Lily Stocker will be confined to her home for some time to come. One of the electric fans in the office stopped working and Miss Stocker undertook to set it in motion again. Unfortunately the fan started to move when altogether unexpected, and as a result it cut a rather painful gash in Miss Stocker's hand. Dr. Young was called and dressed the wound, and it is now doing as nicely as could be expected.

CANDIDATES FOR MATRICULATION

List of Junior Passes in Recent Examinations

The following list contains the names of two classes of candidates—

1. Those who have written upon and fulfilled the requirements of the University of Toronto in a sufficient number of subjects for complete pass junior matriculation.
2. Those who have written upon one or more papers or part papers of this examination and have obtained 40 per cent. on each paper written.

Matriculation candidates who also wrote on the Normal Entrance examination, in whole or in part, should note that the fact of their names appearing in this list indicates only that they passed on the actual matriculation papers taken.

The matriculation value of the standing obtained on the Normal entrance examination can be ascertained only by presenting the certificate of standing to the Registrar of the university or college concerned.

The certificate containing the marks will be sent to the principals of the Collegiate schools in about a week. Candidates will apply to these officials, not to the department, for their reports in detail.

The names of the successful candidates are: W. Adamson, M. Anderson, T. J. Campbell, F. Corkery, C. A. Dean, H. F. Elliott, J. A. Eyres, D. Fessenden, E. Fitzgerald, W. T. Fortye, B. Gerratt, J. M. ## SALVATION ARMY BUILDING UNDERGOING MANY CHANGES

Sunday School to be Enlarged so as to Accomodate Between 90 and 100 More Scholars—Band Room Built—Total Cost $3,300.

The Salvation Army building is undergoing a thorough renovation. A large staff of men is at present at work in altering and rearranging both the interior and exterior parts of the building. The east and west front doors are to be closed and boarded up, leaving only the middle door, which will serve as a main entrance. A large porch extending to the edge of the pavement will be erected over this part, from which stairs will lead to the large hall on the second storey, and to the Sunday school in the basement.

Inside, in the main hall, the small rooms in the northern part of the building are to be done away with, and the platform at the south end is to be brought forward and reconstructed, two small rooms being erected on either side of it. These rooms will be used by the members of the band and the various officers, and as they will each be entered from the side of the building, it will do away with the old nuisance of having the band march half way up the hall in order to reach the platform.

Below, in the Sunday school, the partition on the north side is to be removed, and a number of small class rooms erected around the sides for the various classes. This will enable the Sunday school to accommodate between 90 and 90 more scholars, and besides will leave plenty of room for the installation of two new twin furnaces for heating purposes. Besides this, the building as a whole will be fully repaired and painted, leaving everything fresh and clean for the winter's work.

The cost of the work will be about $3,300, of which $1,000 will be raised by the Army itself, and the remaining $2,300 by public subscriptions.

When the work is finished the local staff will undoubtedly have one of the best buildings of its kind in the province.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

TESTS HIGHER IN TORONTO

Milk Shows Better Percentage Than it Does in Peterboro'

A Peterborough milkman remarked to the Review this morning that he could not understand why there should be such a great difference between milk tested here and in Toronto. He said he had milk tested here for June, which only showed 3.30 and seven days later the milk from the same cows, when tested in Toronto, went 4.50.

Milk that had been sent to Toronto before always showed a better percentage, the dairyman stated, than it did in Peterborough. He is at a loss to know why it should.

MR. STUART'S APPLICATION

Mr. Stuart came all the way from Chicago, recently, to lay the latest request of his allied companies before the council and the people of Peterborough. His intention is to put these companies, which are virtually branches of one large company, in shape for bonding. The intention is said to be to utilize the money so to be acquired for extensions and development of importance and value to the city. He asks the council to grant and guarantee a simple permission to the company to utilize the streets without making any claim or pretence of monopoly. It is not, properly speaking, asking for a franchise at all, but for the usual permission given to every merchant or trader within the city's limits when they set up business, to use the streets, sewers, sidewalks, etc., for their benefit as for the benefit of the citizens generally. What then is the real meaning of the L. & P. Company's application? We understand it to be simply this; In bonding the amalgamated industries of the Company each branch must be in proper business shape for the market. If the L. and P. branch has no right to go on, under or through the streets, or may be stopped from so doing after the time limit (5 years) of its present franchise, then the bond-buyers will not buy. For the city to seek to exact from Mr. Stuart further concessions is to put the city under a legal obligation to the Company in the future, which a simple permission would not put it under. The city's proposition, therefore, appears to be unbusinesslike.

It is not really the Company after all that is seeking the permission. It is a case where the bond-buyers want to know.

The proposed exaction of a quid pro quo for the use, in common with others of the city's streets is probably unconstitutional. It is just the same apparently, as saying to the merchant, "The city wants you to do so and so, or it will not allow you to use the streets for the conveyance of your goods."

Then, as to the street railway branch. The failures or shortcomings of the company in this branch are provided for by the railway contract and are not fairly susceptible of modification by a sidewind or indirect attack. We must be fair. With the Cereal Company branch of course, the city has nothing further to do just now. The question then is "shall the city grant a permission for 30 years, which gives the company no exclusive right of any kind but puts it under a variety of satisfactory conditions and limitations or shall it not?" We should think the Council and the city would be well advised to grant the request. It is quite probable that it will lead to further development. In any event no possible harm can come of such a policy of encouragement.

Is it not better not to ask for a few trifling advantages that may lay the city under a legal obligation, in exchange for a fair request? The city will profit much more by the bonding referred to than by seeking concessions in prices of light, etc., that can be obtained to a far greater extent by allowing a number of competing companies the joint use of conduits and other means of conveying power. In view of the possible cheapening of electric processes it is doubtful if it is good policy to contract further for prices. The term of 30 years may no doubt be lessened if necessary to suit the time most acceptable to the bond-market. Possibly 20 years would do. But that is a minor matter.

EXCURSION TO HAMILTON

Local Iron Moulder's Union Will Hold Outing to That City Next Saturday

On Saturday, Aug. 14, the local union of iron moulders will run an excursion from this city to Hamilton, leaving the Grand Trunk station at 6 a.m. The special train will go by way of Port Hope and along the lake front. The iron moulders' unions of Hamilton and Toronto are holding a big demonstration in the Ambitious City, and an attractive programme of sports and games will be carried out at Mountain View Park. The train will not leave for the return trip until 10 p.m., thus affording the excursionists considerable time in the city. Other particulars will be found in another column of this issue.

Evangelistic Campaign

Speaker to-night, S. H. Soper. Leader, W. J. Wheeler.

Last night W. J. Wheeler spoke on the call of Jesus to life service. "The Master is come, and calleth for thee," John 11; 28. When men are longing for sympathy, when there is misunderstanding in the home, the Master calls. The call is to a manly activity. No half-hearted service will do. An open acknowledgment of the claims of Christ is the only way to peace and joy.

To-night Mr. Miles will sing. The services are developing in every way. Some twenty-five had already decided for Christian life and work.

A DELIGHTFUL TRIP TO RICE LAKE ON CIVIC HOLIDAY

Printers' Picnic This Year Promises to be Most Enjoyable Event—Arrangements for the Outing Very Complete.

The "intelligent comp" and the numerous active supporters of the annual outing will enjoy to the fullest a day away from the cramped environment of the city, when the Printers' Picnic is held to Idyl Wyld on Civic Holiday, Monday, August 9th.

As a pleasure trip the one down the Otonabee and on Rice Lake cannot be excelled. It affords a particularly enjoyable outing, and no excursion of the year is attended with more real enjoyment than the Printers' Picnic.

This year the committee has been very energetic in arrangements, and have overlooked no detail for the benefit and comfort of the patrons of the picnic, or in making the card of athletic events for the day as attractive as possible.

The annual baseball match between the newspaper offices will, no doubt, provide considerable comedy, and perhaps some good playing here and there. As an exposition of how the American national game should not be played, the yearly match at the picnic is a most effective demonstration. It always interests and pleases the spectators, however, and is a big link in the chain of enjoyment, which holds the excursionists willing captives at every Printers' Picnic.

NO WONDER THE GIRLS SCRAPPED--THE REASON

It is rather a reflection on the fistic enthusiasts of the city when the members of the fair and gentle sex have to promote and carry out the sport. But such appears to be the case, as many fight fans can vouch for, as the result of an engagement which took place yesterday during the noon hour. The preliminary arrangements were not made public, but it has been ascertained that the "bout" was intended to be of an unlimited number of rounds and was to have taken place in the neighborhood of the brewery in Ashburnham. The contestants were two young athletic girls, who would probably weigh in at 130 lbs., but a referee was on hand and this allowed many fouls, which would, according to the rules, have declared the winner at an early stage. Each landed many "blows," which told heavily against the costumes of the scrappers, and as they did not confine themselves strictly to boxing, several clever "holds," known to experts of the wrestling game, caused much damage to the millinery and dress goods of each, and finally, when the "scrap" was stopped their attire resembled that of a bathing suit worn at Coney Island. It is learned that both contestants are engaged at a factory, where the "diet" used by mit artists is manufactured, and this probably accounts for the outburst.

Later.—Just as we go to press it is learned that the cause of the scrap was brought about by one of the young ladies asserting that Mr. —— was going to take her to the Printers' Picnic on Civic Holiday, and naturally the other resented this arrangement.

DEPORTATION OF ANOTHER FAMILY BEGUN YESTERDAY

Family Was in Wretched Circumstances—Very Little Bedding, and Less Food in the House—Husband Sickly and Unable to Work—Children Allowed to Run Wild—Sad Story.

Mr. Peter Devlin, the Government official who looks after the deportations from this country, was in the city yesterday morning to look after the deportation of an English family by the name of Walsh. The family, in which there are four small children, came here from Montreal some time ago, and had been living in a small house on Water street. Their circumstances were wretched. There was only one room for the entire family, and this was made to serve not only as an eating and living room but also as a place for sleeping. A mattress and a few old rags in a corner was all the bedding there was in sight. When night came the children buried themselves in the rags and huddled together to keep away the cold night air. There was nothing to eat in the house. The husband was of a very sickly and weak nature, and was not strong enough to do the only kind of labor that he could get. The mother being absent during the day, the children were allowed to run uncared for on the city streets, and although very young, were rapidly falling into dissolute habits. For some time the family had been living almost entirely on charity, and also it is said paid many visits to the second-hand shops, until finally their stock of saleable articles gave out, and the charity officers were compelled to refuse any further appeals for aid.

The family had been in this country too long to deport by the usual means, and for some time it was doubtful whether they would be returned to the Old Country or not. Finally, however, owing to a special charity arrangement between the Canadian Government and the steamboat lines, orders were given for the deportation of the family, which was begun yesterday, Mr. Devlin taking them to Montreal with him on the noon train.

JACK JOHNSON HITS COSTLY CLIP IN HIS MOTOR CAR

Woodstock, Ont., Aug 6.—Jack Johnston, the champion pugilist, passed through Woodstock in his auto at 7.30 last evening at a fifty mile gait. Between Woodstock and Ingersol he nearly ran down a party of Woodstock people returning to the city. The Chief Constable wired to London, where he was arrested and this morning Johnson paid a fine of $50 and costs.

AMERICAN REPRESENTATIVE OF ERNEST SEIGFRED HERE

Mr. W. J. Dalton, of Batavia, New York, was in the city to-day on his way to Harwood, where he will spend a two week's vacation at the Rice Lake House.

Mr. Dalton is a well known boniface and sporting man of Batavia and is the American representative for the Ernest Seigfred, the German oak. Seigfred is the big 200 pound wrestler that hopes to meet Gotch, Beell, Roller, Americus and other Yankee mat artists this fall.

"Are you going to match him against Yankee Rogers?" the Review asked Mr. Dalton.

At which the sporting man laughed and said, "It might make a good bout if Seigfred undertook to throw Rogers about four times an hour."

Mr. Dalton is an enthusiastic fisherman and says he may prolong his outing a week if the finny ones are coming fast.

This is the first athletic meet of any dimensions that Peterborough has had since the time the Y.M.C.A Harriers held their meet in the Brock street rink. That being the case, the people have not had a chance to get a line on any of the runners around town, and several surprises are sure to be sprung on Monday afternoon.

TWO GAMES FOR TO-MORROW

Strathconas Play P. A. C. at 2 O'clock—West Ends and T.A. B. at 3.30—Both Contests Should be Interesting

It is reported that Park Street and the T.A.B. teams are suffering from an attack of nervousness on account of the City League games at the Oval to-morrow. Both are aware that a great deal depends on the outcome of the contests. Should the Strathconas win from the Baptists in the first game, the latter's chances of winning the league will be considerably lessened, especially if the T.A.B. take a fall out of the West Ends, which, by the way, the Abstainers are confident of doing. Both exhibitions should be interesting, and there will no doubt be a large number of fans at the Oval to cheer and encourage their favorite teams.

THE TRIGGER

MANY WENT TO COBOURG

A large number left on the special train from Campbellford this morning for Cobourg, to attend the regatta and motor races being held there to-day. The attractions for this evening consist of a big display of fireworks, after which the train will leave for the return trip.

IS CHAMP TRYING TO FUNK IT

Bob Edgren Hands a Few to Jack Johnson — Says Black's Not Anxious

Robert Edgren writes in the New York World:

It may be only a coincidence, but Jack Johnson has timed his arrival in New York on the same day when Jeffries sails for Europe. Johnson has wired from Chicago that he'd be pleased to meet Jeffries in New York to sign articles for a fight. He's "willing to meet Jeffries "any day after Wednesday." On Wednesday Johnson expects to be in Toronto, which is a safe distance from here. Of course, he knows that Jeffries is to sail for Europe Thursday morning, for Jeffries gave that information to all the newspapers several days ago, and it has been published all over the country.

Foxy young man, this Jack Johnson! Knowing that Jeffries has made arrangements and is not likely to change them, Johnson can safely challenge for a meeting, only taking care to set a date just after Jeff sailed. Then he can yawp loudly that Jeffries had sidestepped him.

Jeffries has done his part. It is up to Johnson now to make a match if he is willing to fight Jeffries at all. Jeff had announced that he intends spending a few weeks in Germany, after which he will return to his home in Los Angeles and begin hard training. All details of the match can be arranged with Berger, his representative, and will be verified by Jeffries immediately upon his return. He will then go to Los Angeles and begin a long period of hard training. Jeffries has said ever since he came out of retirement that he would take several months of work in the mountains before fighting, so Johnson needn't pretend to be surprised if Jeff doesn't fall for any bluffs about a September date.

Jeffries is absolutely in earnest about fighting Johnson. If anyone crawls out of the match it will be the slippery negro. The money that Jeffries posted with me, $5,000, isn't properly a "forfeit," as there is no provision of forfeiture in the statement he gave out at the time. The money is simply deposited as an evidence of good faith. It is not to be returned to Jeffries, but when articles are signed it is to be turned over to the final stakeholder located in the state where the battle will be fought. When in the final stakeholder's hands it will go as part of the $10,000 side bet that Jeffries demands from Johnson. It could not possibly be posted as a forfeit unless the articles were drawn.

Jeffries has completely turned the tables on Johnson. For years, or ever since Jeffries announced that he was through with the fighting game, Johnson has been challenging him. Like many other people, the negro thought there was no possible chance of dragging Jeffries back into the ring. But Jim has done enough work on the Q. T. to show that he can easily get into fighting trim. He is as big and husky as ever. He always did take long training periods, and after this next one he'll be as fit as ever before.

Jeffries has not yet given out the terms he will suggest to Johnson if would surprise no one if the much-hounded champion of all champions proposed making his dusky rival fight winner take all. There is plenty of precedent for this in big championship battles. Jim Corbett and John L. Sullivan fought for the championship of the world, a $10,000 side stake, and a $25,000 purse, winner take all. If not winner take all, Jeffries may insist upon 75 per cent. to the winner and 25 per cent. to the loser.

Considering the number of times that Johnson has loudly challenged the retired champion and offered to fight him "winner take all," is is surely up to him to make his bluffs good.

Johnson's "condition' that Jeffries must set the date and place for the fight before going to Europe is simply talk. Johnson knows that it is impossible for anyone to set date or place until the bids for the fight have been received and considered.

As for Johnson's money — it is said to have been posted in Chicago. To date he hasn't made any attempt to directly cover the $5,000 put up by Jim Jeffries.

GRACE CHURCH S.S. HELD PICNIC

At Inverlea Park Yesterday Departing Teacher Was Presented With an Address and Pearl Ring

The members of Grace Church Sunday school with their parents held a most enjoyable picnic at Inverlea Park yesterday afternoon. Races and games were participated in. Some small boats were also procured for the afternoon and the children had a pleasant time on the water. During the evening Miss Howson, one of the teachers who leaves to-day for Calgary, was presented with an address and pearl ring, all wishing her every success and God speed in her new home. The children left the park about 8.30 after having had a very pleasant outing.

PERSONAL MENTION FROM HAVELOCK

The Busy Village and What Its People are Doing

Havelock, Aug. 5.—The Presbyterian Sunday school picnic to Healey Falls on Wednesday afternoon was largely attended and was a great success. Healey Falls is an ideal place for picnics and for camping. Eastward from the bridge on the left side stretching for 300 yards is a perfectly level strip of land, prettily dotted with shade trees. Thirty feet below the rushing river struggles along over the stones and rocks between two great pillars of rock that raise up on either side. For 300 yards down from the bridge there is a gradual drop, the water dashing and splashing up into the air presents a most beautiful sight. Here the day was spent. The children of the Sunday school enjoying themselves at fishing and bathing.

A special meeting of the Havelock Council will be held in the Council Chamber on Aug. 16th, to consider the applications for a permanent man to do village work.

After partaking of a most tempting repast, the remainder of the evening was spent in songs, toasts, speeches etc. After all had tendered Mr. Lancaster their best wishes for future success, a most delightful evening was brought to a close by the singing of "He's a Jolly Good Fellow," and "God Save the King."

FIFTEEN POUND LUNGE CAUGHT

Fishing seems to have improved wonderfully on the Otonabee during the last two or three days. Last night Mr. Wm. Buller, who was trolling along the shore near T.A.S. Point, caught a nice fifteen-pound lunge. The fish put up a good struggle for its life, but it was finally landed successfully by Mr Buller.

THE RED RIVER ROUTE.

Jim Hill Made His First Money in Steamboat Company.

The arrival of the first steamer from American territory at Winnipeg for twenty-nine years a few days ago has revived memories of the old-timers of the pioneer day in the West, when the Red River was the sole method of transportation between Winnipeg and the outside world. It is interesting to note that the captain, Sylvestre Petro, of the steamer Grand Forks, which arrived this week, was the commander of the last steamer which sailed between Grand Forks and Winnipeg in 1879.

The trip was taken with a view of discovering whether the Red River is still navigable and whether it would be a good business proposition to place a line of steamers thereon. The trip was highly successful, and as a result steamers will start running immediately from Grand Forks to Winnipeg. When the St. Andrews locks north of Winnipeg, on the Red River are completed the boats will be able to run from Grand Forks clear to the head of Lake Winnipeg.

In the halcyon days before the advent of the C.P.R., the arrival of the steamboat from the south was a great event in little old Fort Garry. As for the day when the first steamer arrived in the spring after a six months silence for the little frontier town, the whole population turned out and there was a celebration and carousing.

It was in the steamboat business along the Red River that Jim Hill, the railway magnate, made the foundation of his fortune. He was a frequent visitor at Winnipeg; in fact, made Winnipeg his headquarters for two years. Winnipeg old-timers can tell many tales of Jim Hill.

Some three years ago Hill made his first visit to Winnipeg since he left twenty-five years before. It was perfectly astonishing how he remembered the old friends and events of the early days. He said that things which had transpired twenty-five years ago were more firmly impressed on his memory than events of a few years previous. An interesting incident which took place at the Manitoba Club at that time illustrate this. An old Frenchman who said he knew Hill came to the club and asked to see the magnate. Hill had him ushered in and remembered the Frenchman well. They spent several minutes chatting and laughing about the old days.

"You sold me a horse once," said Hill suddenly.

"Oui," added the old man.

"An old grey mare and its name was Marie."

"Oui, oui," responded the Frenchman.

"It developed a spavin, too, later on," said Hill; and the Frenchman's answer was lost amidst the roars of laughter of those present.

Discipline!

From the class room occupied by the roughest boys in the Sunday school came a great uproar. A secretary in the next room went to investigate. Complete silence followed the opening of the class room door.

"Have you a teacher?"

"No."

"Do you want one?"

"No."

"Then be quiet or you'll get one."

Result, comparative peace.

A MALIBRAN VICTORY

The Great Singer's Lively Debut In an English City.

SHE DEFIED THE DIRECTORS.

Considering That She Had Been Shabbily Treated, Malibran Sang as Long as She Wanted to and Had a Most Satisfactory Revenge.

Quarrels between opera singers and managers call to mind an incident in the life of Malibran. It was in 1829, when Malibran returned to England from New York and made her debut at Birmingham at the music festival as Malibran Garcia. Miss Paton had already become a favorite there and was allowed to choose her own songs and sing as many as she pleased, whereas Malibran was compelled to sing only what was assigned to her. Garcia bore the indignity with such patience as she could command until one morning she saw the announcement that Miss Paton would sing six songs that evening and that she would sing but two. Then it was that, realizing that much of her success for the season in England depended on her having a better place in the program, she stormed the directors.

In vain the directors endeavored to avoid receiving her, but she made short work of ceremony, and while they were framing an excuse to pacify her she broke in upon them in a magnificent rage. In a jiffy she asked the chairman:

"Sir, have you sanctioned this program?" And, receiving a nod in the affirmative, she sailed along further.

"I had hoped," she said, "it had been issued without your sanction, for it assigns me two songs, both of which are hackneyed, while it gives my rival, Miss Paton, six. She has an established reputation here. Mine is yet to make, at least with your English audiences, and therefore if any preference should be given to any one it should be to me. On my success here depends all chance of my success in London. You forget this or do not care. You give me no chance of success, whereas all I want is justice. I want the same opportunity for displaying my ability as you allow Miss Paton. Here you advertise me for Romeo. But I performed that last night, and the public will say, 'Romeo on Monday, Romeo on Tuesday, Romeo on Wednesday—Romeo, Romeo, she can do nothing but Romeo.' I want fair play—no more, no less!"

Well, it was a great fuss. The directors endeavored to soothe her, for she had talked herself into a great passion, but they made their mistake in pointing to the fact that the program was printed and could not be changed. In vain Malibran argued that she should sing six or an equal number of songs with Miss Paton, and finally she went off in a great huff, declaring if they would not right her she would right herself.

The evening advertised came, and the theater was crowded with the rank, beauty and fashion of Birmingham, as every one familiar with English music festivals would expect. The performance commenced. Some one sang, then Braham followed, and finally came Miss Paton. As usual, she was heartily received. Then Malibran came forward amid many plaudits, undoubtedly agitated at the applause, and stood for a minute with her arms folded and her eyes on the ground.

There was a piano near the footlights, and the music stool stood at the back of the stage. Malibran stood near the piano, but did not touch a key, while in a manner until then unknown in England she warbled the well known aria "Una voce poco fa." Peal followed peal of applause, and when the conductor came to lead Malibran away the cries of encore were so loud as to make him retreat, and again Malibran was in the hands of the audience.

For some time the applause continued and finally died away. When all was silence Malibran started up suddenly, made a pretty obeisance, hastily ran to the back part of the stage and brought out a piano stool. Then, motioning to the orchestra not to play, she played a preludio and then an accompaniment to the song she had just given. But that was not all. When she came within a note or two of the conclusion she paused, cast a look at the wings, where the mystified director stood, laughingly shook her head and to the delight of the audience and the amazement of the directors commenced a new song. She had been singing Italian; now she sang Spanish, and when this had been applauded she started to retire. The audience, however, would not part with her, and when the conductor came to lead her off pit, gallery and boxes actually hissed the poor fellow.

There never was a more enthusiastic ovation to a singer in Birmingham, and, thus encouraged, Malibran gracefully waved the conductor off and again sat down to play. She passed from Spanish to German, German to French and finally from French to English, and the result was that she occupied so much time that the nervously waiting Miss Paton sang only two songs instead of six!

There was a lively scene behind the curtain when Malibran at length retired. But to the acting director, who fumed and cried, "Madam, you have played us an astonishing trick!" she only smiled and said, "I told you that I would right myself if you wronged me—and I did."

At the London Camp.

Col. J. Peters, who was at one time D.O.C. in Toronto, and who has recently been appointed to a similar command in British Columbia, is D.O.C. at London and was camp commandant there this year. Col Peters is nothing if not democratic and he wanders in and out among all classes of soldiers with the greatest freedom. He is especially interested in shooting, and this interest was particularly marked this year when the "efficiency pay" of the men was arranged—and it is said most unjustly—on a basis of certain high scores at the targets.

One morning at London when a certain regiment was doing its rifle shooting at the Cove ranges, Col. Peters with a member of his staff came walking along the line of prostrate soldiers, observing their manner of firing, etc. One man caught his attention and seemed particularly worthy of notice. He had the rifle at his left shoulder and was looking along the barrel in a most peculiar manner.

"Just look at that man," shouted the colonel, "nobody on earth could shoot like that."

Just then the man fired, there was a pause, and the marker put up the sign for a "bulls-eye."

Up to this time the soldier had said nothing but now he calmly turned his head and said:

"How's that old sport?"

The colonel quietly turned and walked away to hide his emotion.

Changes in the West.

During the past few years since the towns of the prairie provinces have begun to lose their old-time western flavor and have assumed metropolitan airs and taken on down east manners, the inhabitants have grown very touchy over anything which hints that there is any lack of culture or refinement.

Even the names of some of the western cities, which to easterners are attractive by their striking originality, have been the subject of much heart-burning. The citizens of old Rat Portage succeeded in getting the much more euphonious name of Kenora. Moose Jaw has soberly discussed the question of a change, while Medicine Hat people have an idea that if they secured a new name, paragraph writers, funny men and space poets would cease jibing at their city as "the place where the weather comes from."

The natives of Pincher Creek even think that the name of their growing town is scarcely dignified enough for their rising importance in Southern Alberta. It sounds, they imagine, too much like Indians, cowboys, six-shooters and general wild-woolliness.

HER BURNED MUSHROOMS.

In the Train of the Disaster Came Happiness.

By ANITA CARR.

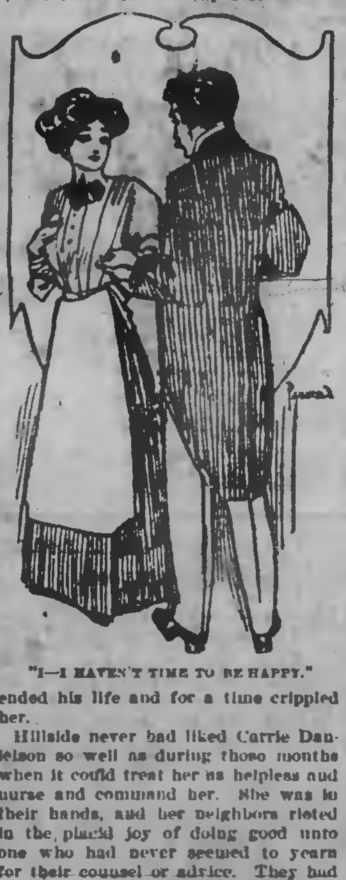
[Copyrighted, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Flighty—that was what the nice, motherly old ladies of Hillside called Carrie Danielson. Now, if a person happens to be very tall and correspondingly broad and wears No. 6 shoes nobody ever applies that adjective to her. If you are flighty it stands to reason you are small and fluffy and never quiet.

That had been Carrie's description through her girlhood and early married life. She was a pretty little thing, but with strength enough of character in her face in spite of her tilted nose and small, red mouth and curved cheek had any one stopped to consider those attractions as modified by the resolute chin and angle of the head.

She loved the gayeties of life and the sunshine. Happiness surrounded her as an aureole, and she ran from trouble, to the displeasure of her critics who fastened the adjective upon her.

She and Tom were happy those three years before the railway accident that ended his life and for a time crippled her.



"I—I HAVEN'T TIME TO BE HAPPY."

Hillside never had liked Carrie Danielson so well as during those months when it could treat her as helpless and nurse and command her. She was in their hands, and her neighbors rioted in the placid joy of doing good unto one who had never seemed to yearn for their counsel or advice. They had planned it all out in those first and days after the accident just what Carrie should do after she had fully recovered.

"Of course she will sell this cottage," Mrs. Barnes said during one of the long night watches. "They'd just got it paid for too! She can go back to her folks. It's too bad they moved away when they did!"

"Yes," agreed Mrs. Croft, "she'll have to. Tom didn't leave her anything besides the cottage. She can't live on air, and she's not the go-ahead sort who can do things for themselves. Carrie's always been so flighty."

When Carrie Danielson finally got well and was able to go about as usual, very pale and quiet in her black clothes and different from the gay and laughing girl they had always known, Hillside was disgruntled and shocked by the upsetting of all its plans for her.

"No," she told the man who wanted to buy her cottage; "I'm going to keep it and stay right here. It is home to me. It is not for sale."

Mrs. Barnes went over at once when the news reached her. "Carrie," she began abruptly, "how are you going to do it? What are you going to live on?"

There was a faint gleam of the old, humorous smile on Carrie's lips as she surveyed her inquisitor's grimly disapproving face. "I'm going to grow mushrooms," she announced, "and ship them to New York."

Perhaps had it been any other commodity than mushrooms Hillside would not have seethed with disapproval as it did. Mushrooms to them were objects of suspicion, classed with weeds and other obnoxious products of nature, without which the human race could get along famously.

That there were enough persons in the world who yearned for mushrooms to give Carrie a living income seemed highly improbable, but all the protests were met by her with facts, figures and methods, for she had studied the subject thoroughly before deciding to go into it.

The determination with which she clung to her project was another matter for surprise. No one had dreamed she had such persistence in her. And the mushroom sheds were built and the beds made, and Carrie started in business.

The first check Carrie received from the big New York hotel she cried over before half the women of the town had gazed upon it with their own eyes and had seen money really was forthcoming for the queer creamy white fungi that had been so carefully packed in baskets and put on the train by their grower's own hands.

It was not such a large check, but it was something, and she had earned it. From then on Hillside had to admit that possibly Carrie had more brains than had been imagined. Still they could not at once abandon the oversight they kept upon her.

"She will never outgrow her flightiness," Mrs. Barnes said one day. "I met her downtown in this cold, raw wind with no fur around her neck and just a lace blouse over her throat. Carrie needs some one to look after her."

"Oh, she'll marry again," said Mrs. Croft comfortably. "She's too pretty not to. And there's no sense in her living alone in that little cottage and growing those toadstools—well, they look just the same, anyway—all the rest of her life! But she doesn't seem to have eyes for any one, and poor Tom's been gone four years now. Dr White would be pretty attentive to her if she'd let him, and he's a fine man."

Yet, when Dr. White soon after asked Carrie to marry him she shook her head with a faint little smile and refused him. "It isn't that I don't appreciate you," she said, with an instinct to soften her refusal, "but, you see, I'm so busy here. I—I haven't time to be happy."

Yet there was a pang of regret in her heart as she watched his tall figure down the hill, for their cheerful comradeship had brightened her days.

He had brought her books and pamphlets on her work, had advised and sympathized, and she knew she would miss his brief but almost daily calls. But love, she told herself, she was done with. Time had softened her sorrow, but for her she thought the ordinary happy life of a woman was over and finished.

Dr. White after a time bravely tried to renew their former unsentimental comradeship, but that, too, seemed destroyed and the attempt a farce.

"I can't do it, Carrie," he broke out hoarsely one day. "I love you, and I can't pretend not to! I'm going away. Oh, Europe—Japan—anywhere to get away!"

And he went, and the days dragged on, each one opening a little wider the eyes of the woman in the small cottage as to what really was in her heart. But bravery was a part of Carrie Danielson's very nature, and nobody guessed.

"I guess Carrie didn't give a rap because Dr. White went to Europe," Mrs. Barnes said to Mrs. Croft. "She's just as smiling and bright as ever!"

"She's getting kind of peaked looking, seems to me," commented Mrs. Croft shrewdly.

It was an overturned lamp that brought disaster to Carrie. Amid the frantic struggles and shouts of the inefficient Hillside fire department her cottage and mushroom sheds burned to the ground.

She took it very resignedly when it happened, but the next day, wandering alone around the blackened pile her nerves gave way.

She was crying quietly, sitting on the charred remnants of a box, when Dr. White found her. He had come straight to her from the train. Perhaps he took courage from her very forlornness and discouragement, so different from her usual bright self reliance.

"I'm glad it happened!" he said emphatically. "Glad because now maybe you'll have time to think of me a little bit!"

"I—I've thought of you a lot," Carrie Danielson admitted as she dabbed her eyes and made instinctive passes at her tumbled hair. It was good to see him again.

Dr. White deliberately sat down on the blackened box and reached for her hand. "[illegible]" he said.

The Man and the Mummy.

"This," said the guide who was piloting a bunch of tourists through Egypt as he pointed to a mummy, "was a high priest, the wisest man of his day. He lived to a great age."

"Was his last illness fatal?" queried the wag of the bunch.

"Of course it was," answered the guide, with a look of pity at the other.

"That's queer," rejoined the waggish person. "His present appearance would seem to indicate that he was permanently cured."

Too Big a Price

Does the pursuit of wealth cut the American man of business off from the old fashioned relish of books and society? In other words, is he paying too big or disproportionate a price in time and strength for wealth and commercial prominence? My answer would be "Yes" beyond question.—A. Barton Hepburn in Century.

SHE CAN'T PLEASE ALL.

The Many Trials of the Girl Who Is Advised.

There are some women who never give their friends much anxiety. Whether or not they are any stronger physically than some of their sisters, people seem content to take them and their welfare pretty much for granted. "Oh, to be in that favored class!" says the girl whose friends just love to worry about her.

She is one of many. You know the type. They are, as a matter of fact, rather reckless in matters pertaining to their health. They are too busy doing other things, but they have the unfortunate failing of "looking frail." They are thin instead of stout, pale instead of rosy, and when tired their eyes have the strange propensity of looking like the proverbial burnt holes in a blanket.

By common consent it seems to have been agreed upon that they need tending and constant watching.

If a chance friend mets one of them on the street she would blush to miss the chance of recommending her pet cure-all.

"I tell you what you ought to do," says the robust person. "You just get into the habit of taking egg and milk three times a day and you'll look like another person."

The next time it is cod liver oil that is just what she needs, and again it's horseback riding three times a week or massage that would do wonders for her.

The solicitous interest of a batch of friends would be trying enough to put up with if they didn't all insist upon proffering advice profusely.

One can't be taking eggnogs and eating juicy steaks and lying down and taking walks in the fresh air all the time. One hasn't time to attend to so many matters, and, besides, sometimes they conflict.

"The waist you sent looks very well on me," writes one girl, "especially when I 'stand up straight' as Lucile is always thumping me on the back and commanding me to do.

"It's really quite a problem to know what to do, for I'm strong on making them all happy, but I can't be standing up straight and relaxing and throwing back my shoulders and lying down for a little rest all at the same time—these dear 500 friends, if only one could please them all, but how can it be done?"

Gives Studio Teas For Pet Cats.

Desire to attract attention probably is just as strong among American women writers as it is among their sisters in France, but in this republic they do not dare go to the length of wearing men's clothes, which have been adopted recently by ambitious penwomen in France. The law there being lenient, these literary lionesses are permitted to stride down the boulevards garbed in fur trousers. But in America this is not possible, and women of letters must have recourse to other methods. An eccentric writer who bears a high sounding title delights, when receiving guests, to wear diaphanous drapery and repose on a lounge. Sometimes she shuts her eyes, and the guests may have the pleasure of gazing on sleeping beauty. Society seems to have discarded freak performances only that "intellectual queens" may take them up. A pretty young writer in Washington, whose father has an official position, gives studio teas for the pet cats of her friends, and the company spend hours solemnly selecting the proper shade of ribbon to make a neck ruff for a particular pussy.

Fatal Vacillation.

Cultivate firmness of purpose. Without it, though your talents are high and your opportunities wide, your life record will be "nothing done."

Who is the one among your friends who has arrived? Is it the show girl of school days, the girl who could do many things well, but rarely knew what she wanted to do? The successful one is the girl of whom you can remember nothing save her pertinacity.

No girl succeeds who does not set her mind along a certain line and stick to it, though difficulties mount and temptations to turn aside are strong.

HOWELL WAS SENTENCED TO SIX MONTHS AT HARD LABOR IN CENTRAL PRISON

On Charge of Assaulting P. C. Newhall—Committed for Trial on Other Charge—Robt. Wilson Also Committed for Trial on Charge of Assisting Escaped Prisoner —The Evidence.

Six months in Central Prison at hard labor was the judgment of Magistrate Dumble at Police Court yestedray afternoon against Wesley Howell, who was charged with having assaulted P. C. Newhall on the night of last Thursday while the officer was placing him in the lockup as a result of disorderly conduct. On the charge of having escaped from custody, Howell was committed for trial.

Robert Wilson, who was charged with assisting in the escape, was also committed for trial. In answer to the accused's counsel, who made an application for bail, the magistrate stated that he would allow the defendant his freedom until called for if two sureties of $250 each were offered by reliable parties.

Mr. G. N. Gordon acted in the interests of the defendants Howell and Wilson, and County Crown Attorney Wood conducted the prosecution.

THE EVIDENCE.

The charge against Howell of unlawfully escaping from custody was first proceeded with, and P. C. McGinty was called to the witness-box. He stated that on Friday last about 12.15 p.m. Howell asked if he would be allowed to use the telephone, giving as his reason that he would be able to catch the person he wished to speak to at noon. He allowed the prisoner to go to the machine. During the conversation Howell turned around and said, "You are wanted at the phone," and it was while he (McGinty) was in the act of answering that the prisoner ran out the door and down Simcoe street to the railway track and over to the Quaker Oats Co. building. On the east side of the building Howell entered through a window, and that was the last he saw of him until brought to the station by P. C. Newhall that night.

P. C. Newhall, next called, told the circumstances in regard to the arrest of Howell. He said that he ascertained the whereabouts of the escaped prisoner about 10 o'clock that night. Accompanied by P. C.'s Meharry and Meagher, he went over to Wilson's home on Mark street, and the officers surrounded the house. Howell and Wilson could be seen in the back kitchen talking together. Howell was shaking hands with Wilson and saying good-bye. As the former was about to leave the house the officers arrested him and took him to the police station.

The charge of assisting Howell to escape, preferred against Wilson, was next dealt with, and P. C. Newhall was the only witness who gave evidence. Much of his evidence is unprintable on account of the many coarse oaths, and only the main points are given.

He stated that Wilson had been arrested and placed in custody shortly after Howell had been taken to the lock-up. The entire conversation between the two men had been heard by him. When he first noticed Howell he was changing his clothes, and was asking Wilson if he had his collar. Wilson replied that he had not, and on being told the size Howell required, went upstairs and returned with one, which Howell put on. Wilson next offered Howell a drink from a flask, and made a statement to the effect that they had given P. C. McGinty a nice slip, but regretted that it was not Newhall instead. Wilson then complimented Howell for kicking the officer the night before, and expressed a wish that he had been killed. Wilson also said to Howell that he thought it was all up with him when P. C. McGinty locked the cell door after he (Wilson) had been in to see him, and further stated that "we worked it all right, after all; they will never suspect me for getting your clothes for you, as I drove up and got them. No one was in your house at all." Continuing, Wilson advised Howell to be on the lookout for detectives when he reached Toronto, and said it would be a good thing if he shaved off his moustache. Howell replied that he would be all right when he reached Alice street. Wilson said he was afraid they would telephone, and if they should find out it would make it bad for him, and added that nobody knew that he (Howell) had been in the house. Shortly after this Howell said that it was time for him to go, and at this Wilson warned him to be on the watch for the policemen. But if he should be caught, he knew of people who would swear that P. C. Newhall had struck him with a baton several times. Howell said he had been nearly caught when he went to the mill for his pay the morning before. A little girl had told him that P. C. Meagher had ridden past him on a wheel, and P. C. McGinty had also passed him not two feet away. Howell was handed some more liquor, tobacco and matches by Wilson, and after saying good-bye, quietly opened the door about two inches away. The officers then pushed in the door. Howell made an effort to strike P. C. Meharry, and Wilson backed up into a corner and held up his hands with the remark that he was caught and would go along quietly. Howell was then taken to the lock-up. About 2 o'clock the officers went over to the house to bring Wilson to the police station. When told the object of their visit, he said, "It's too bad I made such a fool of myself. I would not have had him here had I thought it would be found out."

When asked by the defendant's counsel how it was that he heard so much of the conversation, the witness said that he could see and hear the two men through a crack in the kitchen. As the night was a fine one and the moon was shining at the time, he had written some of the statements then, and the remainder at another time. But Mr. Gordon could not see how any person could remember so many statements so accurately.

ASSAULT CHARGE.

The assault charge was next proceeded with. Mr. Gordon asked that the defendant be allowed to withdraw his previous plea of guilty, but this was not granted by the magistrate, and P. C. Newhall was again called to the stand.

His evidence was to the effect that he had warned Howell on Thursday night to move on. He refused, and made statements to another man that he could lick Newhall or fifty like him, and would do so before the night was over. Soon after he arrested Howell, who on the way to the station was scrapping all the time. On reaching the cell, Howell did the kicking, and the injuries received were so serious that he had to consult a doctor, and was receiving medical attention yet. It was not true that he had struck the prisoner with a baton, as he did not carry one at the time.

The magistrate refused to take into consideration the fact that the defendant had been drinking, or that he was hardly responsible for what he had done to the officer, as suggested by his counsel. The act, said his Worship, was that of a brute, and he would not tolerate such conduct.

GOOD FINDS OF OIL AND GAS LOOKED FOR HERE

Mr. James Peat, who is sinking a gas well on the Kincaid farm, stated that owing to a mishap work is suspended. He says that in a few days it will be resumed. The well is now down 200 feet, and Mr. Peat expects to strike oil or gas before 600 feet is reached. He further added that the geological formation there indicated that gas or oil exists. The only thing he fears is that the Trenton rock may not be sufficiently deep. It appears that the rock becomes more shallow as you approach the west. He thinks better results might be obtained a few miles further east. By this he does not mean to convey the idea that gas or oil will not be found here. He is hopeful that this test will produce satisfactory results. It may be necessary to sink other wells, as the wealthy Pennsylvania syndicate, who are operating here have every confidence that they will be completely successful.

EXCAVATING SOLID ROCK FOR WHEEL-HOUSE AT DAM

The wheel pit at the new waterwork dam is occupying the minds of the Bishop Construction people just now. The coffer dam is completed, and the water is pumped out and for some time a big gang of men have been busy digging the wheel pit. This is no small job. The river bed is of solid rock, which is in thin layers and exceptionally hard to excavate. Dynamite is used freely and after each blast the men with single horse dump carts get down in the hole and hustle the debris out. Besides the horses the dump cars on the overhead cable are also used to great advantage. The material taken out is carted just north of the dam and dumped down the river bank to serve as a ballast and prevent the bank washing away.

Yesterday afternoon the wheel pit had been cut down several feet, and there is still two feet to be taken out yet. This will not be finished until the middle of next week, and then the concrete work will be started. There are over half a hundred men employed besides horses.

Three pumps are kept going all the time to keep the water out of the coffer dam. The water runs in through the gravel, which is on top of the rock formation in the river bed. The power for these pumps is furnished by the big seven-ton boiler which arrived a few days ago.

On the east side of the river the company has a big gang working on the railway siding from the G.T.R. branch to the Quaker Oats, to a site where the company's store house will be erected. This work was completed last night, and now the men will be started on the erection of the store house for the cement.

The weather has been very favorable for this work, and the Bishop Construction Company have certainly been losing no time.

YOUNG MAN THREATENED TO BURN HOUSE AND OCCUPANT

County Constable Moore arrived back to the city at an early hour this morning, after having visited the north country, in the vicinity of Kinmount, in search of a young man who is charged with a serious offence. The events leading up to the information being laid are that the young man called at the home of a Mrs Peters one night recently and asked that he be admitted. The lady, who was alone at the time, refused, and at this the young fellow threatened to burn down the house and cause other harm. Shortly afterwards Mrs. Peters escaped from the house and ran to a neighbor's, where she found shelter. The premises where the threats were made is in a wild section of the country, and as the information was not laid for some time after, the offender had lots of time to clear out or hide. The people living in the vicinity were unable to render any assistance to the officer, and it would appear that he was rather up against it.

He also carried a warrant for the arrest of another man, who is charged with injuring another woman, but, as in the former case, he had cleared out and left for parts unknown.

"IS NOT A FREE TRADE BILL" SAID PRESIDENT TAFT

He Gives His Reasons for Signing the New Tariff Measure —The Objections to the Tariff Eliminated.

Washington, Aug. 5.—In a statement given out to-night regarding the Tariff Bill, President Taft said: "I have signed the Tariff Bill because I believe it to be the result of a sincere effort on the part of the Republican party to make a downward revision. The bill is not a perfect tariff bill or a complete compliance with the promises made, strictly interpreted, but a fulfilment free from criticism in respect to a subject matter involving many schedules and thousands of articles could not be expected. It suffices to say there have been very few increases in rates, and they constitute a sufficient amount to justify the statement that this bill is a substantial downward revision and a reduction of excessive rates. This is not a free trade bill. It was not intended to be so.

"In a great majority the rates are such as are necessary to protect American industries, but are low enough in case of abnormal increase of demand and raising of prices to permit the possibility of the importation of the foreign article and thus to prevent excessive prices."

NEW PUBLIC SCHOOL READERS ISSUED IN TORONTO YESTERDAY

Have Not Yet Reached This City, But Will be on Sale Here Before 20th of Month—Inspirational Rather Than Informational.

Yesterday the four new Public school readers were placed on sale in the city of Toronto. The publishers, The T. Eaton Co., are at present working at full blast in an endeavor to satisfy the demand of the public before the first of September. Owing to some delay in furnishing the plates the Primer is not ready yet, but as they can be printed at the rate of 10,000 a day, they will be turned out in plenty of time for the opening of the rural schools on August 16.

None of the books have, so far, reached Peterborough, but the local bookstores are expecting them any day now, and expect to have them on sale before the twelfth of the month.

The new books, inasmuch as they are intended to teach scholars ranging from five to fourteen or fifteen years of age to read, are aimed to be distinctly reading books, rather than information books. Any information the scholars may desire through the medium of books is supposed to be supplied by their supplementary reading, so that the new texts are somewhat different from the old ones.

Well-defined lines have been adopted in the choice of material. The spirit of patriotism — differentiated from jingoism — runs through the series. It is sought to cultivate patriotic sentiment by including historic records of "deeds done to make the Empire great and keep it free." Poetry is prominent in this connection, and foremost scenes in Canadian life. Much attention is also paid to nature and the seasons in both prose and poetry.

Labor is given a place d'honneur. Selections from Ruskin's "Work and Wages," and Carlyle's "Honorable Toil" have their place with Mark Twain's humorous "Work and Play." Sports are included in the selections, and music is given considerable attention.

Many tales from classics find a place, and an interesting series of Russian, Italian, French and other national tales, the department taking the view that a story which has lasted down the ages has worth in it. There are twenty-three selections from the Bible and many helpful extracts from the old readers have been included.

An effort has been made to have as many standard writers as possible represented, and there is a larger list of Canadian authors than ever before.

Mechanically, the books are pronounced excellent. The type, binding, and illustrations are good, the last-named being all specially prepared by Canadian artists for the new readers.

LORD KITCHENER PROMOTED SUCCEEDS DUKE OF CONNAUGHT

K. of K. is Made Inspector-General of the Mediterranean Forces From Which Duke is Said to Have Resigned Because of Unnecessary Expense.

London, Aug. 7.—Lord Kitchener, commander of the British forces in India, has been appointed to succeed the Duke of Connaught as inspector-general of the Mediterranean forces, which post the duke recently resigned on the ground of "the ineffective nature of the work and the useless expense to the nation involved therein."

Lord Kitchener will take the rank of field marshal and also become a member of the committee of imperial defence. The inspector-general has command of the garrisons at Malta and Gibraltar and all the British troop in Egypt, the Soudan and Cyprus.

The appointment of Lord Kitchener is coincident with added importance being attached to the post. The Duke of Connaught, in an official announcement said: "In view of the new developments in the organization of the Mediterranean command assumed increased importance and will be taken up by Lord Kitchener in the object of giving it it's proper place in the scheme of imperial defence.

It is understood that as a result of the Imperial Defence Conference which is now sitting, it is intended to co-ordinate all the military forces of the Empire and place Lord Kitchener at the head of an organization having the imperial army for it's special care. As a preparation for this work, for which he has gained valuable experience in India, on vacating the Indian command in September, Lord Kitchener will go to Japan to represent Great Britain at the Japanese grand manoeuvres in November and afterward make a tour of Canada, Australia and New Zealand to study the military organizations and consult with the colonial Government concerning them.

Lord Kitchener, who became 59 years old in June, is the youngest field marshal in the history of Great Britain. Lord Roberts was 60 years old when he was raised to the rank and Lord Wolseley 62.

Cigarette Consumption in Canada Drops off 30,000,000.

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—There were thirty million less cigarettes smoked in Canada last year than the year before. The decline is held to be entirely among boys of sixteen years or under, and to be entirely due to the restrictive legislation put through Parliament by the Government during the session of 1908. It is believed that the law actually prevented the smoking of from forty to fifty million cigarettes by the boys of the country, as the consumption was increasing, and if it had not been for the law there would have been an increase of from ten to twenty millions instead of a decline of thirty millions. This is a fair assumption, as the consumption was increasing more and more each year, and during the six years prior to 1908 the increase amounted to over seventy-five millions.

The total consumption of cigarettes last year was about three hundred and seventy millions. There were three hundred and fifty-six and three-quarter millions of domestic cigarettes consumed, or a decrease of twenty-eight millions, and there were twelve and three-quarter millions of imported cigarettes smoked, a decrease of about two millions.

The results are more impressive when it is remembered that the law was in force for only eight months of the year. It became effective on July 20, 1908, and the year closed for statistical purposes on March 31, 1909.

Mr. Burn was in some doubt as to whether he would have to be married again to Mrs. Kidd, his wife, but the wife has her name changed automatically.

WAS DAMAGED BY DROUTH FRUIT REPORT FOR JULY

Dry Weather is Expected to Materially Reduce the Crop But Better Than Average Yield is Expected as a Result of Recent Fine Growing Weather

Ottawa, Aug. 7.—The report of the Department of Agriculture on the fruit crop for July is not so encouraging as was the June report. The drouth of the early part of the month had its effect in reducing the crop materially. However, the latter portion of the month has somewhat revived the hopes of growers and a crop above the average is looked for.

Apples will be a light to medium crop, but the winter varieties promise to be a better quality than usual.

All over the Dominion the pear harvest will be light with the possible exception of Nova Scotia.

Plum, peaches, cherries and grapes will give a medium crop all over Canada, except the plum crop in British Columbia, which is light.

On account of shortage of fruit in European countries, there will be a good market for all the fruit Canada will have to export. The United States will be able to consume all its fruit products, but will likely export some to Europe on account of high prices.

Thinks Damage Is Slight.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 7.—Thomas Acheson, general grain agent of the Canadian Pacific Railway Co. states that reports of any damage to the grain owing to the storm will not reach him until late to-day, but he does not anticipate anything serious.

"Since the beginning of the season Mr. Acheson has kept faithful reports of all damage to growing grains and the amount covering the three large provinces of Manitoba, Alberta and Saskatchewan will not reach more than one per cent. of the total expected yield estimating the 1909 wheat crop at 120 million bushels, which is considered low. One per cent. damage is considered very light in comparison with other years.

"Of course," said Mr. Acheson, "the business communities generally will not feel such a slight loss. At specific points where the most damage has been done there will be a slight depression along the business men, but apart from the local points business men may so far rest easy."

Forty-Five Bushels to Acre.

Sterling, Alta., Aug. 7.—Reports of bumper crops in this district continue to arrive at the offices of the Townsite Syndicate. Word was received yesterday from the Wells' four thousand acre farm, three miles south of here, that wheat cutting will begin on August 8. ## HOTELMAN SENT UP FOR TRIAL

Brockville, Aug. 7.—The charge of perjury preferred a week ago by Rev. Thomas Leech, Anglican clergyman of Lansdowne, against Robert H. Service, proprietor of the Island View House, Rockport, was taken up in the Police Court yesterday. The charge was that on March 13 last Service made an affidavit in which he accused the plaintiff of openly canvassing voters in the polling booth to cast their ballots in favor of local option on Jan. 4.

It was shown that the clergyman had twice entered the polling booth in a private residence during the day, on one occasion just to get a glimpse of those inside and on the other at a time when the poll was about to close and all the votes in. No one heard him canvassing and Plunkett, the man he is alleged to have openly canvassed in the booth, swore that Leech spoke to him concerning a relative who was ill.

Magistrate Murphy considered the evidence sufficient to send Service for trial and accordingly committed him. Bail was fixed at $2,000 and promptly furnished.

The detective was sent here at the request of the woman's husband, who desired to set at rest certain rumors. ## LA PATRIE COMPLAINS

The following (translated) editorial from La Patrie throws a significant sidelight upon a question of importance. It is headed "English and French in Ontario." The article of La Patrie is as follows:

"The Department of Public Instruction of Ontario has just established a special school for the education of teachers capable of speaking French, for the purpose of instructing the young scholars of the first and second year in French-Canadian districts. We are in no hurry to rejoice over this. It does not mean that the Ontario Government has any intention of furnishing to the young French-Canadians instruction in their own tongue. In the schools of Ontario English alone is taught. But in French-Canadian districts, where children understand only their own tongue, teachers are necessary who can teach them in French at first, how to speak English. These teachers are now lacking, and the new school is to provide them. It is an improvement, no doubt, but where are the bi-lingual schools which our compatriots have demanded for so long a time?"

THE GILLIES LIMIT

The recent sales held by the Government of portions of the Gillies limit were well advertised. The province is to get a share of whatever profit is made out of the mines in the form of ten per cent. royalty at the pit's mouth on the silver taken out. This must always be borne in mind. It is a provision adopted by the Whitney Government. No matter how high or how low the lands go at the time of sale, the government gets this royalty. The sales, therefore, are extras, and correspond to the view of the market held by the buyers. So long as everything is up and above board, and the province's interests are protected, what more do the critics want?

It is impossible for the government to frown on private enterprise altogether, and it is equally impossible for it to work the mine. Whatever idea the government had formerly of going into mining, it is well that it gave it up. It looks too much like overdoing government to do so.

A VOICE FROM THE WEST

The following is taken from La Patrie and is entitled "Mgr. Langevin, and Our Rights as Catholics and as French." It is a reply delivered by Bishop Langevin: "In response to an address by the Catholic youth of Manitoba on St. Jean Baptiste Day, Mgr. Langevin spoke as follows: We ought never to cease affirming our rights as Catholics and Frenchmen. It is the way to keep ourselves clearly in mind of them and to bring them to the attention of those with whom we associate. Our fathers were the discoverers and pioneers of the Canadian west, and it was our missionaries who brought there the light of the Faith and of civilization. We are the first occupiers of the soil and we are heirs to a title which no other nationality can take from us. Keep your minds alive to this fact, and let us not forget that a people is not really strong unless it has a sense of its rights. We French-Canadians are not sufficiently patriotic. To-day, in which the atmosphere is surcharged with patriotism, we make certain concessions. We do not appreciate our strength. In this single province of Manitoba we have more than sixty organized French centres, where we are the masters. They are so many castles, and let us understand it so. We have many resources here, and let us profit by them. And I can truly say that it is due to your archbishop that the French language, the crucifix, and the costumes of the Religious have been kept in our schools. If I had yielded in the strife it would have been all over with these sacred things. Those clergymen and laymen who advised surrender did not understand the situation. Had we followed these fatal counsels there would have been no end to our sacrifices and confusion. We have striven, we have resisted, and by that resistance we have safeguarded everything. We have sometimes been insulted, but are insults for that reason to be redoubled? Would the clamor have stopped if we had yielded? It would be childish to pretend it. Our firm attitude has been the means, sometimes, of lessening the force of the storm, and I am glad to repeat that we have safeguarded everything.

• • • • • •

"Was it not the French who saved Canada from the American invasion and preserved it to England? It is the same in the west.

• • • • • •

"Do not be aggressive, but keep your rights."

Bishop Langevin evidently forgets the rebellion of 1885.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The Ontario Government loan is selling at a premium. Liberal journals please take notice.

---

The beer glasses have been reduced in size in old London. This advance in price on account of the new taxation shows the prompt working of recognized economic laws.—The Globe.

Yes, and the Globe will observe it is direct taxation, not tariff taxation, that has done it. Tariff taxation would lessen the consumption and importation not diminish the size of the article.

---

In order to lay the spirit of racial antagonism constantly uprising between English and French-Canadians, we propose that a number, say five thousand, of English-speaking young men propose to, and if accepted, marry the like number of French-Canadian young women. Our French-Canadian young men might reciprocate. This would be a veritable merger of the rival interests. Vive la Canadienne!

---

The lesson of the Gillies limit should convince Premier Whitney of the folly of putting great stores of natural wealth on the market in such haste that intending purchasers have no adequate means of ascertaining their value. The news has come of an astonishing rich discovery on the limit, made by an extremely fortunate purchaser some few weeks after completing his purchase.—The Globe.

This reference to the mine in which our fellow-citizen, Mr. James Kendrey, is a partner, is correct only in so far as the richness of the find is concerned. The company has to pay ten per cent. royalty to the province. Who will fail to remember the attacks on the government for its royalty policy? Liberal journals sometimes have short memories.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Ontario's New Readers

The new reading books authorized for use in the Public schools of Ontario are now ready to be placed in the hands of the pupils. The curiosity with which their appearance has been awaited was whetted by the announcement of the extremely low prices at which they would be supplied. A full set of the new books—including Primer, First, Second, Third and Fourth Readers—will cost the buyer 49 cents, whereas the price of a corresponding set of the old readers was $1.15.

Not only the curiosity, but also the critical faculty, was stimulated by the information that the Government had succeeded in thus reducing the former selling price by 57 per cent. Those who were prepared to find in the new series a declension in quality more or less commensurate with the great saving in price could hardly be blamed for their doubt. Now that they have the books to examine, it is safe to say that, in the minds even of those most grudging of praise to the Government, the gain in excellence will produce no less surprise than did the reduction in price. Mechanically and typographically the books are easily the best in the land ever furnished to Ontario pupils. The paper is of quite superior quality, the binding is substantial, the cover designs are attractive by their simplicity, the general make-up the books are very permanent-looking, and the printing could hardly be improved upon. Truly, the bookmakers are giving the people the worth of their money. On their part the editor of the series and those associated with him have filled the books with selections that appear to be very suitable for the primary purpose of Public school readers. That purpose is, of course, the providing of lessons in reading. Manifestly this main object has never been lost sight of, as in some cases it has been allowed to govern, to the exclusion of the various secondary objects editors of school readers are supposed to have in view. Space has been given to some extracts whose value for any other purpose might very well be questioned, but whose suitableness for use in exercises in fluent and articulate reading is self-evident. Had the editors been as attentive to the content as to the language of pieces they would probably have drawn more freely upon the works of such brilliant expository writers as some of the men of science of the last forty years of the Victorian era. Huxley and Tyndall, Proctor and Lord Avebury have written much that delights no less than it instructs. If in some instances the editors have made use of unseasoned and fugitive material, that might not otherwise been saved from oblivion, they have on the whole been guided by sound judgment and good taste. It could not but happen that many of the old favorites that have been retained in every series of readers used in our Public schools would turn up in this series. We welcome their reappearance, and we hope that for the best of them room will always be found in the books in which our children learn to read.

The new books are a credit to all who have had a hand in their preparation. The remarkably low price at which they are sold means a very great economy, one for which the public are indebted to the Government. Upon their admirable make-up the publishers are to be complimented. The editors are to be commended for the general judiciousness of their selections and for the grading of the matter.

THE Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,
Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

After he had spoken there was silence, a long, painful silence, during which Eve waged the battle that so many of her sex have waged before, the battle in which words are useless and tears of no account. She looked very slight, very young, very forlorn, as she stood there. Then, in the oppressive sense of waiting that filled the whole room, she looked up at him.

Her face was stained with tears; her thick, black lashes were still wet with them, but her expression, as her eyes met Loder's, was a strange example of the courage, the firmness, the power of sacrifice that may be hidden in a fragile vessel.

She said nothing, for in such a moment words do not come easily, but with the simplest, most submissive, most eloquent gesture in the world she set his perplexity to rest.

Taking his hand between hers, she lifted it and for a long, silent space held it against her lips.

CHAPTER XXXIII.

FOR awhile there was silence; then Loder, bitterly aware that he had conquered, poignantly conscious of the appeal that Eve's attitude made, found further endurance impossible. Gently freeing his hand, he moved away from her to the fireplace, taking up the position that she had first occupied.

"Eve," he said slowly, "I haven't finished yet. I haven't said everything. I'm going to tax your courage further."

With a touch of pained alarm, Eve lifted her head. "Further?" she said.

Loder shrank from the expression on her face. "Yes," he said with difficulty. "there's still another point to be faced. The matter doesn't end with my going back. To have the situation fully saved Chilcote must return—Chilcote must be brought to realise his responsibilities."

Eve's lips parted in dumb dismay.

"It must be done," he went on hurriedly, "and we have got to do it—you and I." He turned and looked at her.

"I? I could do nothing. What could I do?" Her voice failed.

"Everything," he said. "You could do everything. He is morally weak, but he has one sensitive point—the fear of a public exposure. Once make it plain to him that you know his secret and you can compel him to whatever course of action you select. It was to ask you to do this—to beg you to do this—that I came to you tonight. I know that it's demanding more than a woman's resolution—more than a woman's strength. But you are like no woman in the world!

"Eve," he cried, with sudden vehemence, "can't you see that it's imperative—the one thing to save us both?"

He stopped abruptly as he had begun, and a painful silence filled the room. Then, as before, Eve moved instinctively toward him, but this time her steps were slow and uncertain. Nearing his side, she put out her hand as if for comfort and support and, feeling his fingers tighten round it, stood for a moment resting in the contact.

"I understand," she said at last very slowly. "I understand. When will you take me to him?"

For a moment Loder said nothing, not daring to trust his voice. Then he answered low and abruptly. "Now!" he said. "Now, at once! Now, this moment, if I may. And—and remember that I know what it costs you." As if imbued with fear that his courage might fail him, he suddenly released her hand, and, crossing the room to where a long, dark cloak lay as she had thrown it on her return home, he picked it up, walked to her side and silently wrapped it about her. Then, still acting automatically, he moved to the door, opened it and stood aside while she passed out into the corridor.

In complete silence they descended the stairs and passed to the hall door. There Crapham, who had returned to his duties since Loder's entrance, came quickly forward with an offer of service.

But Loder dismissed him curtly, and, with something of the confusion bred of Chilcote's regime, the man drew back toward the staircase.

With a hasty movement Loder stepped forward and opening the door admitted a breath of chill air. When on the threshold he paused. It was his first sign of hesitation—the one instant in which nature rebelled against the conscience so tardily awakened. He stood motionless for a moment, and it is doubtful whether even Eve fully fathomed the bitterness of his renunciation—the blackness of the night that stretched before his eyes.

Behind him was everything; before him nothing. The everything symbolized by the luxurious house, the eagerly attentive servants, the pleasant atmosphere of responsibility; the nothing represented by the broad public thoroughfare, the passing figures, each unconscious of and uninterested in his existence. As an interloper he had entered this house; as an interloper—a masquerader—he had played his part, lived his hour, proved himself; as an interloper he was now passing back into the dim world of unrealized hopes and unachieved ambitions.

He stood rigidly quiet, his strong figure silhouetted against the lighted hall, his face cold and set; then, with a touch of fatality, chance cut short his struggle.

An empty hansom wheeled around the corner of the square. The cabman, seeing him, raised his whip in query, and involuntarily he nodded an acquiescence. A moment later he had helped Eve into the cab.

"Middle Temple lane," he directed, pausing on the step.

"Middle Temple lane is opposite Clifford's inn," he explained as he took his place beside her. "When we get out there we have only to cross Fleet street."

Eve bent her head in token that she understood, and the cab moved out into the roadway.

Within a few minutes the neighborhood of Grosvenor square was exchanged for the noisier and more crowded one of Piccadilly, but either the cabman was overcautious or the horse was below the average, for they made but slow progress through the more crowded streets. To the two sitting in silence the pace was well nigh unbearable. With every added movement the tension grew. The methodical care with which they moved seemed like the tightening of a string already strained to breaking point, yet neither spoke, because neither had the courage necessary for the words.

Once or twice as they traversed the Strand, Loder made a movement as if to break the silence, but nothing followed it. He continued to lean forward with a certain dogged stiffness, his clasped hands resting on the doors of the cab, his eyes staring straight ahead. Not once as they threaded their way did he dare to glance at Eve, though every movement, every stir of her garments, was forced upon his consciousness by his acutely awakened senses.

When at last they drew up before the dark archway of Middle Temple lane he descended hastily, and as he mechanically turned to protect Eve's dress from the wheel he looked at her fully for the first time since their enterprise had been undertaken. As he looked he felt his heart sink. He had expected to see the marks of suffering on her face, but the expression he saw suggested something more than mere mental pain.

All the rich color that usually deepened and softened the charm of her beauty had been erased as if by a long illness, and against the new pallor of her skin her blue eyes, her black hair and eyebrows seemed startlingly dark. A chill colder than remorse, a chill that bordered upon actual fear, touched Loder in that moment. With the first impulsive gesture he had allowed himself, he touched her arm.

"Eve"— he began unsteadily. Then the word died off his lips.

Without a sound, almost without a movement, she returned his glance, and something in her eyes checked what he might have said. In that one expressive look he understood all she had desired, all she had renounced—the full extent of the ordeal she had consented to and the motive that had compelled her consent. He drew back with the heavy sense that repentance and pity were equally futile—equally out of place.

Still in silence, she stepped to the pavement and stood aside while Loder dismissed the cab. To both there was something symbolic, something prophetic, in the dismissal. Without intention and almost unconsciously they drew closer together as the horse turned, its hoofs clattering on the roadway, its harness jingling, and, still without realization, they looked after the vehicle as it moved away down the long, shadowed thoroughfare toward the lights and the crowds that they had left. At last involuntarily they turned toward each other.

"Come," Loder said abruptly. "It's only across the road."

Fleet street is generally very quiet once midnight is passed, and Eve had no need of guidance or protection as they crossed the pavement, shining like ice in the lamplight. They crossed it slowly, walking apart, for the dread of physical contact that had possessed them in the cab seemed to have fallen on them again.

Inquisitiveness has little place in the region of the city, and they gained the opposite footpath unnoticed by the casual passerby. Then, still holding apart, they reached and entered Clifford's inn.

Inside the entrance they paused, and Eve shivered involuntarily. "How gray it is!" she said faintly. "And how cold! Like a graveyard."

Loder turned to her. For one moment control seemed shaken. His blood surged, his vision clouded. The sense that life and love were still within his reach filled him overwhelmingly. He turned toward Eve; he half extended his hands. Then, stirred by what impulse, moved by what instinct, it was impossible to say, he let them drop to his sides again.

"Come!" he said. "Come! This is the way. Keep close to me. Put your hand on my arm."

He spoke quietly, but his eyes were resolutely averted from her face as they crossed the dim, silent court.

Entering the gloomy doorway that led to his own rooms, he felt her fingers tremble on his arm, then tighten in their pressure as the bare passage and cheerless stairs met her view, but he set his lips.

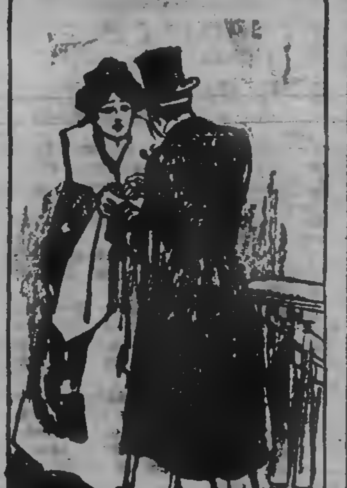
"Come!" he repeated in the same strained voice. "Come! It isn't far—three or four flights."

With a white face and a curious expression in her eyes Eve moved forward. She had released Loder's arm as they crossed the hall, and now, reaching the stairs, she put out her hand gropingly and caught the banister. She had a pained, numb sense of submission, of suffering that had sunk to apathy. Moving forward without resistance, she began to mount the stairs.

The ascent was made in silence. Loder went first, his shoulders braced, his head held erect. Eve, mechanically watchful of all his movements, followed a step or two behind. With weary monotony one flight of stairs succeeded another, each to her unaccustomed eyes seeming more colorless, more solitary, more desolate than the preceding one.

Then at last, with a sinking sense of apprehension, she realized that their goal was reached.

The knowledge broke sharply through her dulled senses, and, confronted by the closeness of her ordeal, she paused, her head lifted, her hand still nervously grasping the banister. Her lips parted as if in sudden demand for aid, but in the nervous expectation, the pained apprehension of the moment, no sound escaped them. Loder, resolutely crossing the landing, knew nothing of the silent appeal.



"Chilcote is dead."

For a second she stood hesitating; then her own weakness, her own shrinking dismay, were submerged in the interest of his movements. Slowly mounting the remaining steps, she followed him as if fascinated toward the door that showed dingily conspicuous in the light of an unshaded gas jet.

Almost at the moment that she reached his side he extended his hand toward the door. The action was decisive and hurried, as though he feared to trust himself.

For a space he fumbled with the lock. And Eve, standing close behind him, heard the handle creak and turn under his pressure. Then he shook the door.

FRIGHTFUL STOMACH TROUBLE

For Four Long Years He Suffered—Then "Fruit-a-tives" Brought Relief.

Stratford Centre, Wolfe Co., Que.
May 11th, 1908.

I have been completely cured of a frightful condition of my stomach through this wonderful medicine, "Fruit-a-tives." I suffered for four long years with this trouble. My head ached incessantly. I could not eat anything but what I suffered awful pains from indigestion. I used every known remedy and was treated by physicians, but the dyspepsia and headaches persisted in spite of the treatment.

I was told to try "Fruit-a-tives," and I sent for six boxes, and this was the only medicine that did me any good. I am now entirely well, I can eat ordinary food and I never have a headache, and for this relief I thank this wonderful remedy "Fruit-a-tives." My case is well known in this vicinity and you may publish this statement.

CAT CUTS THROAT TAKES OUT BONE

New York, Aug. 6.—Doc Ginger, a tramp cat which has been adopted by the keepers of the Morgue, performed a singular operation (tracheotomy) on himself this morning with such amazing success that the wound in his throat was healed within an hour after the operation.

Last Friday there was fish for lunch and Doc Ginger was helped to a generous portion. Three hours later a great change had come over the cat. He was coughing violently and seemed in great distress. Albert Goldie, assistant superintendent of the Morgue, thought he had a cold and gave him a dose of quinine.

But the cough seemed even worse on Saturday, and yesterday Goldie was so alarmed that he decided to send for Dr. John McAllister.

The cat was not to be found when Dr. McAllister arrived. A search was made, and finally Doc Ginger was found located in a small room facing the river. At his feet lay a fish bone about an inch and a half long and an eighth of an inch thick. Doc Ginger was licking his paw and then carefully rubbing a wound in his throat.

"This is a very successful operation,' said Dr. McAllister, after he had examined Doc Ginger. "The 'Doctor' is the first surgeon I ever met who could perform a tracheotomy on himself. He has torn open his windpipe, or trachea, with his paw, taken the bone out, and now the wound is healing nicely."

FIRE IN A STRANGE PLACE

A fire on the roof of a hat of a pretty girl travelling at the Union Station recently, at Atlanta, Ga., called out two fire companies, a hose cart, a score of willing amateur firemen, delayed a fast train and destroyed about $30 worth of finery upon the "peach basket" aforesaid.

The young woman, en route to New York, rushed into the station for something to eat. In paying her check she swung the hat too close to the cigar lighter. In an instant it was a mass of flames. A waiter sent in a fire alarm.

STOP THAT SCRATCHING

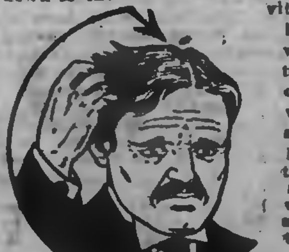
Just as long as you have dandruff your head will itch. It's the little microbes that are gnawing down into the hair roots. It may take a long time for these persistent pests to get down to the vital part but when they do they will destroy life of the hair in a very short time.



"My hair was falling out rapidly and becoming grey when I heard of your guaranteed Hair Restorer, and, after using one bottle my hair stopped turning grey. The first application removed the itching, my hair stopped falling out and I now have a new and it is soft, glossy and pliable." Carrie Williams, 844 Clinton Ave., South, Rochester, N.Y.

LIVELY TILT AT POLICE COURT THIS MORNING

The remark, "I'll give you another free cigar," made to P. C. Newhall by one of the young men in police court this morning had a very bad effect, for it caused a clash between that officer and Mr. G. N. Gordon, who had conducted the case for the above defendant.

In the previous case a statement had been made in regard to the policeman getting free lunches at a local restaurant, where one of the defendants was engaged. After the magistrate had dismissed the case and the principals were leaving the court room, the words were said to P. C. Newhall, "I'll give you another free cigar," and added to this were the words, "Your lies don't count all the time. I called you back one night for the price of ten cents. That's the kind of a guy you are."

P. C. Newhall took offence at these statements, and refused to allow the person who made them to leave the station, placing himself against the door at the same time. Mr. Gordon advising the young man to ask the officer to allow him to leave. This he did, but P. C. Newhall refused, stating that he would lay an information against him for using insulting language. One word led to another. The young man accused the officer of securing a lunch in a restaurant and not paying for it, and referring to P. C. Newhall, said, "That's how cheap you are." The officer met this statement with a remark that he would eat anything in the restaurant, and further called the young man a smart Alec. The two parties adjourned to the court-room, but on hearing the facts of the occurrence, the magistrate refused to do anything in the matter. He, however, stated that the officer should not have paid any attention to the remarks against him, and advised him not to take offence so readily in the future.

WARNING FOR YOUNG MEN WHO MISBEHAVE ON STREET

The practice of young men, who loiter about the streets, blocking the sidewalks, and otherwise annoying pedestrians, should and must be stopped. Frequently ladies are insulted, not perhaps from any motive, but on account of the young men concerned, who do not appear to recognize the fact that their actions and conversation is annoying, to say the least.

Three young men were charged in police court this morning with the above offence, but on hearing the evidence of several witnesses, the Magistrate dismissed them, with a warning, and some advice as to how to conduct themselves in the future.

CRYSTAL AMUSEMENT CO.'S MOVING PICTURE CAMERA

It was mentioned in the Review some time ago that the Crystal Amusement Company would purchase a moving picture camera. The camera arrived last week and is at Berlin in the care of Mr. Oscar Rumple, the treasurer of the Crystal Amusement Co.

Mr. Edwards says the machine will be here before long, and its process of operation is now being studied by Mr. Rumple.

It will be quite an attraction for the local picture show devotees when pictures can be shown here of Peterborough scenes, and Mr Edwards says the new machine will be employed in taking local pictures when it arrives here.

BIG LOCK FACTORY MAY COME TO CANADA AND TO PETERBORO'

The Review is informed on reliable authority that there is a strong probability of a branch of an up-to-date American lock factory coming to Canada. It will be a large concern and will employ 300 or 400 hands. The difficulty in the way at the present time, as for some time past, is the tariff. If the tariff can be adjusted so as to protect where it ought to protect, and let it in free where there is no need of protection, the factory will come sure. Belleville, Peterborough, L'Orignal and Toronto are spoken of as the likely points of choice. The parties concerned say they do not want any bonus, merely a favorable tariff. No doubt the city council and the Board of Trade will get busy and see that Peterborough's advantages are not lost sight of. A factory or two like that would help things along wonderfully.

HOW PETERBORO' PEOPLE WILL SPEND THE HOLIDAY

Printer's Picnic.
Stony Lake Regatta.
Victoria 'Harriers' Meet at Riverside Park.
Turf Club races.

Peterborough people will have a good many ways to spend the holiday next Monday. For those who stay in the town, there are several ways of putting in the time between sunrise and sunset. The Victoria Harriers are holding a big athletic meet at Riverside Park in the afternoon and the Peterborough Turf Club are having a racing matinee at the Driving Park. Both these events start at two o'clock and should be well attended. For those who like Rice Lake and the vicinity, the Printers are running an excursion down the river to Idyl Wild, on the steamer Otonabee. The chief attraction of this excursion will be the baseball match between the employees of the Review and Examiner Offices, and for those who like real hair-raising and sensational times, the above trip is highly recommended.

The Stony Lake regatta will draw a large crowd up to that point, and as the railways are all offering cut rates a large number will take advantage of them, to journey up to Toronto for the baseball, matches, etc.

MAY NOT USE SMITH'S FALLS-PETERBORO' ROUTE

Montreal, Aug. 7.—There is a story here to the effect that the C.P.R. will not use the whole distance of the line from Smith's Falls to Peterborough in the formation of their great grain line from Montreal to Victoria Harbor, but that a cut-off section will be built that will reduce the distance very considerably.

This week the company's double-track from Vaudreuil to Finch, a distance of 55 miles, will be finished, thus completing the double track on the Montreal and Smith's Falls section.

THEY ALL SEEM TO HAVE MONEY

LAUNCHES LEFT FOR THE LAKES

A large number of launches left this afternoon to take the trip up the canal to Stoney Lake. They were attracted by the big regatta which is being held at that point on Monday. The launches left here between one and two o'clock, and will reach Juniper to-night about six o'clock. Most of them will return next Tuesday, as the locks will not open for them on Monday night.

KELSEY HEATING

¶Is your home warmed satisfactorily? If not, the chances are that it will pay you to discard the old apparatus entirely and replace it with a KELSEY.

¶The principles of hygienic heating and fuel economy are better understood now than when thousands of heaters in use were built. The KELSEY is the embodiment of the highest attainments of heating engineering.

¶The KELSEY Zig-Zag Heat Tubes of which the fire box is formed and by which greater volumes of air are warmed and FORCED to every part of the house than is possible in any other heater, saves you enough in coal bills to more than pay for the change, to say nothing of the comfort of having your house kept at just the right temperature from top to bottom all the time. Let us prove it to you.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

WILL CRUISE TO LAKE SIMCOE

Party of Eight Young Men Started This Morning for Two Weeks Outing on the Water

The Swastika Outing Club left today for a two weeks' cruise up the Trent Valley route in Mr. Sim English's new gasoline launch. The boys intend spending the first few days at Stony Lake, and then proceed further up, touching all the principal points as far as Lake Simcoe. The party consists of eight, and all expect to have a very enjoyable outing.

DEATH OF WELL KNOWN BELLEVILLE MAN

While waiting for her father, who was to accompany her on an outing, Miss Ida Denmark, a nurse at the Royal Victoria Hospital, yesterday received word that he had died suddenly in a cab and was even then at the hospital, having been brought there just too late for medical attendance to be of any avail.

Miss Denmark, to whom this blow came with tragic suddenness, is the daughter of Mr. George Denmark, a prominent lawyer and ex-alderman of Belleville. Apparently in the best of health, Mr. Denmark had come to Montreal a few days ago to see his daughter. Yesterday Miss Denmark was off duty, and father and daughter had arranged to spend a happy afternoon together. She was ready and waiting for him, wondering what could have kept him late, when the news was gently broken to her that her father had died suddenly and even then was at the hospital, having been taken there by a kindly passerby who had no knowledge of the fact that the hospital roof sheltered the daughter of the dead man.

Mr Denmark early in the afternoon was on his way to the hospital, walked up University street and suddenly was overcome by illness. A student who was passing at the time came to his assistance, and having obtained a cab, assisted Mr. Denmark into it and urged the cabman to make all haste to the Royal Victoria. Mr Denmark expired in the cab before the doors of the hospital were reached. The first his waiting daughter knew of his illness was the news that her father had kept his tryst with her, but in death instead of life.

Mr. Denmark had apparently suffered from heart disease for some time, and the cause of death is attributed to heart failure, brought on by over exertion.

This morning the coroner disposed of the case without an inquest. The body of the late Mr. Denmark will be taken for interment to Belleville to-night by his daughter, who is recovering from the severe shock of her father's sudden death. The late Mr. Denmark, who was about 65 years of age, is survived by a widow and several daughters.—Montreal Star.

THIS HORSE WAS SURPRISED TOO

A horse trotting along Murray street last evening about seven o'clock on arriving here the armories was so astonished at finding that the midsummer crop of weeds had been cut that he stopped suddenly and refused to go any further. A rope tied around his neck by by the driver and pulled by another man had not enough of the persuasive power, but finally the driver struck a happy idea. He turned the animal and the buggy around facing the other direction, and it had the desired effect for the horse started off, apparently satisfied.

LIKES THE TOWN OF VERNON B. C.

Mr. Walter Hughes Writes From West to Peterboro' Friend

Mr H. Nichols, pianist at the Crystal, has received a card from Mr. Walter Hughes, formerly cornet soloist of the 57th Regimental band, and now leader of the Vernon City Band of Vernon, B.C.

Mr. Hughes says Vernon is a progressive little town of 3,000, and he thinks he will like the place, both from a residential and official standpoint.

THE CHAMBER ST. MIXUP

The attention of the city authorities has been called repeatedly by the residents of Chambers street to the filthy, unsanitary and unkempt condition of that little thoroughfare running from Hunter street, nearly opposite the Oriental Hotel, to Brock street. It is the most densely populated spot in the city, and is getting to look like a slum district. It is understood that the city is "considering the matter." This, however, does not suit Mr. M. O'Brien, the liveryman, who is prepared to take action if prompt measures are not taken.

The annual meeting of the judges of New Ontario will be held at Port Arthur on August 12th.

JIMMY REYNOLDS WILL MAKE ANOTHER ATTEMPT AT IT

Jimmy Reynolds has apparently taken to heart that Part II Reader motto: "If you don't succeed at first, try, try again."

Port Hope's walking barber has not yet passed into oblivion. Although James has seen 58 summers, according to the dope of people who have known him for years, he still thinks he can step from Toronto to Port Hope, a distance of 66 miles, in 14 1-2 hours. James has already made a wager of $150 to $300 that he can not only walk the distance in that time, but that he will push a cart the entire route in the bargain. He is having a cart constructed specially for the walk, and thinks that he can turn the trick with very little trouble. As a rule James is a modest, unassuming chap, who can push a razor over the faces of his patrons most fastidious. But walking is his hobby, and once a man starts talking walk to the veteran manipulator of the shears, the lather begins to fly in all directions and the razor begins to work at the rate of about 66 strokes to the second.

The best time that Reynolds ever made over the course was 16 1-2 hours, but on that occasion he walked from Port Hope to Toronto and did not hit too hot a pace, as he had to walk back. He claims that it is easier to walk down than up, as the hills are not as bad. James will undertake to win his latest wager on the first day of September, and will leave the King Edward hotel at daylight.

TURF CLUB MATINEE MONDAY WILL BE BEST FOR YEARS

A Large Number of Entries and Some Good Sport as Well—Harry Direct and Billy W. Will Start in Free-for-All.

From present indications the Turf Club's matinee on civic holiday will be the best that it has held for some years. Everything points to a decided success. The weather could not be better, that is if it holds out, while the track itself is in better condition now than it has been for years. A goodly number of horses have been working out on it for the last week or ten days, with the result that it is now as hard and firm as could be desired.

While the drivers are not doing much talking, still some trials have been made, and some good sport is assured. One horse in particular gives great promise of an unusual burst of speed, if trials against time are any indication.

Among the races on the programme for Monday there is one for the 2.50 class, one for the 2.30 class and a free-for-all. Of these three the last is sure to be a dandy. Those old rivals, Billy W. and Harry Direct, will meet in this race, and as there is keen competition between the two, a dead heat can almost be predicted. While both of the above horses have been seen at many outside meets this year, this is the first time that they have appeared in Peterborough, and the more interest should be displayed in them on this account.

The club has already appointed the officials and officers for the day, and everything in their power will be done to make the meet one of the best in the history of Turf Club matinees in Peterborough.

LARGE ENTRY LIST FOR THE VICTORIA HARRIERS' MEET

Likely be Necessary to Run off Races in Series of Heats on Account of Large Entry List—Three Mile Run to be Good One.

Entries are still coming in for the Victoria Harriers' meet on Monday. From present indications most of the races will have to be run off in heats, as otherwise the numerous entries will lead to overcrowding on the course, which, to say the least, is undesirable. Mr. Charles Thorpe, the secretary of the club, has been kept busy looking after the grounds, and the other minor details, and predicts a most successful meet for the holiday.

The three mile run especially, ought to furnish some good sport. There are many good ones at the distance in town, and as the prizes are well worth trying for, good time is certain to be made. The hundred yards open will be a good race also, although will be a good race also, although the grass track will prevent the runners from making extraordinarily fast time. Nevertheless it will not prevent the race from being close and exciting. In that event the time is well able to take care of itself.

Contestants from the Y.M.C.A., the Otonabee Athletic Club, the Victoria Harriers, and the Collegiate Institute are expected to be on hand, although the latter club is doubtful, as it has disbanded for the season. The races are billed for two o'clock, and as the programme is rather long it is the intention of the officials to see that they are started on time.

THINKING OF PUTTING ON ANOTHER CONTEST HERE

Mr Green, who conducted the Mysterious Mr. E. contest here, is in the city on business. Since leaving here Mr. Green has managed a great many competitions of a similar character in Canadian and American cities. He just concluded a "Mysterious Daily Dimples" contest for the Hamilton Herald.

Mr. Green may put on a contest here, although any information concerning the character of it, in case it is held, was not forthcoming. He has not yet visited any of the local newspaper offices or business concerns, with a view of doing so, however.

Mr. Green is enjoying a vacation in Peterborough and vicinity after a very busy season.

GOLF

Mr. G. A. Little broke all records at the golf grounds yesterday afternoon while playing a championship game against Rev. J. W. Wallace. He did the first round in 35 and the second in 39, a total of 74 for 18 holes. The last previous record was also held by Mr. Little, which was 78 for 18 holes.

Rev. J. W. Wallace did the 18 holes in 81. Mr. Little's record is one that will likely stand for some time to come.—Lindsay Warder.

AVERAGES OF ALL CITY LEAGUE PLAYERS UP TO LAST SATURDAY'S GAMES

"Yeb" Flaherty, of T.A.S., Leads in Fielding, With a Perfect Average—H. O'Brien, of Park St. A.C., Ahead in Batting, With .407—All Players Have Done Well in the Field.

Below will be found the batting and fielding average of every player in the city league, who has played one or more games this season. While the work of the players in the field has been extremely good, their work at the bat, with the exception of a few, could be improved on. Yeb. Flaherty, of the T.A.S., leads the league in fielding and H. O'Brien, of the Park street team, is the best batter, according to the figures. The great work of the twirlers and the fielding of the teams is to a great extent responsible for the small batting averages, but the games played to date have on the whole been interesting to watch, and it is to be hoped that next season the teams and officers will profit by this year's experience, and the result will be that the baseball game in this city will recover much of its lost prestige.

The fielding averages are as follows,—

LINES ON SPORT

"There is nothing that tickles a boy more than to feel that the old man has sporting blood in him," explains a writer in advising how to keep in touch with the young. "If we are not already possessed of it, we should do well to acquire it, or at least pretend to it."

England has been beaten this year by America at polo, by Australia at cricket, by Germany at swimming, by Belgium at rowing, by South Africa at sprinting, by France at steeplechasing, and by New Zealand at rugby football.

Connie Mack, the peerless leader of the Philadelphia American League baseball team, declares that the "hit and run game" is the most important piece of tactics in baseball.

Hans Wagner may have to quit baseball for good. He recently sustained a stitch in one of the heart muscles, and physicians say that the big shortstop will have to take things easy for some time.

Joe Doyle, who is on the twirling department of the New York Highlanders, holds the distinction of having the slowest delivery of any pitcher in the big leagues.

The mascot of the Review baseball team states that he refuses to let Tiny Sowle hold that position during the exhibition with the Examiner outfit at the Printer's Picnic on Civic Holiday.

President Johnson, of the American League, has indefinitely suspended, pending an investigation, Umpire Tim Hurst who had some trouble with Second Baseman Collins, of the Philadelphia Club, last Tuesday.

"Silver Bill," a homing pigeon, owned by William F. McGonogal, of East Liverpool, Ohio, arrived there last night from Denver, Col. The bird made the fourteen hundred mile air line journey in 9 days 9 hours.

In all probability [illegible] Tigers will have new grou[illegible]. At[illegible] to secure Britannia Park, where new grand stands and dressing rooms will be put up. The club has plenty of material for all teams and should be a contestant again for premier honors in every department.

The Toronto Maple Leafs are down in fourth place, as a result of losing to Jersey City yesterday. Pfeffer outpitched the Skeeter twirler, but the luck was against him.

AN EXPENSIVE AUTOMOBILE

Woodstock, Aug. 6.—Pugilist Jack Johnson's flying progress through the country from Toronto to Detroit was abruptly checked last night, when at the request of the Woodstock police, he was arrested in London, charged with violating the speed limit, which is ten miles an hour. Incidentally, between Woodstock and Ingersoll, while running forty miles an hour, Johnson's long-nosed racing car narrowly escaped colliding with W. D. Robson's more modest automobile, with what would have been disastrous results in all probability. About 8 o'clock Johnson and Manager Little passed through Woodstock at great speed. Johnson was driving. Five miles west of here the driver of Mr. Robson's car, which had been ahead of the fighter, turned into a roadway to come back east. As he was turning onto the road again Johnson whizzed by in a cloud of dust squarely in the centre of the road.

"The car was as nearly flying as it could be and remain on the road," said Mr. Robson. The pugilist's car grazed Mr. Robson's automobile and passed at lightning speed. No apparent effort was made to avoid a collision. Mr. Robson returned to the city and informed the police, with the result that an information was laid at once, and Chief Thompson wired London and other places to look out for the speeder. He was taken in charge at London, and the local authorities notified. Later he interceded with the authorities, pleading an important engagement at Chicago. He was allowed to plead guilty to the charge in London and was fined $50 and costs, $55 in all, which amount will be transferred to the local exchequer. Johnson was then allowed to proceed.

PARLIAMENTARY DON'TS.

Rules That Will Help the Clubwoman to Preside.

Don't misappropriate the funds of the club. That sounds most dreadfully harsh. It makes a noise like an absconding cashier. But that is not the idea. It is not the don't for the one who dishonestly makes away with the money. It is a simple rule of parliamentary law and business law that money should be used for the purposes designated in the constitution. These are the only legitimate uses for moneys raised by dues and assessments in federated bodies. For instance, a body will after long deliberation fix upon a certain amount for dues for its members.

All of the uses for which this money is to be put will be carefully gone over. The necessary traveling expenses perhaps of the officers are to be paid. No provisions are made for anything but the bare necessities of the organization. At some meeting an enthusiastic member, without any consideration of what are the legitimate and constitutional uses of that money, will jump to her feet and move that we donate $50 for some altogether foreign purpose. The president, without a moment's hesitation and before the assembly has really sifted the matter, puts the motion, calls for remarks, which the careful and conservative ones are afraid to make, and the motion is carried by default. There is no thought of how many fifteen, twenty-five, thirty-five cent dues it is going to require to pay this sum. There is no thought that the organization is going to be almost bankrupt. The president, who is the guardian of the law and constitution of her body, has not said: "This is unconstitutional. If you wish to divert our money into this channel, you must first amend your constitution. It is clearly illegal. I must not let you do this." The treasurer, the watch set over the money, should have demurred. But under the little excitement of doing some good work, of helping along a "cause," the funds have been misappropriated, and the organization suffers. And the blame lies with the presiding officer, who should be watchful for just such things.

It is often the case that assessments for necessary expenses must be made simply because the funds constitutionally provided and collected for the purpose have been all used carelessly for other things. If you wish to branch out in donations, if you wish to make gifts to officers, see to it that your constitution has covered the point or else serve notice that you wish to do these things and have a little bigger sum for dues, stating what use is to be made of the money in the amendment. If this were always done there would be more harmony in clubs and it would save the respect of organizations which have gone under just because the drain of assessments and dues are unbearable.

GAME FOR YOUNGSTERS.

Peanut Jab, the Funniest, Newest Thing Out.

A good game to start the ball a-rolling at a party would be peanut jab. As many dishes for water are provided as there are couples. These are placed on small card tables. On the top of each dish of water a dozen peanuts are set floating. Then each individual is provided with a hatpin and the game is called.

The object is to jab the nuts with the pin and land them in a pretty dish for this purpose without touching them with the fingers. When time is called the couple that has been most successful retains the nuts in lieu of score cards. The game is progressive, the successful contestants working toward the head table. Prizes may be in keeping with the season. Among these are summer bonnets made of raffia to hang beside a dressing bureau and hold hatpins; fluffy ducklings, chicken powder puffs, white jack rabbits, egg cups and other little novelties.

Among the old fashioned forfeits were the following:

"Bow to the prettiest, kneel to the wittiest and kiss the one you love best."

Recite a nursery rhyme with appropriate gestures and elocutionary effect.

Recite the table of nine in the multiplication table backward.

(If a lady)—Tie a gentleman's necktie.

(If a man)—Show in pantomime how a woman does up her hair.

Sit crosslegged and with folded arms on the floor, Turkish fashion, and get up without unfolding the arms.

Pose for your picture—"Look pleasant, please."

Hippyty-hop around the room, bowing to each lady as you pass.

Name the presidents of the United States.

Eat two dry crackers and immediately sing a song.

As to Art Stencilling.

So easy the merest youngster can do it, yet not too simple to interest grown-ups—that is what it is. Simply lay the designs on the material, put on the colors, and there you are.

And the best part of it all is that the designs are really artistic—pretty, even in their crudeness. In fact, their very simplicity is the chief charm.

Use unbleached muslin, burlap, crash, whatever you choose. And you may make scarfs for tables, bureaus, or chiffoniers, hangings of all sorts for summer homes, pillow covers or any number of pretty little articles.

You may procure whole sets to do the work or simply buy the design and your own colors. Either way it is not very expensive.

LIFE IN A PENITENTIARY; THE DAILY ROUTINE THERE

The School Gets a Good Percentage of Pupils Who Neither Read nor Write—Some Interesting Facts.

When a prisoner leaves the dock at a court room, struggling to look brave under the weight of a three-years sentence in the Kingston penitentiary, few in all the curious crowd realize the kind of life to which the judge's sentence has just compelled him. Entering the doors of the "Pen," at Portsmouth, in the suburbs of Kingston, Ont., the convict is stripped of every piece of civilian clothing and all possessions, even to the cherished photographs of the relatives at home, and forced to don a suit of coarse prison clothes with a number sewn on the back between the shoulders. Henceforth the name and worldly station of the newcomer are supposed to be blotted out, but in the media of criminals, names and records are almost instantly on the tip of every tongue. Even the commonplace stories of the great outside world float over prison walls with the mysterious certainty of the wireless.

VERY LITTLE LIBERTY.

From the first moment of incarceration the convict is very seldom given any measure of liberty. Of the 486 men and women occupants, only one or two have been permitted to drive loads of produce to the local market unattended, or to carry on their work in the fields without watching. Generally speaking, the rigorous denial of a half a thousand human creatures' liberty is carried out by warden and guards from year to year with the precision of a huge machine.

Of the 486 criminals, only 12 are women, 138 are in for 3 years, 90 for 5 years, 86 for 10 years, and 30 for life.

The common conception of the part played by drink in swelling the membership of prisons is borne out by the statistics at Kingston, though in some details denied.

Dangerous criminals as a class are temperate in the use of liquor. Success in crime, as in other occupations, requires a clear head and sound body. Prison officials h[illegible] come to believe that drink is m[illegible] the scapegoat for criminal instin[illegible] Almost without exception the int[illegible]perate prisoner will assert his i[illegible]cence of the crime charged, bla[illegible] chalking it up to "Drink." Ca[illegible]dian penitentiaries as a whole s[illegible] 17 per cent. abstainers, 48 per c[illegible] temperate, and 34 per cent. intemperate.

A PRISON SCHOOL.

There is a prison school, too, in the isolated community lying [illegible]tween the four huge walls on Po[illegible]mouth harbor there must be a s[illegible]rate set of institutions, for those [illegible] the free world are naturally den[illegible]

A big, bright school room [illegible] blackboards, chalk and element[illegible] text books is one of the most in[illegible]esting points of the penitentiary [illegible]one is permitted to see a class [illegible] work.

Fifteen adult "scholars" took [illegible] Part I. studies during the past ye[illegible] eight were in Part II.; the en[illegible] roll call numbers 64. The need [illegible] instruction of this simple charac[illegible] even for grown-ups is apparent f[illegible] the fact that a great many crimi[illegible] have been denied a single day [illegible] schooling, or, indeed, any [illegible] youthful attentions. Fourteen [illegible] cent. of the men and women in C[illegible]adian penitentiaries can neither r[illegible] nor write.

LEARNED TO READ AND WRI[illegible]

As an instance of the capital w[illegible] of the prison classes, 23 out of an [illegible]rollment of 64 at the Kingston Pe[illegible]tentiary passed out this year [illegible]able of reading and writing with a fair knowledge of the elementary rules of arithmetic. Six retired owing to expiration of sentences.

Perhaps the most remarkable feature of the institution to the outsider is the library. There are five thousand volumes, arranged in a large rotunda with a convict assistant librarian in charge. To each convict in his cell is supplied a catalogue, and once or twice a week an attendant calls at the cells, takes the number of the book or magazine desired, and furnishes it the next morning. Convicts are allowed to read in their cells after the evening meal.

PUNISHMENT THAT IS FELT

One of the heaviest punishments for ill-behavior is to deprive a man or woman of his or her evening light. In the matter of choice of books, Reade's "Never too Late to Mend" is the most widely and thoroughly read of all. Three or four copies are in constant use. Fiction, as might be supposed, takes first place, for it seems the prisoner's one chance for even fanciful freedom. "The Count of Monte Cristo" has been passed around the 600 men a score of times each year.

The most prolific cause of penitentiary sentences is theft. Forty-six of this craft registered at Kingston with 38 burglars. There were six deaths during the year among all classes of criminals.

ADVANTAGES OF CAREFUL ATTENTION TO NATURE'S LAWS

The following interesting article is taken from the August number of "Association Men":—

Mr. Robert J. Roberts of Boston, the pioneer of rational physical training, and a Young Men's Christian Association physical director for almost 35 years, writes to a friend as follows:—

June 29, 1909.

I am 60 years young to-day, and I don't see any abatement in my power to work hard. I think a few reasons why I always feel fit for my work is that in my older teens I made up my mind to obey all God's laws that governed my body. I received this idea largely by reading in Dr. Hall's Journal of Health (1867) these words: "Men consume too much food and too little fresh air. They take too much medicine and too little exercise." This set me studying more closely the good Christian doctor's sayings, and to him I largely owe all my hygienic ideas as to the care of my body, mind, and soul. I have never eaten between my meals, nor have I ever used tobacco or alcohol. I have always eaten slowly of any food I wanted, realizing that my stomach had no teeth. I have tried hard to avoid working too hard. This has always been my great temptation through life. I have won out, for I feel young and look so for a man of my years (as they say). I often say to myself: "Nothing too much. Stop short of fatigue. Don't hurry so. You have all the time there is. Tired men never do things well. Keep fresh for your work. Lay out your life to reach 100. Always enjoy each moment as it goes by. To help others, you be a good example."

I weigh, nude, 155 pounds. My chest measures 45 inches natural and my waist line about 32 inches. I have kept about this weight and measure for over 50 years. I keep close tab weekly; others should do the same.

One need never step on the scales to find out if his weight is right who keeps his waist line at its normal size. The waist line should be about seven inches less in measurement than the normal chest. The taller the person, the less differnece there is between the waist and chest measurement, as length of body is equivalent for circumference. A good tell-tale to show you whether your waist line is growing too small or too large is to wear your trousers belted at your normal girth, and keep it at that girth all the time, never changing to suit the changing of the circumference of your waist line. Just after meals your waist line will only be a little larger if you have eaten moderately (which you should always do), and in an hour or so your waist line will have returned to its normal size. When you find that your waist is growing too large, you must eat less and work harder, doing all sorts of full bending body movements like rowing, abdominal lie down drill, and whole waist work on the waist strap, or these movements done without the apparatus, in a strong, full-stretch way. If, on the other hand, you find your waist is growing too small, you must eat your food slowly, sleep more, rest more, take life easier, and do the same work that is given to one whose waist is growing too big, only do it easier and in less quantities. The above exercises once every day in a heavy way will slowly bring an over-large waist down to its normal size, and when done in a light way, a too small waist up to its right size. If the hints as to eating, etc., are not obeyed, one will get poorer results. Exercise can't do the full business.

VAG TOLD TO GET OUT OF CITY

Stole Potatoes and Was Seen Loitering Around House Whose Occupant Were Away

Edmond Wall appeared in police court this morning on a charge of vagrancy, but after hearing the young man's story, the magistrate dismissed him on his promise to get out of the city.

The defendent, when arrested, was intoxicated, and had a quantity of potatoes in his pockets which he had taken from a store at the corner of Aylmer and Hunter streets. He had also been seen loitering near the residence of a citizen who is at present with his family spending a vacation away from the city.

The defendant told the magistrate that he had arrived from Cobalt, where he had been prospecting. The reason he came here was that he might see his mother's grave. He didn't exactly remember how the potatoes had come to get in his pockets.

Putnam, director of dairy instructions for the Province, and the Dominion Department will also furnish a man to give some definite instructions along the cow-testing line.

The proper care and handling of milk will be one of the subjects dealt with, and it will be accompanied by demonstrations of milk testing as well as charts showing the value of cow-testing associations.

That She Attempted Suicide — Dress Samples Did'nt Come

The New York World says: Mrs Fachso Hallen, twenty-four, a beautiful brunette, attempted suicide this afternoon in the back room of her husband's woman's tailoring establishment at No 1135 Park avenue by inhaling gas. She was unconscious when discovered by a customer. Her husband was away for the afternoon.

She was taken to the Presbyterian Hospital, where it was said she would recover. The reason assigned for her act is the non-arrival of some valuable dress samples from Paris, over which Mrs. Hallen became despondent.

Good Meeting Last Night

Last night the service in the tent began at the usual hour. Mr. S. H. Soper was the speaker and Mr. W. J. Weelen led. The congregation was favored with two solos. One by Miss Reesor the soloist of George street Methodist church, entitled "Does Jesus Care." The other by Mr. Fred Miles, assistant soloist. These solos were enjoyed very much by the audience. The speaker took his text from I Cor. 15, 56, 57. "You can't have sin without a sting," said the speaker. "This statement is true because it has been proved over and over again. I have proved it, and many of you have also." The speaker cited several examples of men who had sinned and who had later felt the awful sting. "But it need not always be so," he said, "Thanks be on to God, who giveth us the victory over sin through our Lord Jesus Christ.

The congregation was strongly exhorted to settle the matter and have no more to do with sin by taking Jesus into their lives. There was a deep impression made and surely the Lord was present.

There is a meeting for men to-night in the tent. Every man who reads this is given a hearty invitation. Rev. Mr. Henderson is the speaker.

GREECE HANDS OVER CRETE TO MERCY OF THE POWERS

She Replies to the Turkish Government's Note With Expressions of Mild Amaze and Protest—Declares She Had no Ambitions Regarding Crete.

Athens, Aug. 10.—The Greek Government yesterday handed to the Turkish Minister a formal reply to the Porte's note of several days ago, which asked Greece to express her disapproval of the annexation agitation in Crete and formally to declare that she had no ambitions regarding the island.

The reply protests formally against the complaints contained in the Turkish note and gives instances of Greece's consistent endeavors to maintain frank and friendly relations with Turkey and to draw closer the bonds uniting the two countries.

The note declares Greece has done and still wishes to do all in her power for the appeasement of Turkey and for peace.

In the Cretan question, the note continues, the Turkish Government itself several times has taken occasion to say that the conduct of Greece has been frank and loyal.

The note says that Greece can only leave the question of Crete to the protecting powers and conform to their decision, the note repeats the assurance that Greece, being in no way implicated in the annexation movement in Crete, will preserve the same current and loyal attitude as in the past.

The Greek flag was yesterday lowered in Crete in response to the representations of the powers.

Turkey Not Free.

Constantinople, Aug. 10.—The Greek reply to the Turkish note concerning Crete has not yet been received by the Turkish Government.

The ambassadors of the four protecting powers in Crete had interviews yesterday with the grand vizier and the Foreign Minister and advised moderation in Turkey's attitude toward the Greeks. The grand vizier gave the ambassadors his assurances on this point, but he pointed out the necessity of receiving some satisfaction from Greece, in order to calm the Turkish people.

The general feeling exists that the Government is not enjoying a free hand in the matter, but is acting under the pressure of the committee of Union and Progress, which is showing a headstrong tendency.

QUEBEC HOTELMAN STANDS TERRIFIC ELECTRIC SHOCK

Etienne Lefebvre, Proprietor of the Windsor Hotel at Grand Mere, Seizes a Heavily Charged Metal Pipe—He Will Recover.

Montreal, Aug. 10.—To receive a shock of 2,000 volts and live to tell the tale is the record of Mr. Etienne Lefebvre, proprietor of the Windsor Hotel, Grand Mere, Que.

With the successful amputation of his right foot and arm, Mr. Lefebvre has more than a fighting chance of recovering, and the surgeons at the Notre Dame Hospital are sanguine that he will soon be able to leave his bed. The operation, which was performed yesterday morning was entirely successful.

About ten days ago Mr. Lefebvre, while taking a last look around his hotel and outbuildings, saw sparks and flashes proceeding from what he thought was his shed. The illuminations seemed confined to the vicinity of a short metal pipe, and he seized it to pull it out of the ground and throw it into vacant space, where it could do no damage. No sooner had his hands closed on the pipe, when his form became rigid, and thus imprisoned, he was held to the electrically-charged post until his shouts sent the hotel employes in search of him.

Realizing that their chief was being electrocuted, one of the men rushed to the telephone and advised the power company what had happened and they immediately cut off the current.

Lefebvre was unconscious and his hands were burned nearly to the bone. For three hours two physicians worked over him.

WILL NOT STOP CONSTRUCTION

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Any traffic arrangements the C.N.R. may make with other roads to secure the movement of their freight westward will not be allowed to retard or interfere with the construction of a C.N.R. connecting section between Selwood and Port Arthur. President Mackenzie said yesterday that the C.P.R. was handling the C.N.R. freight between Sudbury and Port Arthur, from which point it was being picked up by the C.N.R. again, but that was an arrangement very common among railways and would not weigh against the completion of an all C.N.R. line at the earilest possible date.

A stretch of line forty miles long from Selwood north towards Port Arthur, Mr. Mackenzie said, was being rushed along now and would be completed before the end of the year.

The president added that satisfactory progress was being made by a gang of surveyers in the readjusting of the route of the Niagara-Ottawa line, which will be started this fall.

RUSSIA GAINING STRENGTH THERE

Vancouver, B.C., Aug. 10.—"Russian influence in China is steadily regaining the ground which it temporarily lost after the war, and in a short time the Muscovite will be stronger than ever in Pekin. On the other hand Chinese antipathy to Japan is becoming increasingly bitter. The Chinese feel that Japan has broken every international rule by her conduct in relation to Manchuria. I have no doubt that the next great war in the Far East will see China and Russia in coalition against Japan."

This interesting statement in regard to international politics in the Far East was made by E. Backus, adviser to the Chinese Minister of Internal Affairs. Mr. Backus has been home to England for a brief holiday.

"The majority of Chinese statesmen feel that the Japanese occupation of Manchuria has been a great breach of faith on the part of the Mikado's empire," continued Mr. Backus, "and in this opinion most Europeans living in the Far East heartily concur."

CANADA WANTS HER OWN NAVY

London, Aug. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—Sir Fred Borden and Hon. Mr. Brodeur yesterday met Hon. Mr. McKenna, Sir John Fisher and other Admiralty officials in order to discuss certain technical points in regard to Canada's scheme of assistance in Imperial naval defence.

Canada is of the opinion that the Dominion should have a self-supporting navy, which should form an integral part of the Imperial navy in time of emergency, and the other dominions are inclined to the view. That a direct subsidy to Imperial defence should be provided.

Fine technicalities are now being discussed by the committee of experts, and at the close of their deliberations the report will be submitted to the full conference.

ELEVATOR FALLS MAN IS INJURED

Toronto, Aug. 10.—Because something went wrong with the elevator in the Stewart, Howe and Meek building, at King street and Spadina avenue, Morris Jackson, who was running it, is now in St. Michael's Hospital in a critical condition.

The accident occurred yesterday afternoon. Jackson had taken some of the employes up to the sixth storey. When they got out something broke and he fell with the cage to the basement. Several ribs on both sides were broken, and he also sustained a depressed fracture of the skull and a scalp wound about four inches long. The doctor's have not much hope of his recovering. He was still unconscious up to a late hour last night. As he is a new employe the firm does not know much about him.

TORONTO HAS A COOLING WAVE

The Maritime Provinces had some thundershowers and parts of the west received a similar visitation, while others languished in heat.

STOCKHOLM STRIKE MAY BE FAILURE

Stockholm, Aug. 10.—Many carts and street cars were moving through the street yesterday, despite the threats of the strikers to stop all traffic. King Gustave drove through the city yesterday, passing before the strikers' headquarters. He was without an escort.

The gas and electric plants are working without interruption and last night it seemed doubtful whether the employes of the railroads will join the movement.

Rumors are again in circulation concerning a probable collapse of the strike, the workmen being dissatisfied with the speeches and the methods employed by their leaders in carrying it on.

DOES NOT WANT BRITISH SETTLERS

London, Aug. 10.—(C.A.P. Cable.)—The Premier of Western Australia, replying to a deputation of settlers from the old country, who brought a number of alleged grievances under his notice, became incensed and bluntly declared, "I have more trouble with British immigrants than any other class of settlers, and am going to tell the agent-general not to send out any more immigrants, no matter how much capital they have, unless he is thoroughly satisfied they are men who can make a success on the land."

Piano Agent Disappears.

Regina, Sask., Aug. 10.—Considerable anxiety has been caused by the disappearance of E. C. Corbeau, local agent of the Heintzman Piano Co.

Corbeau, together with his two little children, started for a drive on Sunday afternoon at three and expected to return home by six o'clock. They were still missing yesterday. The country around is well settled. He came here from Toronto.

Band is Engaged.

Galt, Aug. 10.—Because the 29th Regiment Band of Berlin was not engaged for the Toronto exhibition the town authorities refused to allow an advertising streamer to be displayed there. Yesterday, however, following the band's engagement, the sign has been permitted.

LEADING FIGURE OF GREAT BRITAIN'S NAVY

ADMIRAL SIR JOHN FISHER. [illegible]

Admiral Sir John Fisher has for some time been the centre of a great deal of bickering over conditions in the English navy, and it has been repeatedly reported that he will retire in the coming fall, after five years of service as First Lord of the Sea. His retirement will be attributed to his annoyance at the storm of criticism which has been poured upon him.

It is believed by many persons that the retirement of Lord Beresford from command of the Channel fleet was forced by Admiral Sir John Fisher, and Lord Beresford's friends have been prominent in the opposition to Sir John Fisher.

GIRL IS CHARGED WITH EMBEZZLING

Brockville, Aug. 10.—The crown only got part way through with the preliminary hearing of the charges against Miss Grace Henderson of Gananoque, of embezzling from the Thousand Island Railway Co. of Gananoque, in whose offices she was employed until January last. Previous to that time shortages had been found, and almost the entire staff was dispensed with. Recent expert investigation of the books led to Miss Henderson's arrest. Yesterday she was committed for trial on a charge of having cashed and applied to her use a check for $500.

Testimony was introduced to show that she sent a messenger to a bank with the check and that he, after receiving the money, deposited it with the defendant, who was working under the general cashier, John Marshall, who has since left the country. The books show no record of the receipt of the cash.

McGuigan Denies It.

Toronto, Aug. 10.—F. H. McGuigan, who is building the Hydro-Electric Commission power line from Niagara Falls to Toronto, denied yesterday the rumor that he has been offered $25,000 a year to become head of the Lake Superior Corporation at the instance of London financiers.

WHEAT CROP IN THE WEST WILL BE AVERAGE ONE

Winnipeg Correspondent Says Yield Will be Better Than Last Year—Hurry-up Call for Hands Reaches the East—23,000 Men Are Needed.

Winnipeg, Aug. 10.—Regarding a report sent out from here yesterday, that the crop of Western Canada will be only an average one, and less than last year's, it is clear that there is here a terminological inaccuracy, for the crop of last year was below the average.

It is impossible just now to figure on what the general average of the wheat yield over a country a thousand miles long and half as deep will be, but it seems clear that a good average will be maintained, unless we get some very early frosts.

To talk of 140,000,000 bushels of wheat from this country is quite as absurd as to say that it is a poor, or even weak, season. It should be a mighty profitable year for our farmers.

Setting aside alarmist reports, it yet seems clear that the total damage to the crops by hail will exceed the average year, and will really affect the general average yield per acre. In some districts, authentic reports state that hail has been more widely distributed and more devastating than in any recent years.

Indeed, it is already evident that not only has hail damage been wide, but that it has cut a clean swath in many districts.

There is, of course, always a tendency to exaggerate hail losses and districts that in previous years have been reported at this season as completely hailed out have often shown up well, if not brilliantly, at threshing. Farmers think that a little "knocking" of crop just now may bring them better cash prices so soon as the rush of new wheat begins. But even thus discounting damage reports, enough certainly remains to show that the crop as a whole must suffer severely by hail losses.

Talk of rust, however, is all nonsense. Electrical storms have been accompanied by great heat and warm showers, bringing the grain along at a surprising rate, so that the season, after opening so late, can now hardly be described as backward.

cutting in a week.

Toronto, Aug. 10.—A hurry-up call for harvesters was received by the C.P.R. last night from their western crop experts, who telegraphed that cutting will be general next Monday.

The advisability of moving the harvesters' excursions ahead a few days from the dates originally set will be discussed by the railway and western Government officials this morning. The first excursion has been set for Thursday, the 19th inst., but it is possible that a few train loads of helpers will be rushed off within a week.

Manitoba is calling for 15,000 men. The other provinces, Saskatchewan and Alberta, have yet to be heard from officially, but careful estimates of their needs, show that work for from 7,000 to 8,000 outsiders will be offering in those provinces. This means a demand on the east for about 23,000 of her experienced farm hands.

James Hartney, Toronto, agent for the Manitoba Government, has just returned from a visit to Eastern Ontario, where he stirred up interest in the western excursions. He reports that while a large number of people are manifesting an interest in the excursions, he believes the lateness of harvesting here will hold a great number back and result in an unusually small contingent for the first excursion. Harvesting in Ontario he found will not be over before Aug. 20 at the earliest, and therefore thousands of farm helpers will not be at liberty to leave prior to that date.

Last year about 7,000 left Toronto with the first excursion, making up five or six trains, but the indications are that a less number will embark for the western grain fields next week. Mr. Hartney points out that the great bulk of outside help is required to carry on the threshing, cutting being the work of horses and steam. With a few thousand helpers on the scene early to man the reapers, the grain will not suffer damage if threshing does not commence for a week or two later, providing that continued rain and snow storms did not make their appearance.

The entire Canadian Bisley team will shoot.

SIR JAMES AND THE GLOBE

A few days ago the Globe attacked Hon Frank Cochrane and indirectly Sir James Whitney, for an alleged improper and suspicious method of disposing of timber berths. Sir James is not one of those to take shelter in silence. His reply to the Globe is as follows:—

The following official statement, anent the editorial, "Bargain Day for Timber Berths," in the Globe of Thursday, was issued by the Government yesterday:

"The Globe attacks the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines for the shortness of the period intervening between the advertisement and date of sale of the scattered tie and timber berths to be sold on the 15th of next month, and calls upon the Premier not to give 'placid and unthinking concurrence' to the recommendation of the Minister responsible for the management of the province's timber resources.

"The attack upon the Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines appears to be conceived in ignorance and tinged with malice.

"Everybody who takes an intelligent interest in the timber policy of the Whitney Government knows quite well the reasons for holding the sale, the limited time which of necessity would be given, the character of the timber offered, and the conditions upon which it is to be sold. But for the information of the Globe they may again be stated.

GOVERNMENT'S TIMBER POLICY.

"First, it may be said that it was the law and regulations that timber berths should be offered by public competition. The late Government departed from that sound principle, and entered upon a policy of issuing permits to cut pine timber, ties, etc., to whoever saw fit without any competition, and at rates which were ridiculously low.

"When the Whitney Government came in it desired to put an end to this unhealthy state of affairs, and bring every part of the province under one system, that of public competition for timber to be sold. Upon inquiry it found, however, that capital had been invested and interests created which could not be disregarded unless it was desired to ruin parties who had acted in good faith, but the Hon. Mr. Cochrane, when speaking in the region where the permit system prevailed, took occasion to say that an end must be put to the abnormal and unhealthy system prevailing, and that those existing would not be renewed after their expiry. And in the Legislature last session he made the same statement. So that the position of the Government was quite well known.

"The former state of affairs having been brought to a close, it was thought only fair that those having plants who had been engaged in the tie business should be given an opportunity of acquiring timber in a legitimate way, and that the necessary supplies for railway construction might be cut.

TIMBER BERTH TERRITORY.

"The next step was to decide what territory should be sold, to survey it into berths, and put it up for sale. The berths contained little timber suitable for lumbering purposes. Territory suitable for ties being practically selected, and in many instances territory that had been cut over under permit was surveyed into berths so as to save the value of the timber left upon them. It was, therefore, a cleaning up of old territory, and a tie sale to meet the needs of the railway for construction and repairs.

"The territory in which the berths are offered is almost entirely confined to the region west of Port Arthur, and there are only four or five berths outside of it. The localities are well known to the railways, and to those who have been taking out ties for them, and, as before stated, it was not expected that large lumbermen would purchase the berths for ordinary lumbering purposes.

"UPSET PRICES" PROVIDED

"The Government had its own surveyors and estimators over the berths, and knows quite well the quantity and value of the timber upon them, and has put such upset prices upon the berths as will prevent any 'bargain sale' occurring, the possibility of which at this late period so stirs up the Globe's soul.

"The nature of the country is such that parties intending to cut must get in their men and supplies early in the fall. After careful inquiry the 15th of September was fixed as the latest date at which a sale could be held, and allow time for transportation of men and supplies to the localities offered. If the sale had been held a month later very few operations would have been possible this winter, and the result would have been that large plants would have been idle, numbers of men unemployed, and the work of railway construction and repairs would have been impeded.

SALE BY MEASUREMENT.

"The Globe seems to fear that timber will be discovered on these berths about which the Department knows nothing, and about which the person purchasing may know nothing. Of course this idea is very far-fetched, but the attention of the Globe is called to the fact that this sale is being held under the wise system introduced by the Government, by which timber is sold by the thousand feet board measure, or per piece if ties are cut, and therefore close estimates are not required. The purchaser will pay for the quantities he gets, be they large or small. Were the sale being held under the old system, which the Globe evidently carries in its mind, by the estimated quantity of timber on a berth, there would be need for a close estimate, and a longer time would doubtless have been given.

"The Globe's statement that the late Government never sold a batch (sic) of timber limits without giving six or eight months for examination of the parcels lacks the essential element. As a matter of fact, the Liberal Government never gave eight months to examine berths offered for sale; it never gave six months. The rule was about two months, and upon one occasion it sold over 5,000 miles of the best territory in the province without having any estimates made or without a line being run, the berths being merely projected upon the maps, and for this great area it gave a little over two months' time to examine."

A DECISIVE CONFLICT

Readers of magazines, church papers and the public press generally are aware that a conflict is now going on between authority and free thought in religious matters such as really was never fought before. From the days of the Gnostics, Arminius, Erasmus, Luther, etc., to the present, there have been outbursts, rebellions, against religious authority, etc., that were not, however, strictly-speaking, rebellions against religion. The present day conflict, in the larger and in one correct sense, is one between a belief in the natural and the supernatural, or praeternatural. If the natural triumphs, then evolution by selection of the fittest will survive the ruin of revelation with its servant authority. Even to a casual reader the issue is tremendous and decisive in character.

EDITORIAL NOTES

If the police do not stop rowdyism in Canadian games, who will? The rowdies' companions cannot be expected to do it.

It will be noticed that the penetentiary, reports all show that criminals use drunk as a blind to cover their delinquencies. It is admittedly a mere pretence.

Several Canadian Liberal journals are hard at it giving advice to the U. S. regarding their tariff stupidity. We see the wonderful advancement of Germany, France, U.S. and Canada under a protective tariff, but what does that amount to when a theory is at stake.

According to a little story told recently by Hon. Mr. Balfour, the prophecies of Cobden, the great apostle of Free Trade, did not always materialize in his own private business any more than they have done in regard to the universal adoption of his pet doctrines. To use Mr. Balfour's own words;—"We have had an appeal to economists. Well, there was an eminent economist in this House, Mr. Cobden, who applied this theory of regular, normal, and continuous growth in the value of and to the conduct of his own private affairs. He was so convinced that building land would immediately rise in consequence of the appeal of the Corn Laws, that he invested large sums in the purchase of such land in the hope that the labors of the community would add to its value. But the labors of the community did not add to its value, and the result was that not once, but twice, Mr. Cobden's friends had come to his assistance and very large sums had to be subscribed by his admirers to extricate him from his financial embarrassment due in no small measure to the fact that, not only as a matter of abstract speculation, but as a matter of real practical 'business,' the growth of urban building land was not regular, normal, and continuous."—Textile Journal.

ENJOYABLE EVENING

Warsaw Aug. 5.—On Thursday evening last a very enjoyable time was spent at the home of Miss Mary Nesbitt of Asphodel. Among the guests were Messrs. Ted Payne and Harry Payne of North Dummer and Miss Alice Dunford of Douro. The evening was spent in music, etc., after which refreshments were served. The company then returned to their respective homes, well satisfied with the evening's outing.

Frank Newman, a Barnardo boy, committed suicide in a bush near Chatham a wee kago.

NEW JOB FOR M'GUIGAN

Mentioned For Presidency of Superior Corporation.

Is Reported In Montreal That ex-G.T.R. Superintendent, Who Is Now Building Hydro Electric Lines Has Been Given Position by English Shareholders at a Salary of $25,000 Per Annum.

Montreal, Aug. 9.—It is understood that within a limited period F. H. McGuigan, formerly manager of the Grand Trunk Railway, and now of the F. H. McGuigan Construction Co., which is building the Ontario Government power line from Toronto to Niagara Falls, will become president of the Lake Superior Corporation, that industry having of late come under the control of a group of London capitalists who have been looking around for a man to take charge and reorganize the enterprise.

In the person of Mr. McGuigan, the holders of the controlling interest in a capital amounting to near forty millions believe they have found the right man, for that gentleman has not only the reputation of being a very able railway man—a desirable necessity since an energetic railway policy is to enter into the company's plans—but is, besides, a powerful administrator.

It is stated that before the ex-manager of the Grand Trunk would entertain the proposition, which was submitted to him by an important group of old country capitalists, he demanded a free hand to a very large extent, and especially as regards the new railway policy of the Lake Superior Co.

These concessions, it appears, have been freely given Mr. McGuigan, who will enter upon the undertaking with a salary at least of $25,000 per annum.

Besides exploiting the pulp and paper industry and the great ore bodies within reach of the works, the steel rail industry will be carried on very largely.

It is understood that a progressive railway policy has been decided upon, which will embrace the extension of the Algoma Central, now the property of the Lake Superior Corporation, away north to the transcontinental, thus opening new deposits of iron ore, and bringing the products to within easy distance of the Canadian side of the Soo.

It is said that Mr. McGuigan has already sent engineers over the road, and sufficient data has been secured to justify an energetic policy being pursued when the new president's plans are matured.

Charged With Robbing Church.

Preston, Ont., Aug. 9.—Chief Levan made a prompt and important arrest Saturday, when he took into custody a man giving the name of Frank Marshall, on a charge of burglarizing the Roman Catholic Church. The robbery occurred between 9 a.m. and 5 p.m., at which time it was reported to the chief, who, inside of 30 minutes, had Marshall in quod, with the stolen goods recovered. The loot consisted of the solid silver and gold communion service, worth several hundred dollars.

TURKS HANG ON.

They Insist That Cretan Annexation Must Not Be.

Washington, Aug. 9.—Turkey will stand by what she regards as her rights in her controversy with Greece, over the Island of Crete. Such is her attitude as communicated to the United States State Department and to the European powers. She is determined there shall be a return to the conditions preceding the Turko-Grecian war of a dozen years ago, when four of the powers of Europe, England, Russia, France and Italy, landed troops and despatched ships to pacify the Cretans.

The decisive policy of the Turkish Government is ascribed to the progressive and determined attitude of the new regime in that country as contrasted with the apparent indifference of the administration of Abdul Hamid, which made no serious effort to bring about a settlement of the anomalous conditions existing in Crete.

Turkey Delivers Ultimatum.

Athens, Greece, Aug. 9.—The Turkish Government has communicated to Greece an urgent note asking that she express her disapproval of the annexation agitation in Crete, and formally declare that Greece has no ambitions regarding the island. Otherwise, the note adds, diplomatic relations will be severed.

Turkey Determined.

Berlin, Aug. 9.—German Government circles regard the situation between Turkey and Greece as being in a most acute stage. Germany has made representations to both Constantinople and Athens, urging the necessity of a peaceable settlement of the Cretan question.

Bertie Martin Is Safe.

New York, Aug. 9.—Little Bert Martin, the two-and-a-half-year-old child from Brantford, Ont., who was brought to the Pasteur Institute for treatment, having been bitten by a rabid dog some weeks ago, is entirely out of danger.

He is taking the full Pasteur treatment which consists of one treatment a day for eighteen successive days.

The little child has not shown any signs of affection and the treatment is being taken merely as a precaution.

Two Drownings.

North Sydney, N.S., Aug. 9.—Two drowning accidents occurred here on Saturday evening, the victims being Charles Long, aged 20, while bathing, and George Lerou, a boy of 8, while fishing. A younger brother of his died a week ago from injuries sustained from falling downstairs.

Toronto Firm Get Contract.

Port Arthur, Aug. 9.—The contract of the new Canadian Northern hotel has been let to the Imperial Construction Co. of Toronto. The work will cost about $250,000. Messrs. Montgomery and Grantham, the heads of the construction company, will be here on Wednesday next.

Abbey's Effer-vescent Salt
For all Liver and Stomach Troubles

Deadly Tube Is Lost.

Paris, Aug. 9.—Paris is excited over one of the most curious cases of loss ever known. A gentleman left on a seat in an omnibus a tiny package valued at $50,000. The peculiarity of the package is that it will injure for life the person who picks it up and opens it, being a tube containing salts of radium.

Although only one-sixteenth of a grain, its emanations are sufficient to cause fearful and incurable wounds. The fate of the finder who looks into the tube which is the size of a cigarette, is certain.

No infernal machine was ever so frantically sought as this tiny tube by the Paris police. All omnibuses were searched and swept, and urgent warnings were posted in public places. The newspapers united in advertising notice to the finder not to touch it.

$5 Lectures on Suffragism.

New York, Aug. 9.—Mrs. O. P. Belmont, who has already devoted a great deal of time and money to the cause of woman's suffrage, announced last night that she had decided to open Marble House, her Newport residence, to the public for two lectures on the cause. The first lecture on Tuesday, Aug. 24, will be by Rev. Dr. Anna Howard Shaw, and on Saturday, Aug. 28, Prof. Charles Zublin of the University of Chicago will be the speaker. A $5 admission fee is to be charged to raise funds to carry on the crusade for suffrage.

Married 5,000 Couples.

Youngstown, Ohio, Aug. 9.—After marrying his 5,000th couple, according to his own computation, Dr. E. S. Whistlar was taken ill last Friday night and died here Saturday. Dr. Whistlar was known as the marrying parson. Up to three years ago he practiced dentistry, but as a layman of the Christian Church was authorized to perform the marriage ceremony.

Victim of Auto Accident.

Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 9.—By the sudden collapse of a front wheel, an automobile carrying a party of five Philadelphia furniture dealers, turned turtle at Nazareth, near here, killing one man and injuring four others.

Springhill Strike Sure.

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 9.—The Springhill strike will be called on Tuesday. Positive assurance to this effect has been given by U.M.W. officials who have just returned from that colliery district.

The strike will have nothing whatever to do with the Glace Bay difficulty. Conditions existing at Springhill are worse, from the U.M.W. viewpoint, than those at Glace Bay. Shorter hours, better wages, and better conditions for the miners generally will be demanded.

An Alleged Aristocratic Swindler.

New York, Aug. 9.—Marion W. Fortner, a former spectacular real estate operator, clerk, in a fashionable St. Louis hotel, and the son-in-law of a millionaire manufacturer of that city, was brought to this city Saturday night aboard the steamer St. Paul, a prisoner.

He was arrested in France, charged with falsely endorsing a check for $12,000, though his alleged swindling operations, it has been stated, will reach a much larger sum.

THE Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,
Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1903, 1904, by Harper & Brothers

At last, slowly, almost reluctantly, he turned round. "I'm afraid things aren't quite—quite right," he said in a low voice. "The door is locked, and I can see no light."

She raised her eyes quickly. "But you have a key?" she whispered. "Haven't you got a key?" It was obvious that to both the unexpected check to their designs was fraught with danger.

"Yes, but"— He looked toward the door. "Yes, I have a key. Yes, you're right," he added quickly. "I'll use it. Wait while I go inside."

Filled with a new nervousness, oppressed by the loneliness, the silence about her, Eve drew back obediently. The sense of mystery conveyed by the closed door weighed upon her. Her susceptibilities were tensely alert as she watched Loder search for his key and insert it in the lock. With mingled dread and curiosity she saw the door yield and gape open like a black gash in the dingy wall, and with a sudden sense of desertion she saw him pass through the aperture and heard him strike a match.

The wait that followed seemed extraordinarily long. Listening intently, she heard him move softly from one room to the other. And at last, to her acutely nervous susceptibilities, it seemed that he paused in absolute silence. In the intensity of listening she heard her own faint, irregular breathing, and the sound filled her with panic. The quiet, the solitude, the vague, instinctive apprehension, became suddenly unendurable. Then all at once the tension was relieved. Loder reappeared.

He paused for a second in the shadowy doorway; then he turned unsteadily, drew the door to and locked it.

Eve stepped forward. Her glimpse of him had been momentary—and she had not heard his voice—yet the consciousness of his bearing filled her with instinctive alarm. Abruptly and without reason her hands turned cold, her heart began to beat violently. "John"—she said below her breath.

For answer he moved toward her. His face was bereft of color; there was a look of consternation in his eyes. "Come," he said. "Come at once. I must take you home." He spoke in a shaken, uneven voice.

Eve, looking up at him, caught his hand. "Why? Why?" she questioned. Her tone was low and scared.

Without replying he drew her imperatively toward the stairs. "Go very softly," he commanded. "No one must see you here."

In the first moment she obeyed him instinctively; then, reaching the head of the stairs, she stopped. With one hand still clasping his, the other clinging nervously to the banister, she refused to descend. "John," she whispered, "I'm not a child. What is it? What has happened? I must know."

For a moment Loder looked at her uncertainly; then, reading the expression in her eyes, he yielded to her demand.

"He's dead," he said in a very low voice. "Chilcote is dead."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

To fully appreciate a great announcement we must have time at our disposal. At the moment of Loder's disclosure time was denied to Eve, for scarcely had the words left his lips before the thought that dominated him asserted its prior claim. Blind to the incredulity in her eyes, he drew her swiftly forward and —half impelling, half supporting her— forced her to descend the stairs.

Never in after life could he obliterate the remembrance of that descent. Fear, such as he could never experience in his own concerns, possessed him. One desire overrode all others, the desire that Eve's reputation, which he himself had so nearly imperiled, should remain unimperiled. In the shadow of that urgent duty, the despair of the past hours, the appalling fact so lately realised, the future, with its possible trials, became dark to his imagination. In his new victory over self the question of her protection predominated.

Moving under his compulsion, he guided her hastily and silently down the deserted stairs, drawing a breath of deep relief as one after another the landings were successively passed, and, still actuated by the suppressed need of haste, he passed through the doorway that they had entered under such different conditions only a few minutes before.

To leave the quiet court, to gain the Strand, to hail a belated hansom, was the work of a moment. By an odd contrivance of circumstance the luck that had attended every phase of his dual life was again exerted in his behalf. No one had noticed their entry into Clifford's Inn; no one was moved to curiosity by their exit. With an involuntary thrill of feeling he gave expression to his relief.

"Thank God it's over!" he said as a cab drew up. "You don't know what the strain has been."

Moving as if in a dream, Eve stepped into the cab. As yet the terrible denouement to their enterprise had made no clear impression upon her mind. For the moment all that she was conscious of, all that she instinctively acknowledged, was the fact that Loder was still beside her.

In quiet obedience she took her place, drawing aside her skirts to make room for him, and in the same subdued manner he stepped into the vehicle. Then, with the strange sensation of reliving their earlier drive, they were aware of the tightened rein and of the horse's first forward movement.

For several seconds neither spoke. Eve, shutting out all other thoughts, sat close to Loder, clinging tenaciously to the momentary comforting sense of protection. Loder, striving to marshal his ideas, hesitated before the ordeal of speech. At last, realizing his responsibility, he turned to her slowly.

HOTTEST THIS YEAR.

Weatherman Says Yesterday Topped the List For 1909.

Toronto, Aug. 9.—Everybody guessed right yesterday. It was the hottest day of the year, and a little bit hotter than any day of last year.

From the lakes region to the Atlantic the heat wave prevailed, with Ontario getting the worst of it. In Toronto the observatory recorded 93.3 degrees of heat, which was the highest temperature registered, while London came second with 93 degrees. It is probable that some parts of interior Ontario had a higher temperature than Toronto. Last year's high temperature, 92.2, was recorded on July 12, followed by 92 on Aug. 4. Prior to yesterday, the warmest day this year was June 21, when 90.4 degrees were recorded.

One death and several prostrations were reported during the day, resulting from the excessive heat.

Timothy Walterhouse of 163 Munroe street, Toronto, died suddenly at his home early yesterday morning. During the night he complained of the heat and went down stairs. In the morning his family found him dead in a chair. About a year ago he suffered from a sunstroke, and ever since had not been feeling in the best of health.

Crazy With the Heat.

New York, Aug. 9.—The heat yesterday moved two citizens of Staten Island to exhibitions of eccentricity that called out the police and fire departments. Anton Civobe, 36 years old, climbed a high tree and hung swaying to the topmost branches, chattering like an ape. Threats to shoot from the police and to chop down the tree failing, a thorough drenching from a fire hose, being ignored, the firemen were finally compelled to run up a 60-foot extension ladder and snare their man from his perch with an improvised lasso. He fought actively.

A little later Ole Anderson, 37 years old, pealed off all his clothes, and climbing to the ridgepole of his three storey house, tried to jam himself down the chimney. The fireman caught him alive.

World's Greatest Flight.

Mourmelon Le Grand, France, Aug. 9.—Roger Somner, a French aviator, who has been driving aeroplanes only for the last three months, Saturday beat Wilbur Wright's record of 2 hours, 20 minutes, and 57 seconds, by circling around in the air for 2 hours 25 minutes and 15 seconds, and covering more than one hundred miles.

Somner started at fourteen minutes past three o'clock in the bright moonlight. In the beginning he traveled slowly near the ground at elevations running from six to sixty yards. After the machine had become limbered up the aviator increased his speed, and the coming of daylight showed him traveling and manoeuvring easily.

When it became evident that he had beaten the duration record held by Wilbur Wright, the assembled crowd cheered wildly, and as Somner came to the ground at forty-one minutes and fifteen seconds past five o'clock he was given an ovation.

Dismissed Employes Compete.

Paris, Aug. 9.—One hundred and fifty of the late employes of the French postoffice, dismissed as a result of the strike, have organized a competition with the Government for the distribution of newspapers, circulars, collection of accounts, etc.

The association which calls itself the Laborious, expects to begin operations on Tuesday, and claims the promised patronage of nearly 100,000 business houses. It has engaged commodious headquarters and adopted an attractive trademark and uniform for its employes.

It was conceived as a means by which discharged strikers might earn a livelihood. The scheme developed and obtained pledges of support which promise to build up the greatly-needed institution. Since the strike, however, the French postal service has improved, but the telephone service is as bad as ever.

C.P.R. Seeking Another Outlet.

Chicago, Aug. 9.—The Soo Line is said to be planning to acquire a much larger portion of the tonnage between Chicago and the northwest than it now enjoys, and also to obtain a line from the wheat fields of Canada to the Gulf of Mexico.

Through the medium of the Wisconsin Central, which the Soo Line recently bought, the latter road is said to be negotiating for the purchase of the Chicago, Milwaukee & Gary Road, which recently was sold to the St. Louis Union Trust Co. This road is partly constructed, and will, when completed, be an outer belt railway surrounding Chicago and touching more than a score of prosperous cities and towns nearby.

RUSSELL IS CAPTURED

Lima, Ohio, Man Wanted For Mining Deals Is Arrested.

Well-Known American Promoter and Financier Is Charged With Obtaining Money Under False Pretences In Association With Frank Law—Is Wealthy Man and a Prominent Citizen.

Lima, Ohio, Aug. 9.—Upon the orders of United States Marshall Chandler of Cleveland, Chief of Police Heflein of Toledo arrested William Lockhart Russell, the millionaire oil and mining magnate, at Lima, Ohio, yesterday, awaiting the arrival of a deputy marshal from Toledo with a proper warrant, charging him with obtaining money under false pretences in connection with mining promotions in Toronto, Canada.

Russell returned to his home in Lima about ten days ago from Ecuador, after being engaged there for the past year in the construction of telephone lines.

He is prepared to fight his case in Toronto, claiming that he was in Europe at the time of the alleged misdeeds.

Russell was arrested on the complaint of the Ontario Attorney-General's Department at Toronto. It is claimed he was in partnership with Frank Law of Toronto, now serving a five-year term in the penitentiary for the flotation of the Silver Bird, Lucky Boys, Blue Bell and other mining companies, which the crown alleged were simply fraudulent creations for the swindling of small investors or speculators in mining shares. During the Law trial Russell was said to be in Paris, but it was repeatedly promised that he would return to Toronto to face his accusors. Instead, he went to South America, returning to this city on Wednesday last.

Russell has always been regarded as one of the representative citizens of Lima, and has been a resident here for the past six years, living in elegant style in a beautiful colonial mansion on fashionable West Market street.

Russell, in 1901-1902, promoted the United States Oil Co. and the Sand Fork Extension, both million-dollar flotations, and during the high price of oils paying big dividends. Much of the capital in these enterprises came from England and France. He later took up the Union Oil, Gas & Refining Co., but this proved a failure. Russell retired from the oil trade in the decadence of the stock company period, and organized the Bank of Lima, with a capital of $50,000, a savings bank feature being offered the public. When the Lima man became interested in Cobalt his bank was merged with another, and the room still remains vacant.

Russell has been philanthropic and generous. He has gained a permanent social footing, and in private life his word is as good as a bond. He was elected a delegate to the National Republican convention in 1904, and is a strong supporter of President Taft.

When the Law & Co. case was first mentioned here, Mr. Russell consented to an interview, and stated then that though not fully advised he understood there were objections to the literature which had been utilized by President Frank Law, Russell himself being vice-president of the company attacked.

Early in October last Mr. and Mrs. Russell, which Miss Olive King, sailed to Europe, spent four months in London, and were in Paris at the time the Canadian law suit began. He was planning a South American voyage, but returned directly here and consulted counsel.

Babe Killed In Runaway.

Marmora, Aug. 9.—While Mrs. Sanford Lawrence and another woman were driving past the old Wiley homestead the horse became frightened at some object and became unmanageable, with the result that Mrs. Lawrence, who was carrying a baby about seven weeks' old, was thrown from the rig. In falling the baby struck its head on the rim of the wheel, the skull being crushed in and death ensuing in about fifteen minutes. Mrs. Lawrence was not seriously injured.

Flight Expected To-day.

Petawawa Camp, Aug. 9.—In spite of McCurdy's efforts to get the Canadian aerodrome for flight Saturday, many unforeseen adjustments have been necessary owing to the parts being knocked about in transit from Nova Scotia. Tanks and radiators were found to be leaking, and the controlling gear and propeller shaft required fitting.

To-day, however, will doubtless see "Baddeck No. 1" given preliminary try out flights.

'Phone Service In Pekin.

New York, Aug. 9.—The tinkle of 2,500 American telephones installed by New York company will be heard in the heart of Pekin, China, within a year. The Chinese Government has signed a contract with a New York company for the installation of a complete telephone system in the capital city at a cost of $150,000. The plant will have an ultimate capacity of 20,000 lines.

Domestic Drowns.

Gananoque, Aug. 9.—Catherine MacDonald, of Toronto, was drowned here Saturday morning. The girl is employed in the home of Clarkson Jones of Toronto, who has his summer home here. She came here about a month ago. The girl had gone in bathing and got beyond her depth.

Alabama Prohibition.

Montgomery, Ala., Aug. 9.—The drastic Carmichael prohibition law was passed by the Senate, 28 to 2, and now awaits the signature of Alabama's prohibition governor to become a law. The bill forbids the sale of drinks containing more than 1 1-2 per cent. alcohol.

Farm Boy Shoots Himself.

Chatham, Aug. 9.—The dead body of Frank Freeman Newman, aged 15, was found by his employer, Allan McKay, in a small bush, at the entrance to McKay's farm in Chatham Township, near Dresden. Death had been caused by a bullet wound in the right side. Thursday, a week ago, young Newman, who was a Barnardo boy, was left at home from an excursion. Later he went visiting, and was reminded by a neighbor that he was neglecting his work. When his employer returned the boy had disappeared.

RUNAWAYS ARE CAUSE OF EXCITEMENT

Young Ladies are Injured on Road Leading to Havelock—Team Makes Lively Dash in Village

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Aug. 9.—A horse belonging to Mr. Colborne, a Norwood liveryman, dropped dead on Wednesday evening last about a mile from town due, it is thought, to over exertion. Next morning four girls were driving into town in a buggy when their horse suddenly came upon the body of the dead animal, which had been left on the side of the road uncovered. It reared up, putting the buggy back in the ditch and then made a dash past the dead animal. One of the girls succeeded in jumping out, but the other three were unable to do so, and received quite severe injuries.

On Saturday morning considerable excitement was caused on the main street by a team of working horses becoming suddenly frightened, trying to make a record run around the block with a waggon in two. Part of the waggon was left hanging on the fence near the C.P.R. station while the team ran into an open yard and were captured.

Mr. Gordon Thompson is visiting at his home in Athens.

Miss Jean Robson, of Norwood, was in town on Monday.

Rev. Mr. Holdsworth, pastor of St. John's church, while visiting at Lake Kashabogamog, 25 miles north of here last week, turned his horse out in a fenced field. When he went to get it he found the animal had disappeared in some manner, and up to the present he has found not trace of it, although it has gone several days.

WAS HONORED BY LOCAL ORANGMEEN

District Master R. E. Juby, Who is Leaving City, Given Handsome Ring

A pleasing feature of the semi-monthly meeting of J. W. Bell Memorial L.O.L., No. 1175, held on Friday, August 6th, was the presentation of an address and a gold ring engraved with the emblems of the Orange degrees, to W. Bro. Robt. E. Juby, District Master, by the City of Peterborough District Orange Lodge.

Since his initiation into L.O.L. No. 251, at Halloway, in Hastings county, eight years ago, Bro. Juby has taken a very active part in the association. During his five years in No. 251, Bro. Juby held the office of recording secretary for three years, district secretary for two years, and county secretary for one year. Bro. Juby then withdrew from the lodge in Halloway to become a charter member of J. W. Bell Memorial L. O.L., No. 1175, of Peterborough. Since that time Bro. Juby has held, up to the time of his resignation, the offices of registrar, R. B. P. No. 261; W.M. L.O.L. No. 1175, and the important office of District Master of the City of Peterborough District Lodge. With the departure of Bro. Juby from Peterborough the brethren lose one of the most active men in connection with the order here, one of the most promising Orange-men in the Dominion. Bro. Juby was selected from among the many efficient Orangemen in our city to become the first W. Master of the City District Lodge on its institution in July, 1908, which affords an example of the respect in which he is held by Peterborough Orangemen, and the confidence they have in his ability. The following is the address read to him by Bro. H. Dodds, of L.O.L., No. 50, Bro. N. Hawley, of No. 1175, made the presentation.—

W. Bro. R. E. Juby, District Master

Dear Sir and Bro.—We, the members of L.O.L. Nos. 80, 1175 and 50, comprising the District of the City of Peterborough, desire to take this opportunity of expressing our regard for you and our deep regret at your removal from our city. We wish to express to you our high appreciation of the manner in which you have filled the honorable and responsible position of District Master, and the courtesy and consideration at all times shown to the members of all lodges. We appreciate also the valuable services which you have rendered in the work of strengthening the noble order to which we belong, and in building up the lodges in this city to their present strong position. We regret exceeding that we are to lose your help here, but we know that our loss will be gain to the brethren in the west, where the firm establishment of the principles for which our order stands is of such great importance to the whole Dominion. We wish to extend to you and yours our heartiest good wishes for success and prosperity and happiness and health in the western provinces. We trust that you may enjoy a long life full of happiness and public service, and that we may often have the pleasure of welcoming you in our lodges during visits to the old home.

We present you with this gift as a slight token of our regard for you.

Signed on behalf of the district and their respective lodges.

W. Bro. Juby, although taken completely by surprise, made a fitting reply, expressing his appreciation at the honor done him, and said that although he was severing active connection with them, he would always carry pleasant recollections of his stay among the brethren of Peterborough.

W. Bro. W. A. Kindred, P.C.M., then gave a short address, dwelling on the work of Bro. Juby since his affiliation with the Peterborough brethren, and predicted a bright and prosperous future for him. He also tendered some good advice to the younger members of the order, commenting on the excellent qualities of the young men who were in connection with the association in Peterborough. After several short addresses from several present, the meeting was brought to a close.

WERE TRYING TO SECURE A PHOTOGRAPH

The Hunter tragedy at Bobcaygeon has aroused great interest throughout the country. Several of the Toronto dailies were in communication with Peterborough photographers yesterday trying to secure a picture of the Hunter family, which, it was said, had been taken in Peterborough. They were not successful in their quest, as none of the local photographers had any pictures of the family.

PRINTERS' PICNIC PLEASES; BIG CROWD WELL HANDLED

Beautiful Day—Boat Filled to the Inspector's Limit—Service Excellent—All Round Entertainment and no Drawbacks.

The steamer Otonabee, under the capable management of Capt. White and Purser Henderson and their corps of assistants, left the Wolfe street wharf yesterday at 8.10 a.m. for Idyl Wyld with the full government allowance of passengers. Fully fifty were left standing on the wharf to go down later in the Monarch. A happier, jollier crowd probably never went for a day's outing. The Printers' Picnic has got it over all other picnics, and people come from distant points to enjoy it when they see it announced. There is plenty of fun, good sports, pretty girls, family parties, excellent music, first-class meals on board, and always a nice fine day and obliging officials. Prof. Halpany's orchestra divided the honors with the lovely scenery of the river, which was at its best. Between the locks and the mouth, or, rather, mouths of the river, not less than thirty parties of campers were sighted, waved at, signalled to and shouted at by the merry passengers, and they did the same in return. "A fine, healthy, stalwart looking lot of people," said a stranger standing by, and so they were, such as Canada may be proud of. Peanuts and popcorn were forthcoming early in the game, and the children were no noisier than usual. About 11 o'clock the pangs of hunger came upon a large number of the excursionists, who first nibbled, and then broke into a faster gait, and by the time the Otonabee drew alongside at Idyl Wyld in a delicious breeze, preparations for the chief event of the day, viz., dinner, were in full swing. The A. O. H. and the C. O. F. had a big day too, for the Rainbow and Lily with scow had a full complement from the wharf at Wolfe street and from the railway dock as well. It was a great day all round; "everybody enjoyed themselves from the father and mother of grown-ups to the young man and "his gal." The return was made on schedule time, the Otonabee touching at the railway wharf at 7.50 p.m. The following is a list of the athletic events and the prize-winners:

Mr. Stratton's prize was won by Mrs. J. Hardwick, No. 39 being the lucky ticket, entitling the winner to a set of dishes. The Royal Nippon china presented by Mr. Dobbin, managing director of The Review, was won by Miss J. Yates, with ticket No. 555.

100 yards dash; printers' only—
J. W. Galbraith, the prize for this race being donated by Mr. F. Clark.

BREVITIES

Idyl Wyld is a nice place for a picnic, but a wharf paved with big round stones is not the best place to land a crowd of passengers.

"Joey" made most of the day's fun and is a great favorite with the ladies.

The two young Halpanys are good ball tossers.

The breeze on Rice Lake was a great relief after the fatigues of the previous warm weather.

The "small boy" was not allowed to run the excursion.

The officials, Messrs. Bartlett, Paxman, Brownlee, Kennedy and others were Johnnies on the spot all right enough.

"Sam" of the Review staff was a surprise both behind the bat and at it. He evidently understands the game. The game was a good one and was more of the real thing than a burlesque by a good deal.

Umpire Rickey put the boys in their places and was a model umpire.

There is no license at Idyl Wyld this year.

The Printers' Union, under whose auspices the excursion was held, wishes to apologize to those who, being part of the "crowded out," were delayed in getting down to Idyl Wyld in the steamer Monarch, which arrived there at 2.30. The navigation company was unable to carry out to the moment the arrangement made by the Printers in the event of over-crowding. It was unfortunate, but the Printers did all in their power to avoid confusion, which will probably be more successfully avoided in future.

More kindly, polite and deferential treatment of ladies by gentlemen could not have been shown anywhere in the world than was accorded to the fair sex yesterday on this excursion. Marriage under such circumstances cannot be a failure.

NARROW ESCAPE FROM BEING CRUSHED TO PIECES BY TRAIN

"Two many bargains." was the cause of a little excitement at the G.T.R. station Saturday night. Just as the Port Hope train pulled out of the station a small man dashed breathlessly up and tried to board it, unfortunately his arms and pockets were completely filled with bulging parcels and naturally hindered his movements. However, he made a heroic attempt to get aboard, while the result that his feet slipped on the station platform and he was dragged thirty or forty feet by the moving train. Had he lost his presence of mind to such an extent as to let go his hold with his hand, he would most surely have been crushed to instant death, as his head was within an inch or two of the wheels of the car.

Some of those on the platform rushed to his aid, and he was enabled to regain his equilibrium, not, however, without leaving several parcels along the line.

THE DEATH OF MRS. WILLIAMSON

Wife of Former Peterboro' Y. M. C. A. Secrtary Passes Away in This City

Friends and relatives of Mrs. Geo. H. Williamson were greatly shocked to hear of her death on Saturday night. The deceased had been in the best of health till that time, and on Saturday morning had even done the marketing for the family. Her death occurred at midnight, and it was not until just before that time that the family knew that anything was wrong. She had been sitting on the verandah with the rest of the family until after ten o'clock and was apparently in no trouble whatever. Later on, however, she was struck by an attack of heart-failure, and was carried away before much assistance could be offered her.

Mrs. Williamson was the daughter of Mrs. J. Doyle Brown, 162 Smith street, and wife of Mr. George H. Williamson, secretary of the Y. M. C. A. at Port Arthur. Mr. Williamson was formerly connected with the local Y.M.C.A., but left here some time ago for Port Arthur, where he has been ever since. Mrs. Williamson was here visiting her mother, Mrs. Brown, when her death occurred.

She was 34 years of age, and was born in Norwood, living there until 1888, when she moved to this city with Mr. and Mrs. Brown.

Deceased was brought up a member of the Presbyterian church, but after her marriage she went with her husband to the Methodist church. She was a most active and consistent Christian worker, and had a large circle of friends and admirers, to whom the announcement of her death came as a great shock.

Besides a mother and husband, the deceased is survived by one son, Andrew, and one brother, Dr. J. Patterson, of Adamac, Sask., and to them is extended the heartfelt sympathy of the whole community.

The remains were taken by railway to Norwood this morning, where they will be interred.

William Nelson, a G.T.R. brakeman, was fatally injured by being crushed between cars. [illegible]

MR. CULVERWELL IS WROUGHT UP

Mr. J. Alex Culverwell, C.E., managing director of the Central Ontario Power Co., phoned The Review today that notwithstanding the agreement between his company and the City Council of Peterborough, by which the company gave the city a thirty days' option in consideration of the city's going on with the engineer's (Mr. Rogers') report, efforts are being made by some councillors to block the whole undertaking. He says that other power companies may have a first call on the attention of the Council, but all he wants is that the blocking shall cease and that the question of power for Peterborough shall go on as it began. He has no fear of the outcome, but if his company's proposition is not the best, then "let the Council show its good faith by doing something."

NEW FORM BILL OF LADING ORDERED

By Dominion Railway Commissioners—Will be Great Advantage to Shippers

A new bill of lading to be used in the shipping of goods on Canadian railways has been ordered by the Dominion Board of Railway Commissioners. This new bill will be what is known as the plain bill of lading, all the old provisions to be done away with. On the back of the old bill there were some twenty-two or twenty-three provisions which the shipper had to agree to, but after the 1st of November next there will be only eleven of these. It imposes additional obligations upon the railway companies as carriers, making them responsible for negligence in transport or delivery and also makes the initial carrier responsible for a consignment of goods to destination, even though it has to pass over other railway lines in Canada. It makes the initial company responsible also for shipment of goods which are handled by United States or other roads with which there is a joint tariff arrangement.

The shippers say the new bill is a great gain to them. The old one was made by the carriers for the carriers, while the new bill, broadly speaking, has been devised by the carriers for the shippers. Under the new bill, the railway company has to prove that any loss is through no fault of its own.

The Canadian Manufacturers' Association took up the matters year ago and brought it before the various boards of trade, the Bankers' and Association Shipping and Railway companies.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

DROWNED IN SIGHT OF WIFE AND CHILD

G. J. Reid of Peterboro' the Victim—Body Found in Half an Hour by Means of Grappling Irons---Stoney Lake Claims Another Victim.

A drowning accident attended by circumstances of a particularly pathetic character, took place in Stony Lake about five o'clock Sunday afternoon. G. J. Reid, of Chamberlain street, Peterborough, and an employee, of the C.G.E., being the victim.

He was staying at Hendren's Island Stony Lake and was in bathing at the time he was drowned. He was not able to swim and got beyond his depth. His wife and child were watching him at the time and were unable to do anything to help him.

Willing assistance was forthcoming in the search for the body, and it was found in about half an hour by means of grappling irons by Mr. Henderson, one of the searching party.

Dr. MacPherson, of Peterborough, and Mr. Harold Ball, a medical student at Varsity, tried hard to resucitate Reid, but could not do so.

The body was taken to Young's Point on Ald. Turner's launch, "San Toy" and Comstock's undertaking establishment communicated with.

The funeral took place this afternoon to the Little Lake cemetery.

SHOT BY HUSBAND WHO WAS CRAZED BY DRINK

Joseph Hunter, Proprietor of Royal Hotel, Bobcaygeon Commits Terrible Crime—Was Jealous of His Wife—Friends of Dead Woman Claim She Was True and Loyal.

By Staff Correspondent.

Bobcaygeon, Aug. 9.—Five years ago Joseph Hunter was a prosperous merchant in Bobcaygeon, and held the respect and esteem of all who dealt at his store or were acquainted with him. He had as good a wife as any man was ever blessed with, and two small children, a boy and a girl, to encourage him to do his best in the battle of life. To-day Joseph Hunter is occupying a cell in the Lindsay jail waiting to be tried for his life; his pretty wife, whom he murdered with his own hand, lies asleep in Verulam cemetery, and his two children, who do not appear to realize the terrible tragedy that has entered their bright young lives, are without the guiding hand of a parent. This sad transformation was brought about by the fathers' love of strong drink.

WHISKEY DID IT.

It was not brought about by any failing of the mother. For the past two months she had been called upon to suffer from the consequences of her husband's appetite for liquor. Last Friday night, instead of retiring for a much needed rest, she remained beside her husband, doing all in her power to pacify him and ease the pain which he must have been suffering from his long debauch, but finally, as the ray of daylight began to stream in the window she lay down, exhausted, upon the bed, but never to awake in this world again.

During the time Hunter conducted the grocery business in the village, the Royal Hotel, of which his brother, Yarner, was the proprietor, was burned to the ground. It was then that Joe Hunter made

HIS MISTAKE.

He saw, or thought he saw, a better chance to make money faster, and finally, he sold out his business, built a new hotel on the site of the old one, and the fact of he and his wife being very popular, the hotel was well patronized, and his bank account began to swell. But prosperity was too much for even Joe Hunter, and gradually the drink habit began to assert its influence. He became suspicious of his wife, and the poor woman was called upon to listen to many cruel accusations from her jealous husband. Her large number of friends in the village assert that she was always loyal and true to him and the accusations were false and unwarranted, and those of a man, whose reason was affected by drink.

It is rumored about that there had been many between the two, and also that the family of the dead woman now state that they knew some time ago that it was going to happen. Why they did not take him away is one of the questions that the villagers find hard to answer. It is also stated that Hunter had made threats to kill other people, and in one case it is known that one young man, who was told of a threat against his life, asked protection at the hands of the law, but when Hunter was seen in regard to the affair he said it was not true and that he had made no such threat at all. Another report is to the effect that the murderer chased the dead woman's mother around the hotel one night, threatening to kill her with a razor. Not one complaint had been made by Mrs. Hunter, but it is expected that something of a definite nature in regard to the cause of the murder will be found out at the inquest which will be held at the town hall Tuesday morning.

WHEN ARRESTED

by Constable Jas. McMullin, the murderer made no resistance, and only asked where he was being taken to when placed on the train. When told by the constable that he was going to Lindsay, the prisoner made no remark. On reaching the Lindsay jail he asked the reason of his being there, and when told that he had shot his wife, he said, "It can't be true; Rose is not dead." His actions were not those of a man in full possession of his reasoning powers, except that when told of his wife being dead, he appeared considerably amazed.

After the coroner's jury had been empanelled and had visited the scene of the murder, the coroner, Dr. Blanchard of Lindsay, gave permission for the burial of the remains, and the funeral took place at 5 p.m. Sunday. The service was a very impressive and solemn one, and the halls and rooms were packed by the large number present.

CROSS OF BLOOD.

A very remarkable incident in regard to the murder is that a large and perfectly-formed cross can be seen on the ceiling of the room below that in which Mrs. Hunter was shot. The large amount of blood that poured from the wound on to the floor soaked through to the ceiling with the above result.

"WILFUL MURDER" IS THE VERDICT

Special Staff Correspondent.

Bobcaygeon, Aug. 10.—3.30 p.m. —The jury in connection with the inquest into the death of Mrs. Hunter at five minutes to three to-day brought in a verdict of "wilful murder against the husband of the dead woman, Joseph Hunter. The jury went out at twenty minutes to 2.

The inquest was held in the town hall and much excitement prevailed. It was conducted by Coroner Blanchard of Lindsay.

SAGACIOUS DOG SHOWED THE PLACE

Where Little Boy Had Been Drowned---Fell off Wharf at Lakefield on Saturday---Body Recovered by Father.

Dulmer Northey, five years of age, the youngest son of Mr. Asor Northey, of Lakefield, was drowned on Saturday while playing at the Lakefield wharf about noon. A dog was largely instrumental in the finding of the body. The dog, which belongs to the boy's uncle, Mr. William Nixon, ran up to Mr. Nixon's house and noticing that the animal was particularly agitated and trying to get his attention, Mr. Nixon followed the animal to the wharf. The dog jumped into indicate where the boy had fallen in.

The body was found by Mr. Northey, the boy's father, at about three o'clock Sunday morning.

Burial will take place in Bobcaygeon.

ENGLISH FAMILY BADLY IN NEED OF IMMEDIATE HELP

Elsewhere there appears in the columns an obituary notice announcing the death of a man by the name of Lawton. Since it was written the same further particulars of the death have come to hand and the Review prints them, hoping, that they will appeal to those who read them.

Some twelve or thirteen months ago there came to this city an English family of which the deceased was the father and the sole support. After they had been here for some time, and were in very comfortable circumstances, the husband was taken suddenly ill with a cancer and was removed to the hospital. Here an operation was performed, which, while it removed the cause of the trouble, still it left the patient very weak. Nevertheless, being a man of spirit and honor, he insisted on doing his best to keep his family together, and despite his utter unfittedness, insisted on getting work. For some time the family struggled on, aided now and then by a little charity from the city authorities, but finally the father became so weak he could work no more.

There were two small boys in the family—one about ten years old and one about seven. When the revenue from the father's toil ceased to come in there was nothing for it but that these small boys be set to work. Accordingly the larger one was sent to the C.G.E. and the smaller one was given work in an up-town office. When last Saturday night came the small boys had earned between them $8.50, and this they took home to their mother. The rent, however, was due that night, and when that had been paid there remained only fifty cents left to feed and clothe the family for the ensuing week. Yesterday morning the father died, leaving the mother and her five children almost destitute.

Any person or persons who would like to aid her in any way may do so by communicating with Mr. Finch Miller, or by calling at her address, 14 Lafayette avenue.

It is a most deserving case, and it is to be hoped that it will be met with a large response.

NUNS DROWNED AT MONTREAL

Fell From C. P. R. Bridge at Bourdeaux---Were Overtaken by a Train

Special to the Review.

Montreal, Aug. 10.—Two nuns from the Sault Au Recollet Convent, lost their lives this morning while crossing the C.P.R. bridge at Bourdeaux. They were overtaken by a train and either through fright or inability to hold onto the side, fell into the water. The swift current carried them away and they were drowned before anything could be done to effect a rescue. The authorities have not yet learned their names. The bridge is commonly used by the public, being the only means of crossing the river at that point.

VICTORIA HARRIERS' MEET A MOST DECIDED SUCCESS

Good Time Made in 100 Yards and Half Mile Runs—Track in Excellent Condition — Good Crowd—Weather Rather Warm But Passable.

About two hundred paid admission to the Riverside grounds yesterday yesterday, to see the Victoria Harriers' Athletic meet. Considering the number of other attractions in and out of the city, there was a good crowd, and the men behind the venture were well pleased with the patronage handed out. The day was a little warm for the making of good time, but otherwise it could not have been better. The weather man certainly was very lenient to the promoters, as even the slightest downfall of rain would have completely spoiled the track. Thanks to this good behaviour, however, it was in excellent shape. Mr. Charley Thorpe, and his energetic assistant, had been at work on it all week rolling and pressing the grass to give a good footing, and, while it could not compare with cinders for a fast run, still it was a great deal better than was expected. It was laid out in the form of an oval, just in front of the grand stand, and was fixed by a circle of brightly colored flags, which showed up very prettily against the green sward. A straightaway track of one hundred yards was obtained by cutting diagonally with another track, and this, too, was marked out by the colored bunting. The track being six laps to the mile, it was not too big to prevent the audience from following the runners throughout the whole distance, and, besides, allowed the officials to both start and finish the races in front of the grand stand. A section of the 57th Regimental band was present and enlivened the proceedings with rag-time favorites.

As predicted in Saturday's paper, the entry list was so large that it was necessary to run off several of the shorter races in a series of heats. In the initial event of the 100 yards handicap, W. Milburn was first, doing the distance in 11 4-5 seconds, from three yards in front of scratch. Fred McGrath took the second heat in 11 7-10 seconds, Vincent Corkery the third in 11 1-5 seconds, and H. Wood the fourth heat in 11 seconds flat. In the finals, the above four men qualified, although McGrath dropped out, his place being filled by J. Brownlee. H. Wood won, with Corkery second, and Holland third. The time was 10 4-5 seconds, which was very good, considering the fact that the track was a grass one.

The one mile open brought forth considerable applause. There were sixteen entries, but only eight started. Charley Thorpe had no trouble in landing the prize. W. Parker, an Indian from Hiawatha, was second, and J. Simmons, of the Victoria Harriers, was third. Time, 5 minutes 3-4 seconds.

There were only five starters out of twelve entries in the half mile, but they provided some good entertainment. At the sound of the pistol an Englishman named Reid, took the lead and set a furious pace, closely followed by Mahoney and Stewart. The pace, however, was too hot for the latter, and he dropped out at the quarter mile. Brown made the journey in two minutes 18 3-10 seconds; Mahoney was second and Walsh third.

There were two heats in the 220 yards handicap. In the first one Wood won, with Corkery a close second, in 25 3-5 secs. Walsh and Holland tied for the position in the second heat, the time being 26 seconds flat. Holland was third. In the finals, Wood came first, Corkery second, and Holland third. Time, 25 4-5 secs.

In the third mile handicap, Charley Thorpe bit off a little more than he could comfortably chew. Starting from scratch he gave Parker, the winner, one hundred yards, and Robinson, the second man, one hundred and fifty yards. The handicap aided by the hot sun, proved too much for him, and he was forced to quit during the third mile. However, even with an even start it is doubtful whether he could have beaten Parker, as the latter displayed all kinds of speed and was in great shape.

The quarter mile obstacle race provided a great deal of amusement. The runners were required to run a quarter mile, in the course of which they had to leap over a wide hurdle, crawl through a barrel and struggle under a wide strip of carpet. R. Wright won the event, with T. Mahoney second, and G. Brown third.

There were eight entries for the married men's race. After a strenuous tussle F. Porter captured first place, J. Pilling second, and W. Jeffries third. R. Wright captured the boys' half mile run, and Egbert Kelly the one hundred yard dash.

Ben Dusty made 37 feet 3 inches in the hop, step and jump. H. Wood was second, with 36 feet 2 inches. In the high jump Dusty was again to the fore, with Bill Bailey in second place.

On the whole the meet was a most successful one, and was most creditably handled by those in charge.

PARK ST. TEAM LEADS WAY IN CITY BASEBALL LEAGUE

Won From Strathconas on Saturday, 9-7—Second Game Did Not Take Place Owing to Mixup Over Officials.

Park St. now leads the way for the City League silverware. The Strathconas suffered a couple of relapses of aviation during Saturday's game with Park St. and the result was a win for the southenders by 9 to 7.

The Straths presented a patched-up lineup. Heaslip, Weatherstone, Kendry and Craig, who are at present away holidaying, were missing from the commissioners rooster. Their places were filled by Wetthaufer and Hickey, who have been out of the game for six weeks, and Allison, who has not donned a uniform this season. All played a good game.

Gorham, who pitched for the losers, twirled good enough to win any game, had he received anything like support. Unfortunately, he made a couple of errors himself, which proved disastrous. His first misplay was worth four runs to Park St. With two down in the fifth, two on bases, he dropped an easy pop fly, which, had he caught it, would have retired the side, but he dropped it, and before the next put out could be executed, Park St. had accumulated another quartette of runs.

Dusty was on the mound for the church boys, and he also twirled good ball, but he was hit hard, and oftener than Gorham, and the only thing that saved him was good support which his field accorded him.

Park St. scored all their runs in three innings, getting five in the fifth, one in the eighth, and three in the ninth.

On the other hand, the Straths started right in from the first and kept piling them up one at a time. They tallied one in the first, fourth and fifth, two in the seventh, and one in the eighth and ninth innings.

The feature of the game, outside the good work of the pitchers, was a pretty one-hand pick-up by Wetthaufer, of Pentland's hard grounder.

Home run—Wetthaufer.

Two-base hits—Hickey, Jim Pilling, Jack Pilling.
Sacrifice hits—B. Dusty, Bell, Andrus.
Struck out—By Dusty 10, by Gorham 3.

Hit by pitcher—By Dusty 2, by Gorham 1.
Double play—Curtis, unassisted.
Left on bases—Park St. 6, Strathconas 7.
Umpires—Guerin, Davidson and McGill.

The second game, which was to have been played by the T.A.S. and West Ends, failed to materialize, through their inability to agree on officials. Manager Quinlan, of the T.A.S., wanted Jack Mulhall or no one, and Dobson, of the West End, would not accept Mulhall for anything but a base umpire, and would take any other man who was on the field for the balls and strikes, and there were lots of good capable ones there, too, but this would not satisfy Quinlan, and he said he would not play. Jack Denneard assumed control of the T.A.S. team after Quinlan withdrew, and accepted Dobson's suggestion that Jack Sheridan be the other umpire, and that they toss up to see who would umpire behind the catcher, and who would call the base decisions. Dobson won the toss and Sheridan was to call the balls and strikes end of it. Flaherty limbered up, but his arm would not permit him going on with the game, and there was more wrangling, and finally no game.

Sheridan called "play ball" and the West Ends took the field. Kirn threw three strikes over and the umpire awarded the game to the West End. As they left the diamond the T.A.S. went out and Mulhall called "play ball." Three strikes were put over and the game forfeited to the T.A.S. So, who gets the game?

There should be a meeting of the league at once and patch up the differences, and appoint an official, or, what would be better, see if Mr. McCabe would withdraw his resignation.

TIE GAMES CAUSE DELAY

In Deciding the Football Championship of Ontario—Havelock Team Keeping in Shape

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Aug. 9.—It has not been ascertained as yet what team will be Havelock's opponent in the finals for the football championship of Ontario. It is between Brussels-All Saints, of Toronto, and Green river. At the semi-final game on July 31st, between All Saints and Green River at Green River, it resulted in a tie 1—1. At the return game in Toronto on Saturday the same thing was repeated, there being another tie score, so there will have to be another game to decide which is the better team. The winners of All Saints' and Green River play Brussels and then the winners of those two districts play the Havelock team. The Havelock team had a good practice game at W[illegible] on Wednesday last, they being a [illegible], 11—.

A SPLENDID DAY AND A SUCCESSFUL EVENT

Stoney Lake Regatta Was Again the Popular Attraction of the Year at Juniper—Affair Excellently Managed and a fine Programme of Races.

The Stony Lake regatta has become an annual event, as sure as Civic Holiday, and makes this day one of particular interest and pleasure to the numerous cottagers and pleasure-seekers that haunt the beautiful summering places of the lake. The regatta gives concrete expression to the skill of the competitors in the events in paddling, sailing, rowing, and motorboat racing which have developed to a most creditable degree. It is an occasion for the making and recognition of district aquatic champions.

The regatta yesterday at Juniper Island was another link in the long chain of successful events of the kind under the auspices of the Stony Lake Cottagers' Association.

The weather man was as considerate of what was due the occasion as if he had been appointed chairman of the committee in charge. He evidently strove to make it hot, and the sun was perhaps a trifle too enthusiastic, but there was a delightful breeze for the sailing events.

The waters adjacent to the course presented a very attractive appearance, dotted as they were with countless craft gaily dressed in their regatta day best. Juniper Island was also crowded with spectators. A lively interest was displayed in the different races.

The regatta itself, from the standpoint of racing and management, was a pronounced success, and the committee of management are to be congratulated on their thorough preparation of the programme. There was no cause for complaint in any of the races on the big card of sports, although there were, of course, a couple of complaints from contestants, who would do well in the future to take as a text the old but general fact that "everybody cannot win."

All the races were excellent, but perhaps the best from a racing standpoint were the girls' swimming race and the mixed tandem canoe race, both of which were captured by a narrow margin, and the closest kind of following by the winners of second place. The finish in the girls' swimming race was the closest of the day, Helen Strickland taking the premier position after a particularly keen struggle, winning by only about a foot. The tilting tournament was also one of the most entertaining contests of the day, and provided considerable comedy as well, when the ambitious aspirants were rudely jolted in the water.

At night a programme of music and dancing were given at the pavilion and the presentation of the prizes was made by Mr. Jas. Acton.

GOOD RACES OF THE TURF CLUB

The Turf Club's races yesterday afternoon attracted a fairly large percentage of the citizens who remained at home, and the programme of events was well up to the average. In fact, the members of the club were more than pleased with it, as both events were fought to the very finish. The free-for-all was particularly interesting and exciting. The meet or matinee was prepared on short notice, and was particularly good.

The results were as follows—

CRICKET

Tremendous interest centres in the final test match between England and Australia at the Surrey oval. Australia made 325 and England 36 for two wickets yesterday.
New Books in!

A meeting of the Cricket Club will be held to-night at the Y.M.C.A. at eight o'clock. All those interested are requested to attend.

The Peterborough cricket team spent the holiday at Warkworth and had a most enjoyable time, though they were defeated by an innings and 48 runs. Peterborough went to bat first and the score showed at the conclusion of the innings 48, Gibson having contributed 30. In the second innings they made only 20. Warkworth, however, were there with the willow and compiled 136, and there is no need to mention any of their players as they all played magnificently, especially in the field.

A return game is expected here on the 19th, when lunch will be served on the grounds by the Coleman Bros.

Masses Stand Behind Lloyd-George Says Mail.

After a Long and Bitter Attack on the Chancellor of the British Exchequer Unionists Are Dismayed by Daily Mail's Admission That the Government's Budget Proposals Are Popular.

London, Aug. 9.—A bombshell was exploded in British politics last week and practically changed the whole aspect of the situation in regard to David Lloyd-George's budget.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer has been waging, ever since he introduced the financial proposals in the spring, a fight which has been growing more bitter every week. Not for years has a political question in England given birth to such a flood of personal invective as the present discussion of the budget. His opponents began by calling Mr. Lloyd-George a Socialist. They have now reached the point of describing him a a Jack Cade, and, in the bitterness usually engendered by approaching defeat, are likely to go even farther in the way of invective.

Mr. Lloyd-George is not the man to accept denunciation mutely, and as his is perhaps the most nimble wit in the British political arena he is a dangerous antagonist to tackle.

"Mr. Lloyd-George seems, I do not know why, to have a special grudge against dukes," writes Lord Avebury to a correspondent. "They are twenty-seven in number, and if he confiscated the whole of their property it would only bring in, say, from $100,000,000 to $150,000,000, and affect our taxation for one or two years; after which everything would go on as before, but with this unfortunate difference—that the security of property would have been shaken, enterprise and thrift would have been discouraged, and capital driven out of the country."

The Duke of Portland, one of the great London landlords, has been singled out for attention, which his grace resented to such a degree that he addressed a meeting of the tenants at Welbeck Abbey and delivered himself of his opinion on the budget. The Chancellor's speeches, he said, he read with surprise, sorrow and a certain measure of contempt.

But a blow was dealt the Unionist party which has thrown it into complete disarray, horse, foot and artillery—in other words, both Lords and Commons. This was the admission by The Daily Mail that the country generally is not sympathizing with the hard case of the ducal and other landowners menaced by Mr. Lloyd-George, but, on the contrary, is welcoming the promises of an amelioration of the lot of other classes of the population promised by the budget.

Coming from a paper which had hitherto been strongly denunciatory of the Lloyd-Georgeian proposals, that volte-face is a political sensation on a grand scale. The attitude of The Daily Mail is taken by friends and foes alike to mean that David Lloyd-George's is the winning side—the side on which are the big batteries, which make journalistic as well as Napoleonic successes.

Did King Make Clean-Up?

New York, Aug. 9.—One of the periodic unconfirmed reports burst upon Wall street Saturday afternoon to the effect that King Edward made a winning of more than a million in U. S. Steel common.

The rumor was based on the fact that J. P. Morgan had been entertained at Windsor Castle by the King while abroad, and that an order to buy 50,000 shares of Steel common, coming apparently from an English source, was executed when the stock was at from 50 to 52 recently. The stock sold Saturday at 76 1-4.

The report could not be confirmed from any reliable source.

King Intervenes.

Stockholm, Aug. 9.—The tie-up of the business of the country as the result of the strike is so serious that King Gustave has intervened in an endeavor to secure a compromise. His Majesty yesterday sent a message to the parties at conflict, exhorting them to come to an agreement at the earliest moment possible, and advising arbitration of the disputed questions.

Over 1,000 telephone and telegraph employes will strike on Wednesday.

The farm laborers' union announced yesterday that its 7,000 members would strike as the rye crop is ready for harvest.

Twenty-Two Firemen Injured.

New York, Aug. 9.—Twenty-two firemen were dragged out unconscious and three others received serious injuries in the course of a forty minute blaze which destroyed 4,000 men's hats and did $5,000 other damage in a shop at the corner of Fourth avenue and 23rd street, near Madison Square. An explosion of illuminating gas threw a dozen firemen unconscious into the street. Other were overcome by escaping gas or hurt by falling timbers.

Two Probably Drowned.

Ottawa, Aug. 9.—Ralph Slattery, jr., of Ottawa, is thought to have been drowned at Arnprior. On Friday morning he and a cousin, of Arnprior, left to cross Chats' Lake in a rowboat to their camp, three miles away. This was at 2 a.m. Yesterday the empty boat was found at Sand Point.

Joseph D'Abour, aged 14, of Tetreauville was drowned Saturday night while swimming in the Ottawa River.

This Year's Apple Crop.

Buffalo, Aug. 9.—An apple crop in the United States slightly in excess of that of a year ago and 50 per cent. larger in Canada, is the estimate made by Secretary Rothwell before the International Apple Shippers' Association. The quality of the crop is rated poor to good.

Strong will power enables a man to take an occasional fall out of himself.

FINE ADDRESSES AT TENT MEETING

Heat on Sunday Interfered Somewhat With the Attendance

The heat on Sunday was evidently responsible for the small attendance at the meetings held by the Y.M.C.A. for men in the tent next the Customs House, but those who were there were not disappointed in the quality of the addresses given.

On the afternoon at four o'clock Mr. Roper, of the George street Methodist church, gave a very clear and impressive definition of "Conscience," dealing with conviction of sin as a fact of consciousness in the life of every man present, and also in the lives of the world's greatest men, and forgiveness of sin following repentance as another fact of consciousness as testified to by Paul, in Romans 8. 1;—"There is therefore now no condemnation to them that are in Christ Jesus."

In the evening at a quarter past eight Mr. Bruce Quann gave an address suggested by the motto, "Always act square," in which he showed that evidences of the Christian life are acting "square" with God and fellowman.

Next Sunday will be the last that the Y.M.C.A. will conduct meetings in the tent, and in the afternoon Mr. Alex. Haddow, a student of Woodstock College, will be the speaker, and in the evening Rev. Joseph Cordner, of Montreal, who is supplying in Knox Presbyterian church, during the absence of Rev. Mr. Keith, will address the men.

THEY HOLIDAYED AT JUBILEE POINT

Hibernians and Foresters Had a Delightful Outing--Baseball Match Was Feature

The annual outing of St. Peter's court, Catholic Order of Foresters, and Division No. 1, Ancient Order of Hibernians, to Jubilee Point yesterday surpassed in attendance and enjoyableness all previous excursions held under the auspices of these organizations. The arrangements were as perfect as the weather, and nothing happened to mar in any way the pleasure of the picnickers. The committee in charge are to be greatly complimented on the efficient manner in which they did their work. About four hundred took the trip to Jubilee on the steamer Water Lily and the Palace barge. Messrs. Tucker and Kearney supplied excellent music for dancing on the barge and in the pavilion at the Point. The sail down the river and return was a most enjoyable one and added greatly to the pleasure of the outing. The feature of the afternoon's programme was a baseball match between teams picked from the Hibernians and Foresters. The Irishmen on both teams played well, and their brilliant work was loudly applauded. The Hibernians pulled out a victory, the score being 11-5. Rev. Father Kelly twirled good ball for the winners and was given steady support. Donovan did the heaving for the Foresters. The teams were as follows:

Hibernians—Flaherty, McFadden, c; Hickey, Rev. Father Kelly, p; Hanrahan, V. Clancy, Whaley, Quinlan, Gorham.

Foresters—O'Toole, Donovan, p; H. O'Brien, Giroux, Doris, W. Clancy, Brady Judd, J. Clancy.

Messrs W. O'Brien and P. Kane handled the game well.

A good programme of sports was run off, the results being as follows:—

Men's 100 yard dash—
A Quinlan.

Boy under 17—
Kylie; Hatrick; Ed. Murty.

Girl under 16—
M. O'Dette, A. Kelly, M. Allen.

Girl under 12—
M Allen, J. Kylie, Eva Halpin.

Boy under 12—
Thompson, Ed. Murty, M. Murty.

Married Men's Race—
J. Jones, W. Whaley.

The steamer and barge arrived in Peterborough about 8 p.m. with the happy party on board.

DISCUSS THE ASSESSMENT

Twenty-Six Mill Rate Stirs up Good Deal of Talk at Havelock

Havelock, Aug. 9.—Considerable discussion takes place among the citizens of town since the tax rate of 26 9-10 mills on the dollar for 1909 has been set. Although this is 3 1-10 mills less than last year, nevertheless the taxes will figure greater owing to the increased assessment. Last year the rate was 30 mills on an assessment of $237,500, while this year there is 26 9-10 on assessment of $352,800. Figured on last year's assessment, Havelock's tax rate for 1909, would be 40 mills. The Council has no control over the greater part of the expenditure, $6,419 is taken up before they start in with their work. This leaves $3,045 for all general village purposes, such as grading, building, repairing sidewalks, drains, constable and other salaries. It is utterly impossible for the village to be kept in perfect state on such a small amount of money. The high tax rate is caused mostly by the the schools which expects during 1909, $4,850.

It either means that the expenses of the school must be cut considerably or that a by-law for a sufficient amount to enable the Council to construct permanent cement sidewalks and fix the village drainage system must be passed. It is quite likely that such a by-law will be submitted to a vote of the ratepayers in the near future.

GRAND SUCCESS

Wonderful Growth in Sales During 1908.

The year just passed will long be remembered for the financial and commercial depression. Business houses all over Canada were affected. Most of them show a loss over 1907. Some did about as much business last year as in the preceeding one. A few—a very few—show substantial gains. In spite of "hard times" and "financial depression" the sales of "Fruit-a-tives" doubled in 1908 over 1907.

The National Drug & Chemical Co. of Canada Limited bought "Fruit-a-tives" in 100 gross lots (14,000 boxes). Lyman Sons & Company of Montreal, and Lyman Brothers in Toronto, also ordered "Fruit-a-tives" by the hundred gross lots. These big wholesalers bought such big orders simply because the retail dealers ordered so many boxes of "Fruit-a-tives"—and the dealers had to keep "Fruit-a-tives" always in stock to supply the constantly growing demand of people in every section of Canada.

To-day, "Fruit-a-tives" are the most popular family medicine in the Dominion. In the big cities, in the smaller towns, on farms and ranches, "Fruit-a-tives" are the standby in curing all forms of Stomach, Liver, Bowel, Skin and Kidney Trouble, Rheumatism, Headaches and Neuralgia.

Are you a sufferer from any of the diseases? Don't hesitate a moment. Get a box of "Fruit-a-tives" — take them according to directions—and they will cure without fail. 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size, 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

ROCK HELD UP THE LAUNCH

Atlantic Mariner Confused on Stoney Lake--Laugh was on the Veteran Seaman

Early Sunday morning a launch ran into a rock at Big Island, Stoney Lake. In spite of the fact that a buoy indicated the place where the sub-marine mountain lay, the erratic wheelman and pilot said it was a brand new discovery, and claimed they would never have stranded the launch on it, had it been a recognized reef. The obstruction was christened "Nellie's Rock."

The man at the wheel insisted on his right to steer the launch, saying he had crossed the ocean several times and would have no difficulty in finding his way about in such a small pool as Stony Lake. After a considerable delay the launch was freed from the rock and a cautious progress was taken up to the destination of the party.

LARGE NUMBER AT THE SERVICE

At the usual hour the service commenced last night. Mr. Whelen led and Mr. Young was the speaker. Miss Gertrude Huycke, of George street church, sang a solo, entitled "The Sinner and the Song," which was very helpful. The speaker took his text from John, 20, 16. He emphasized the fact that if God were taken out of a man's life that life would not be worth living. Many have burdens and cannot find the burden-bearer, said the speaker. When a man is really burdened with sin, even angels cannot help. There is the danger of dwelling so much on the burden that we cannot hear the burden-bearer. It was so with Mary. Jesus had spoken, but she didn't recognize Him. But Christ not only calls once, but He repeats the call again and again. Mary heard the call and responded, and as a result joy took the place of sorrow, and freedom instead of a burden. It is the same every time, said the speaker. He urged the congregation to an immediate response to the call of Jesus. Three decisions were made after the regular meeting had closed.

The services continue every night. Mr. W. J. Whelen will be the speaker to-night, and Mr. A. G. Young will lead. Special singing will be given by a male quartette. All are welcome.

ELEVEN DIE IN FLAMES

Hotel in Vernon B. C. Destroyed by Fire - Eleven Guests are Caught in Death Trap

Vernon, B.C., Aug. 11.—Fire broke out in the Okanagan Hotel here about 2 o'clock yesterday morning, resulting in the total destruction of the building and the deaths of at least eleven of the guests.

The building was of brick veneer, three storeys in height with about 48 rooms, was a mass of flames when the alarm was turned in and both back and front stairways were ablaze. Guests escaped from the burning building down fire escapes or at the rear, where some outhouses made the descent less hazardous. The premises of the Royal Bank, P. Burns & Co., Morris Drug Store, and F. A. Loveridge, real estate, were considerably damaged.

The known dead are: Wilbur Smith, carpenter; J. J. Funeion, laborer; Jas. Anderson, delivery man for J. W. Clover; Julius Fuerst, bartender, relative of proprietors, from Wetaskiwin; Geo. Jarral and Geo. McKay, Calgary; Geo. Settigas, A. Hickling, Al Crabtree and a Bohemian.

A. Hickling lost his life in his attempt to save one of the domestics in the hotel after having saved one of Sigalet's daughters.

Five patients are in the hospital—Hormer, Nichols, Seal, Stringent and Hall.

The damage is estimated at $25,000, with insurance of $12,000.

LITTLE BOY IS DROWNED

Toronto, Aug. 11.—Little Reginald E. Eaton, the 8-year-old son of John Eaton of Ashdale avenue, was drowned yesterday at noon while swimming in Coatsworth's cut. The little lad had just purchased a new bathing suit and was anxious to get into the water. He got beyond his depth and two companions who were fishing were unable to save him. One ran for help and the other marked the place where he went down. The body was recovered at 3.15 by Mait Ackroyd and taken to the home of the parents by P. C. Rapley of No 8 division. They are prostrate with grief.

DESERT STOCK FOR WHEAT

Calgary, Aug. 11.—Burns, the pioneer meat packer of Alberta, states that farmers, attracted by $1 wheat, are selling off their cattle with a view to increasing their wheat areas. As a result the province will, if present methods of grain farming be continued, be forced to import beef within three years. Sheep have been imported from Australia and the United States for a number of years, and two-thirds of the bacon used in the province is purchased in the United States.

A Farmer's Suicide.

Truro, N.S., Aug. 11.—While boys were swimming in the Solmon River, the body of Jonathan MacKinlay, aged 70, a farmer of North River, was found, his head was in a bag and weighed down with a stone 75 pounds. Deceased had recently announced his intentions of suicide.

Alas, Poor Evelyn.

New York, Aug. 11.—Evelyn Nesbit Thaw declared yesterday that there was no truth in the report that she would bring suit for $500,000 against her husband, Harry K. Thaw, or against any member of the Thaw family. She said, however, that her usual monthly remittance of $480 from her husband had not been received this month, that she was practically penniless, and did not know where her next dollar was coming from.

THEY DECLINE TO ENTERTAIN JAPS

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 11.—As a result of the refusal of the officers of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad to haul free of charge the special train bearing the delegation of Japanese business men, who are to tour America next month, it is probable that several large industrial towns along the line of the road in New England will be cut off from the itinerary of the excursionists.

In replying to the request that the railroads furnish free transportation over the line of the excursion the officers intimated that the visit of the Japanese business men would be of no political value to them, as their territory had no trade connection.

FIVE SHOTS FIRED AT A POLICEMAN

Port Arthur, Aug. 11.—Early yesterday, when two city policemen were searching for a man for concealed weapons, five shots were fired on them from another quarter, none effective, and when the man was landed at the station, they found a new automatic 45 calibre Colt.

The striking freight handlers state there will be trouble if strikebreakers are brought in. Chief Andrews, C.P.R. police, Winnipeg, has arrived to take charge of the police work for the company here.

TORONTO MAN STABS BROTHER

Toronto, Aug. 11.—Charles Davidson, 19 years, 235 Niagara street, is held at the Esther street police station under charge of wounding, which may at any moment be changed to one of fraticide.

While he and his elder brother, William, were eating dinner in their home yesterday, a dispute arose over the disappearance of William's razor. Suddenly the younger lad seized a table knife and stabbed his brother in the breast. The incision was made just above the heart.

Dr. Hawkins of King street was summoned and the wounded man was removed to Grace Hospital, where he is reported to be in a serious condition.

Policeman Lawlor was on the scene shortly after the tragedy occurred and immediately placed Charles under arrest and took him to No. 3 police station. He is stricken with remorse and feels his position keenly.

"It was all a mistake," he said.

THE COAL CO. INCREASES OUTPUT

Glace Bay, Aug. 11.—A notable feature of the strike conditions from the Dominion Coal Co.'s point of view is that all local customers, including the steel plant, electric trams, ferries, cement plant, Dominion Tar & Chemical Co, and the wood factories and other industrial plants, have been kept full supplied with coal, and that an amply supply has always been found for domestic purposes. The company have still upwards of 175,000 tons at the banking station.

FARMER KILLED BY AN ENGINE

Welland, Aug. 11.—Benjamin J Patterson, perhaps the most popular farmer in South Pelham, was killed in front of his farm yesterday morning by being run over with a traction engine.

He was taking the machine to the farm of George Chambers, and placed the levers in charge of Walter Tunnacliffe. Mr. Patterson went out in front to oil the gearing, when he was struck on the top of the head by the pin of the piston. In falling he went under the large rear wheel. Death was instantaneous.

LATE NEWS FROM MANY LOCALITIES

Montreal, Aug. 11.—W. E. Jones of The Richmond Guardian, and the oldest editor of the Eastern Townships, is about to retire from journalism. He is over 80 years of age. Before coming to Canada, Mr. Jones was on the staff of The London Chronicle. He has taken a deep interest in the educational institutions of Richmond and is president of the corporation of St. Francis' College.

Parry Sound's New Industry.

Parry Sound, Aug. 11.—The Algoma Wood Alcohol and Chemical Co. will begin at once the erection of a large factory here for the manufacture of wood alcohol and its chemical bye-products, as well as charcoal, and there is every prospect of an iron and steel industry following.

A bylaw to loan the company $30,-000 was carried by a vote of 407 for to 18 against.

Ex-Convict Shoots Juryman.

Middletown, N.Y., Aug. 11.—D. A. Fenton, proprietor of the Elberton Hotel, was shot and fatally wounded on the street yesterday. His assailant, an ex-convict named McSorley of New York, then inflicted a fatal wound in his head. Fenton said he once sat a jury that sent McSorley to prison.

Woman Sent For Trial.

Brockville, Aug. 11.—Before the hearing of Miss Grace Henderson concluded yesterday in the Brockville Police Court another charge was lodged against her, that of falsifying the books of the Gananoque Thousand Island Railway Co. On this, as well as on three charges of theft of over $3,-000, she was committed for trial to the high court. The business of the office of the railway appears to have been run very loosely. Bail was renewed at $6,000.

Homes Burn In Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—Hundreds of persons were driven from their homes early yesterday by a fire that destroyed two rows of frame houses in Superior and Buffalo avenues, South Chicago. More than a score of homes, which were cottages and two-storey buildings of frame construction, were burned.

Wrights Can Fly 1,000 Miles.

New York, Aug. 11.—Orville Wright, the aviator, who sailed from New York yesterday, intimated as much by saying that their perfected machine could carry fuel enough to last 25 hours, which would enable it to travel a thousand miles if a 40 mile clip were maintained.

HANLAN'S POINT MASS OF RUINS

One Young Woman is Burned to Death and Property Valued at $200,000 Destroyed by Disastrous Holocaust Which Breaks Out in Small Theatre.

Toronto, Aug. 11.—Hanlan's Point was fire-swept yesterday afternoon, with the loss of one life and destruction of property amounting to well on to $200,000, probably one-half covered by insurance.

To-day the amusement park, with its scores of attractions, is a desolate waste. With the exception of the island ferry dock and offices, the merry-go-round and a refreshment stand, the maze, and a shooting gallery, the whole area from the docks through to the Hotel Hanlan, and all west to the extreme boundary of the athletic field, not a timber is standing.

Miss Clara Andrews of Cobourg, cashier of the figure 8, was cut off from retreat and fell just outside the ticket office door. She got into the passage leading to the cars, but before she could get over the fence a gush of flame struck her and she fell back.

The conflagration started outside the Gem Theatre and between that building and the figure 8, the very centre of the amusement park. Fanned by a strong northwest wind, the flames speedily licked up the flimsy structures, crowded together, and in less than two hours every building except those about the docks were a mass of black ruin.

The big Amusement Palace and School of Fun opposite the ferry wharf was the last to go. It made the hottest blaze of the afternoon. At that time it looked as if the course of the flames eastward up the main walk towards Centre Island, would not be stopped, and the proprietors of the Lake Shore Hotel, the first substantial structure in the way, were preparing to move out. The Argonaut Rowing Club formed a bucket brigade and soaked Durnan's boat house so that it resisted the heat and flying embers.

MISS CLARA ANDREWS.

James R. Roard, 1 Badgerow avenue, "spieler" for the Gem Theatre (moving pictures), where the fire started, said it was caused by a pail of sulphur catching fire. "We use the sulphur for red lights for the ballet dance in front of the theatre," he said. "The sulphur that burned up had been made about five minutes before. It was in an ordinary fire bucket, and there was about five pounds of it.

"Bert Rippon, who lives on Park road, and operates the moving picture machine, mixed it. The flames caught on to the tent. I yelled and gave warning. The cashier, Miss English, fainted and I carried her out. The theatre is canvas with wood framework. The sulphur was in the dress tent, but it soon spread from there to the theatre and then to the figure eight."

When the Scenic Railway burst into flames all the employes of the nearby buildings started to get furniture away from the path of the conflagration. The fire passed right along to the Old Mill, and soon it was an Inferno on a small scale. From there it passed over to the grand stand surrounding the ball grounds. It soon was a circle of flames. Sparks and large sized cinders were carried by the wind to the roofs of the buildings to the south.

After the ball grand stand caught fire the Pavilion ignited. In a few minutes it was a mass of flames. From there the devouring element passed to the hotel. Efforts were made by many to kill the little fires on the roof, but the water in the jugs in the rooms was the only extinguisher at hand, and it was soon used up. From the hotel it passed to the Human Roulette wheel, and from there to the icehouse. It took about 45 minutes for the hotel to become a mass of red-hot embers. After the icehouse caught the flames traveled to the west end of the Japanese amusement parlors. The whole end was in flames before it passed to the roof. It did not stand long after that. The School of Fun, attached to the other place, and the Big Scream, in front of the amusement parlors, went too.

Hanlan's Point proper, by which is meant the area north of Heber Park and east of the aquatic course, covering about six acres, of which a considerable portion belongs to the ferry company, the remainder being held under a 21 years' lease from the city, at an annual rental of about $400. The portion owned by the company is the southwest corner, including the athletic grounds, this property having been filled in by the company.

Col. Pope Dead.

Boston, Aug. 11.—Col. Albert A. Pope, the pioneer bicycle manufacturer of the United States died late yesterday. He was born in Boston May 20, 1843.

JURY AT BOBCAYGEON HAS BROUGHT IN THEIR VERDICT

Coroner's Jury Comes to Conclusion That Shooting Tragedy Was Wilful Murder and Charges Hotelkeeper Hunter—Mother of Dead Woman Tells How She Found the Pair in Room.

Bobcaygeon, Ont., Aug. 11.—The coroner's jury inquiring into last Saturday's shooting tragedy, yesterday, after 30 minutes consideration, returned a verdict of wilful murder against Joseph Hunter, hotelkeeper, for the murder of his wife.

Milton Hutcheson, hostler at the hotel, said that the shooting occurred just as he had arisen, about 5 a.m., and that Mrs. Rosanna Coulter, Mrs. Hunter's mother, had screamed "that brute of a man has shot my daughter Rose." Witness said, Mrs. Hunter had told him that Hunter "had got something different in his head." "She told me," he said, "that she had gone to Bob Kennedy's store to change some stockings. Kennedy had had some other customers, and she had been detained. When she came back he cut into her."

Hunter was quite calm after the shooting.

John Mitchell, guest of the hotel, had heard the Hunters did not get on well together. He had often remarked that Hunter had a queer demeanor for a hotelman, being very morose.

Mrs. Rosanna Coulter, said her daughter had sent for her to accompany her home, but at Hunter's request, both had stayed. At tea, he had referred sociably to his wife's birthday, on the 25th. She said he was often intoxicated and slept a good deal, neglecting his business. Before retiring, she saw Hunter lying across the foot of the bed with a wet cloth across his head, and Mrs. Hunter looking very unhappy.

After the shooting, she ran in. "The blood was running out of Rose's mouth, and I shook her. She never moved. I screamed at him, 'You've killed my daughter! You've killed your wife! Rose speak to me if you can'"

"He was standing holding the gun, looking at her. Then he leaned over, and, taking her by the shoulder, shook her gently, as if to wake her. He said nothing, only stood looking intently at her, quite himself apparently."

STOCKHOLM STRIKE SAID TO BE WANING

Stockholm, Aug. 11.—Perfect calm prevails throughout the country this morning, and there are further evidences that the general strike inaugurated a week ago will result in failure. The Answer, the organ of the trades unions, is the only newspaper published in regular form. The other journals yesterday issued small hand printed editions.

Efforts are being made with some success to improve the local street car service, and the street car employes have called a meeting to consider a proposal to return to work. The company has given them until noon to-day to take up their old positions.

The merchants of Stockholm have announced their intention of running their delivery wagons, and it is expected that the cab service shortly will be resumed. Foreign steamers are overcoming the dock strike by bringing their own stevedores.

STRIKERS WANTED PRISONER'S RELEASE

Fort William, Aug. 11.—Yesterday afternoon 300 striking freight-handlers marched to the City Hall and demanded the release of a man imprisoned yesterday for carrying concealed weapons. The mayor, after hearing a statement of their grievances, offered his services, together with a man to be appointed by themselves, to endeavor to arrange a meeting with the C.P.R. officials. The men were willing to accept his offer, but still demanded the release of the prisoner, who was subsequently tried and fined $50 for carrying concealed weapons.

JAP MERCHANTS MAY VISIT CANADA

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—The news of the coming visit of Japanese merchants to the United States, a return visit by the way of the visit paid by U. S. merchants to Japan last year, has caught the eye of Sir Richard Cartwright, and he is moving to get the distinguished Japanese merchants to prolong their visit to America, so that they will tour Canada also.

Communications from Boards of Trade throughout Canada have been received at the office of the Minister of Trade and Commerce, urging that the Government co-operate with the merchants to the end that a proper invitation be extended to the Japanese merchants, and that their reception be such that they will be given every chance to see Canada industrially and socially.

In well-informed circles it is said that Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King is particularly anxious that the Japanese merchants should see Canada at her best.

THE TAXING OF TRAVELERS

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—The old question of the right of a British country to tax commercial travelers, which has been often fought out here in Canada as between province and province, and city or town, crops up in a new form in New Zealand.

It appears, according to a report by Commissioner Larke to the Trade and Commerce Department that the Government of New Zealand is compelling Canadian travelers and commission agents to pay income tax upon the amounts of their sales to merchants in the new dominion. The matter will be brought before the congress of Chambers of Commerce of the Empire which is to meet in Sydney next month, with the view of securing some united action which will discriminate in favor of British traders.

AERODROME ALL READY

Baddeck No. 1 Given Three Trial Runs at Petawawa—Hopeful of Success.

Petawawa Military Camp, Aug. 11.—Baddeck No. 1 aerodrome looks good to-day. At 7.30 last night she was taken out of her shed and given three trial runs of a quarter of a mile each across the country. No ascent was attempted, though, the aviators preferring to wait until to-day before making any flights. Only a few newspapermen besides the assistants were present. After a weary wait of nine days the patience of the newspapermen were rewarded at 7.10 o'clock last evening when Mr. Baldwin announced that Baddeck No. 1 would be taken out and given a few trials across the country. Shortly after 7.25 o'clock Mr. Baldwin mounted the seat and Mr. McCurdy started the propeller. The drome started off down the road beautifully, and within a couple of hundred yards had attained a speed of about fifteen miles per hour. The aviator then tested the feet of the engine, and after a successful stop another start was made. A couple of hundred yards more were covered, and then the machine was turned around. Mr. McCurdy this time took the seat, and Bill Macdonald, the mechanic, started her up. On the return a higher speed was made, and the drome and engine responded in a fine manner to every effort at control. Mr. Baldwin then suggested to Mr. McCurdy that a run across the country be made. Mr. McCurdy acquiesced, and the drome was headed across the plain, taking the bumps without any difficulty. About twenty miles an hour was the speed made on the last run. The drome was then returned to her shed for the night.

WHEAT CROP 112,000,000

Minneapolis, Minn., Aug. 11.—Two prominent elevator men, F. O. Fowler and W. H. McWilliams, yesterday wired The Northwestern Miller an estimate of the wheat crop of the three provinces of western Canada, placing it at 112 and 110 million bushels respectively.

The indicated crop of 235 million bushels of wheat for Minnesota and North and South Dakota, is considered conservative here in grain circles. The milling quality is superior.

Cutting is quite general south and southwest of Minneapolis, with a little threshing this week in southern Minnesota. Rain only can harm the crop now.

SECOND-HAND PIPE FOR CANADA

Pittsburg, Aug. 11.—Because of the pipe mills of the country being so rushed with orders to accept new business for immediate delivery, the Union Petroleum Co. of Buffalo has purchased eighty miles from the National Supply Co. of Pittsburg. This pipe was made about 20 years ago and was laid in the Fort Wayne field of Indiana about 18 years ago. The pipe, however, is in prime condition. It will be laid from the Chatham gas field in Ontario to Sarnia, Ont. Only two companies bid on the order.

SINGLE TAXERS MAKE PETITION

The following petition has been forwarded to the Review by the S. T. Association of Ontario, which intends to petition the Legislature at the next session:—

"To the Honorable the Premier and the Legislative Assemble of the Province of Ontario:—

"The petition of the undersigned municipal voters of the Province of Ontario showeth that:

Whereas buildings, and other improvements, are the products of individual industry, and are acknowledged by all to be beneficial to the community, and taxing them discourages their production and is thus detrimental to the interests of the community.

And whereas land value is not the result of individual effort, but is caused by the presence of the community as a whole, and taxing this value discourages holding land out of use for speculation, and encourages putting it to productive uses, thus conducing to the prosperity of the community.

Therefore your petitioners pray that your honorable body will amend the Assessment Act so that municipalities may tax improvement values at a lower rate than land values; business assessments, incomes and salaries to be classed with improvement values, and the difference in the rates to be determined by the municipality."

STOCK—GAMBLING REPORTS

It is greatly to be regretted that exaggerated reports of western prospects are sent out from time to time by speculators and stock exchange men. The Toronto Star says that the outlook this year is not for more than an average yield if that and now comes Patten, of Chicago, "bearing" down the price of wheat when it is beginning to come in. A great number of eastern Canadians have put money into "land" in the west and they also like to see alluring pictures of pleasing prospects. In the course of time our people will find that the best all-round province in the Dominion is the Province of Ontario and then will insist on their contributions to the national exchequer being spent on the development of this blest land and not all for the benefit of foreigners in the west and land-speculators and stock-gamblers from the ends of the earth. If it is wise to spend Dominion funds and to pledge the national credit for Hudson Bay railways and wildcat schemes, why is it not wise for the very same reasons for the Ontario Government to spend our provincial money for the same purpose? Yet if this happened, too, we in Ontario would be utterly ruined.

Of course it is upon the farmer that the burden ultimately falls. If he is able to stand it and thrive the rest of the community being depdent upon him as the food supplier will be able to stand it. But when he is robbed in Ontario to enable a boasting Government to triumph through and by means of his hard-earned dollars and the depreciation of his lands, it is time for the whole province to insist upon a change of policy. Let us enter our attention on as good a province as any of them for the home-grown, the native son, or the immigrant viz., the Province of Ontario.

THE END OF THE BRITISH PREFERENCE

It is generally conceded that the new American tariff line is farther from reciprocity than before, but not much more so. Canadian agriculture is treated cavalierly and except where decidedly advantageous to the U. S. no abatement has anywhere been made. The whole tenor of the bill is strictly protective, occasion being taken even by those in favor of certain reductions, to announce to the world that all Americans are as one man in favor of protection. Thus has the advice of the Toronto Globe gone for naught.

The maxium duty rate, however, is a matter for consideration. This duty is a penalty rate of 25 per cent. to be added by the president whenever it appears that any country is discriminating against the United States. This is the American reply to preferential tariffs. A surtax of twenty-five per cent is to be added to the duty on Canadian products or productions that in any way come within the scope of our present preferential treatment of Great Britain. That this will have a serious trade effect is undoubted, but it will, we hope, in the end show Liberal statesmen that Canadian Cobdenism is nothing more or less than nonsense. The sooner we realize in Canada that United States, Germany and France are not a parcel of idiots intently bent on self, as well as national destruction, the better it will be for Canada, which at the present moment is in the hands of the spoilers. The two outstanding items of Canadian policy seem to have been preference and indiscriminate immigration. The United States has put an end to the one and an enraged people has put an end to the other. Extravagance will end the balance if some effort is not made to bring matters within the domain of reason.

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is freely stated that a number of the stories of catching fish should be discounted by 100 per cent!

"I observe that the Prime Minister takes a different view. He told you in the city a few days ago that Tariff Reform—the imposition of duties—was a cause which was in no sense gaining in the country." (Laughter).—Mr. Balfour, in reply to Mr. Asquith.

Liberal papers boast about the Ross rifle in connection with the Bisley team's doings. In this they draw attention to more than the scores of the riflemen. The council of the National Rifle Association accepted the declaration made to it, but has now made a rule against Ross rifle sights and special contrivances for the future. Sir Frederick Borden did us an ill turn when he pledged his knightly word that the Ross rifle was our ordinary science rifle.

Some returned members of the Bisley team are reported to be saying harsh things about the Canadian papers which raised the question as to whether the rifles given to the team for use came within the regulations of the National Rifle Association. As the National Rifle Association has changed its rules so that it will not again have to accept as regular rifles issued to competitors on the eve of a meeting unless they bear the regular army marks, the action of the papers which raised the question has had its vindication. There were things about this year's Bisley meeting which Canadians should be glad to forget.—The Montreal Gazette.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Dr. S. A. Buchanan, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria in the case of my own baby and find it pleasant to take, and have obtained excellent results from its use."

Dr. J. E. Simpson, of Chicago, Ill., says: "I have used your Castoria in cases of colic in children and have found it the best medicine of its kind on the market."

Dr. R. E. Eskildson, of Omaha, Neb., says: "I find your Castoria to be a standard family remedy. It is the best thing for infants and children I have ever known and I recommend it."

Dr. L. R. Robinson, of Kansas City, Mo., says: "Your Castoria certainly has merit. Is not its age, its continued use by mothers through all these years, and the many attempts to imitate it, sufficient recommendation? What can a physician add? Leave it to the mothers."

Dr. Albert J. Weston, of Cleveland, O., says: "I have used your Castoria in my practice for the past eighteen years with the utmost success."

Dr. Edwin F. Pardee, of New York City, says: "For several years I have recommended your Castoria and shall always continue to do so, as it has invariably produced beneficial results."

Dr. N. B. Sizer, of Brooklyn, N. Y., says: "I object to what are called patent medicines, where maker alone knows what ingredients are put in them, but I know the formula of your Castoria and advise its use."

—THE— Masquerader

By KATHERINE CECIL THURSTON,
Author of "The Circle," Etc.

Copyright, 1905, 1906, by Harper & Brothers

"Eve," he said in a low voice and with some hesitation, "I want you to know that in all this—from the moment I saw him—from the moment I understood—I have had you in my thoughts—you and no one else."

She raised her eyes to his face.

"Do you realize"— he began afresh. "Do you know what this—this thing means?"

Still she remained silent.

"It means that after tonight there will be no such person in London as John Loder. Tomorrow the man who was known by that name will be found in his rooms; his body will be removed, and at the post mortem examination it will be stated that he died of an overdose of morphia. His charwoman will identify him as a solitary man who lived respectably for years and then suddenly went down hill with remarkable speed. It will be quite a common case. Nothing of interest will be found in his rooms. No relation will claim his body. After the usual time he will be given the usual burial of his class. These details are horrible, but there are times when we must look at the horrible side of life, because life is incomplete without it.

"These things I speak of are the things that will meet the casual eye, but in our sight they will have a very different meaning.

"Eve," he said, more vehemently, "a whole chapter in my life has been closed tonight, and my first instinct is to shut the book and throw it away. But I'm thinking of you. Remember, I'm thinking of you. Whatever the trial, whatever the difficulty, no harm shall come to you. You have my word for that.

"I'll return with you now to Grosvenor square. I'll remain there till a reasonable excuse can be given for Chilcote's going abroad. I will avoid Fraide. I will cut politics—whatever the cost. Then at the first reasonable moment I will do what I would do now, tonight, if it were possible. I'll go away, start afresh; do in another country what I have done in this."

There was a long silence; then Eve turned to him. The apathy of a moment before had left her face. "In another country?" she repeated. "In another country?"

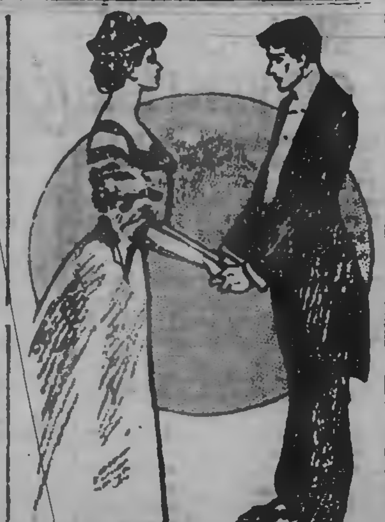
"Yes, a fresh career in a fresh country, something clean to offer you. I'm not too old to do what other men have done."

He paused, and for a moment Eve looked ahead at the gleaming chain of lamps. Then very slowly she brought her glance back again. "No," she said very slowly. "You are not too old. But there are times when age—and things like age—are not the real consideration. It seems to me that your own inclination, your own individual sense of right and wrong, has nothing to do with the present moment. The question is whether you are justified in going away"—she paused, her eyes fixed steadily upon his—"whether you are free to go away and make a new life, whether it is ever justifiable to follow a phantom light when—when there's a lantern waiting to be carried." Her breath caught. She drew away from him, frightened and elated by her own words.

Loder turned to her sharply. "Eve!" he exclaimed; then his tone changed. "You don't know what you're saying," he added quickly. "You don't understand what you're saying."

Eve leaned forward again. "Yes," she said slowly. "I do understand." Her voice was controlled, her manner convinced. She was no longer the girl conquered by strength greater than her own. She was the woman strenuously demanding her right to individual happiness.

"I understand it all," she repeated. "I understand every point. It was not chance that made you change your identity, that made you care for me, that brought about—his death. I don't believe it was chance. I believe it was something much higher. You are not meant to go away."



"My consent or refusal lies with—my wife."

As Loder watched her the remembrance of his first days as Chilcote rose again, the remembrance of how he had been dimly filled with the belief that below her self possession lay a strength—a depth—uncommon in woman. As he studied her now the instinctive belief flamed into conviction. "Eve!" he said involuntarily.

With a quick gesture she raised her head. "No!" she exclaimed. "No; don't say anything. You are going to see things as I see them—you must do so—you have no choice. No real man ever casts away the substance for the shadow." Her eyes shone—the color, the glow, the vitality, rushed back into her face.

"John," she said softly, "I love you, and I need you, but there is something with a greater claim—a greater need than mine. Don't you know what it is?"

He said nothing. He made no gesture.

"It is the party—the country. You may put love aside, but duty is different. You have pledged yourself. You are not meant to draw back."

Loder's lips parted.

"Don't," she said again. "Don't say anything. I know all that is in your mind. But when we sift things right through it isn't my love—or our happiness—that's really in the balance. It is your future." Her voice thrilled. "You are going to be a great man, and a great man is the property of his country. He has no right to individual action."

Again Loder made an effort to speak, but again she checked him.

"Wait!" she exclaimed. "Wait! You believe you have acted wrongly, and you are desperately afraid of acting wrongly again. But is it really truer, more loyal for us to work out a long probation in grooves that are already overfilled than to marry quietly abroad and fill the places that have need of us? That is the question I want you to answer. Is it really truer and nobler? Oh, I see the doubt that is in your mind! You think it finer to go away and make a new life than to live the life that is waiting you—because one is independent and the other means the use of another man's name and another man's money—that is the thought in your mind. But what is it that prompts that thought?" Again her voice caught, but her eyes did not falter. "I will tell you. It is not self sacrifice, but pride." She said the word fearlessly.

A flush crossed Loder's face. "A man requires pride," he said in a low voice.

"Yes, at the right time. But is this the right time? Is it ever right to throw away the substance for the shadow? You say that I don't understand—don't realize. I realize more tonight than I have realized in all my life. I know that you have an opportunity that can never come again and that it's terribly possible to let it slip"—

She paused. Loder, his hands resting on the closed doors of the cab, sat very silent, with averted eyes and bent head.

"Only tonight," she went on, "you told me that everything was crying to you to take the easy, pleasant way. Then it was strong to turn aside, but now it is not strong. It is far nobler to fill an empty niche than to carve one for yourself. John"—she suddenly leaned forward, laying her hands over his—"Mr. Fraide told me tonight that in his new ministry my—my husband was to be undersecretary for foreign affairs."

The words fell softly, so softly that to ears less comprehending than Loder's their significance might have been lost, as his rigid attitude and unresponsive manner might have conveyed lack of understanding to any eyes less observant than Eve's.

For a long space there was no word spoken. At last, with a very gentle pressure, her fingers tightened over his hands.

"John," she began gently, but the word died away. She drew back into her seat as the cab stopped before Chilcote's house.

Simultaneously as they descended the hall door was opened and a flood of warm light poured out reassuringly into the darkness.

"I thought it was your cab, sir," Crapham exclaimed deferentially as they passed into the hall. "Mr. Fraide has been waiting to see you this half hour. I showed him into the study." He closed the door softly and retired.

Then in the warm light, amid the gravely dignified surroundings that had marked his first entry into this hazardous second existence, Eve turned to Loder for the verdict upon which the future hung.

As she turned his face was still hidden from her, and his attitude betrayed nothing.

"John," she said slowly, "you know why he is here. You know that he has come to personally offer you this place, to personally receive your refusal—or consent."

She ceased to speak, there was a moment of suspense, then Loder turned. His face was still pale and grave with the gravity of a man who has but recently been close to death, but beneath the gravity was another look, the old expression of strength and self reliance, tempered, raised and dignified by a new humility.

Moving forward, he held out his hands.

"My consent or refusal," he said very quietly, "lies with—my wife."

THE END.

HOLDS ICE CREAM TO BE A FOOD

"Ice cream is a food," said Magistrate Denison this morning in the Police Court, when that questionable delicacy was once more the cause of a case wherein a man was charged with a breach of the Lord's Day Act in selling it on Sunday. The charge was laid against George Kapalakos, a Greek storekeeper.

"I don't see why people cannot eat on Sunday as well as on any other day," added his Worship.

Mr. L. V. McBrady, who appeared for Kapalakos, wished to have an adjournment pending an appeal which is to come before the courts in September, following a conviction in a similar case by Magistrate Kingsford, who decided that ice cream was not a food.

"There is little to be gained by our going to all the expense of an appeal when the appeal which is to come before the courts in the other case will save the same purpose."

"I think you are right," said the Magistrate, "and will adjourn this and all other similar cases until October 1st, when they will come up."

George Kirkendale, a farm hand, was killed while walking on the G.T.R. near Hamilton.

James Allen, of Guelph, a [illegible] lost a foot by being knocked off his bicycle by a railway engine.

BARNS AND LIVE STOCK DESTROYED

Fire at the Farm of Mr. Fred McIntyre, Otonabee—Spontaneous Combustion the Supposed Cause—Loss Placed at $2,500 to $3,000.

A serious fire broke out yesterday at the farm of Mr. Fred McIntyre, Otonabee, resulting in a heavy loss. Mr. McIntyre's barns were burned with their contents, which included ten tons of hay, twenty-five loads of barley and wheat, and about forty bushels of alsike.

The origin of the fire is not known, but it is thought to have originated from spontaneous combustion in some alsike which was threshed last week and thrown out in the barnyard. Six calves and a bull were destroyed in the blaze. Some implements and harness were also lost. Some peas were burned as well.

At the time of the fire Mr. McIntyre was away from home, and his wife and a child were alone in the house.

The neighbors rendered the best assistance they could, but had no facilities for fighting the flames. Considerable difficulty was experienced saving of the barns of Mr. Wm. Ray, who lives across the road.

The loss is estimated at between $2,500 and $3,000. The amount of the insurance coul dnot be learned.

TENDERS ASKED FOR THE NEW SMITH STREET BRIDGE

Must Be In by August 30th—Work Will be Rushed—Board of Works Held Meeting.

The Board of Works is advertising for tenders for the new Smith street bridge. They must be in by August 30, and it is understood that the work will be proceeded with at once.

The Board held a meeting yesterday afternoon and arrived at the above decision. There were present Ald. Phelan, chairman; Ald. McIntyre, Turner, Buller and Gillespie. City Engineer Hay was also in attendance.

When the question of advertising for tenders for the Smith street bridge came up, the point arose as to whether or not the city should supply the cement. The city has a contract with the Lakefield Cement Co. to supply all the cement required for 1909 at $1.25 per barrel.

Ald Buller said the contractors should secure their cement wherever they wanted to. He knew they could purchase it now for $1.10 per barrel. For the city to sell it to them at $1.25 would be merely putting additional expense on the bridge.

Ald Gillespie suggested that tenders could be asked for in two ways, the city supplying the cement in one case, and the contractor furnishing everything in the other.

Ald. Buller said that would likely work all right, and a motion to that effect was made by Ald. Gillespie and Ald. Buller.

After some further discussion it was decided that it would be best to have the contractor supply everything.

The Gillespie-Buller motion was withdrawn, and Ald. McIntyre moved, seconded by Ald. Turner, that the contractor furnish everything, the cement to be of standard quality. This motion was carried.

In order to guard the city's interests, it was decided to have the cement tested, the chairman of the Board of Works and the City Engineer to look after this work.

A letter was received from W. G. Lendrum complaining about the condition of the street at the corner of Stewart and Wolfe streets. The City Engineer was instructed to look into the matter.

Arthur Rogers asked for an approach at 380 Queen street. Ald. Buller said too many of these approaches were dangerous along the street, and it was decided to leave the request over for the present.

Ald. Buller moved that the stand pipe on the north side of Sherbrooke and east of George street be moved further east on Sherbrooke street. Ald. McIntyre seconded it and it carried. The water commissioners will be notified to move it 20 efet east.

NEW SEWER.

Rev Father McColl put in an application for a sewer between Rubidge and Reid streets. This is part of the convent and Mrs. Aaron Cox of the convent and Mrs. Aaron Cox's property.

Mrs. Cox refused to sign the petition, and Father McColl agreed to pay Mrs. Cox's frontage assessment on that sewer.

Ald Buller and McIntyre moved that the sewer on Scott street between Rubidge and Reid streets be built.

A NEW WALK.

Ald. McIntyre and Turner moved that the walk on the south side of Charlotte street, from Maitland avenue to Park street, be built.

The chairman stated that it would be impossible to get to that street for a while yet as they had the plant in another part of the city and there were other walks which needed to be built first.

The chairman said it would be built if at all possible, and Ald. McIntyre was satisfied to leave the matter this way.

DR. O'BRIEN IN ATTENDANCE AT BIG T.A.S. CONVENTION

Rev. Father M. O'Brien, who has been attending the annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America, held this year in Chicago, is expected home to-morrow. The convention meetings were held in the spacious Auditorium and an immense throng of delegates was in attendance. The splendid street parade through Chicago's most crowded thoroughfares spoke well for the cause of temperance and was favorably reviewed by the interested thousands of spectators.

WHEELS OF CAR PASSED OVER THE ARM OF C.P.R. BRAKEMAN

Special to the Review.

Havelock, Aug. 10.—Mr. Jas. Craighead, a C.P.R. brakeman, while assisting in the shunting of his train at O. O. Junction to-night, was severely injured and it may necessitate the amputation of his left arm.

The accident occurred about 8.30, while a freight train with conductor Jones of Havelock, was doing some shifting of cars at C. O. Junction. The unfortunate victim of the accident was standing on the end of a string of cars in motion and a sudden slackening of the speed hurled him to the track below and the wheels of the first truck passed over his left arm.

His head was badly hurt and he was otherwise bruised and cut also.

When the nature of his injuries were ascertained the engine was at once coupled to the van and returned to Havelock when medical aid was secured.

His injuries will not likely prove fatal, but it is most likely he will lose his arm.

Mr. Craighead, who resides at Old Havelock, has been employed on the C.P.R. for about five years.

PRUDENTIAL CO. HAD BIG OUTING CIVIC HOLIDAY

The Prudential Insurance Co. enjoyed their first annual outing for civic holiday, Monday, August 9, at Chemong Park, where they indulged in games of all sorts, and races.

The principal feature of the afternoon was the ladies' wheelbarrow race, there being three ladies to go to the finals, namely, Mrs. J. I. Allen, Mrs. Camfield and Mrs. Freeman, but finally Mrs. J. I. Allen succeeded in landing first prize, and was the proud recipient of a silk parasol. Mrs. J. C. Wood carried off the honors for throwing a baseball the greatest distance, receiving a beautiful belt buckle. Miss Daisy Robinson showed considerable class in the 50 yard dash for ladies, and was rewarded with a fountain pen.

The broad jump fell to the agile Michael Sharp, of Homewood Avenue, and along with it a beautiful umbrella, which Mick assured us was just what he needed, as it was considerably larger than the average. Mr. Wagner, of New York City, carried off the running broad jump and is now sporting a gold-headed cane, while the hundred yard dash went to Mr. A. R. Graham, who came down the home stretch at a regular a-la-Longboat gait, and won in the remarkably fast time of 15 seconds; as a result Mr. Graham now owns a fountain pen.

After a rest of half an hour, Supt. Allen, and Assistant Superintendent Cornelius marched on the field with their notable nines and indulged in a game of baseball, which ended 12 to 8 in favor of Supt. Allen's forces.

Those who were present were as follows;—Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Bell, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Freeman, Mr. and Mrs. A. L. Talbot, Mr. and Mrs. McNeilly, Mr. and Mrs Lewis, Mrs. Fraelic, Miss Daisy Robinson, Mr. M. Sharp, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. Wagner, New York City; Miss M. Turner, of Stayner, Ont; Mr. R. J. Graham and Miss Maude Graham, of Havelock, and Agent E. O. Freeman and wife, Agent H. J. Barkey and wife, Agent R. F. Sedgwick and wife, Agent J. C. Wood and wife, Agent H. Kingscote and wife, Asst. Supt. Cornelius and wife, of Lindsay; Asst. Superintendent Leadbetter, of Peterborough, staff and family, Asst. Supt. A. R. Graham and Supt. J. I. Allen.

The outing, under the management of Supt. Allen, proved a most decided success, in fact every person present said it was the most enjoyable day of the season for them.

ACTIVITY STILL REIGNS AROUND CROWE'S LANDING

Special to the Review.

Crowe's Landing, Stoney Lake, Aug. 9.—It continues busy here, despite the fact that the regatta is over. Bellvidere is well filled with guests and each night sees the pavilion a rendezvous for happy youths and maidens, who chase the fleeting hours with flying feet.

Service was held here yesterday by Rev. Gibson, of Thorn Hill. Miss Houston and Mrs. Calendar each sang very acceptable solos, and altogether the service was a most enjoyable one. The congregation was only medium sized.

TEA MEETING AND CONCERT.

On Thursday last the campers in this vicinity availed themselves of the opportunity of attending a country tea meeting at Carmel church, a small white edifice about half a mile from the landing. The good farmers' wives were most untiring and indefatigable in their preparation and a tea of unequalled excellence was enjoyed by about three hundred people. The tea was followed by a concert, at which Dr. Marvin presided. The chairman welcomed the campers and said the programme was almost entirely made up with friends from the lake. The talent represented many Ontario cities as well as those on the other side. A good programme followed and the large audience thoroughly enjoyed the various numbers.

The programme follows;—

Solo—Mr. Jack Roxborough—"My Ain Countree."

Address—Mr. W. L. Craig.

Solo—Mrs. Rapp—"When the Morning Glories Twine Around my Door."

uDet—Misses Puffer and Dorcey—"Sweet Sabbath Eve."

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

SPORTING NEWS

"I LIKE MY RUNNING; BUT, OH, YOU HIGH JUMP!"

To Sporting Editor, Review.

Sir,—Your account of the successful athletic sports of the Victoria Harriers should have given me credit for winning third prize in the three-mile race. I regret that the brutal behavior of some of the spectators at the C. A. S. picnic in the high jump was repeated, otherwise, and if the crowd had been kept in their proper places, I should have won. In the running I was only a novice, but I know a lot about jumping.

Yours, Etc.,

YOUNG GRIFFO GOES TO GAOL

Chicago, Aug. 10.—"Young Griffo," at one time featherweight champion prize fighter of the world who was released from the Bridewell prison Saturday, was arrested again Sunday, and he was sent back to the Bridewell for the thirteenth time. Griffo was arrested on a charge of disorderly conduct, and yesterday he was fined $15 and costs. Being unable to pay his fine, he was sent to the Bridewell prison.

"Whiskey has got the best of you, hasn't it?" Judge Gemmill asked the prisoner.

"Yes," he replied.

BIDS FOR THE BIG BOUT

Are Expected to be Made in Numbers Within the Next Ten Days

New York, Aug. 10.—Bids for the Jeffries-Johnson fight for the heavyweight championship are expected to be made in numbers within the coming ten days. It is a well understood fact by Sam Berger, manager for Jeffries, who is now in the city, and the manager of Jack Johnson that only two States will permit a heavyweight championship mill within their borders—Nevada and California.

Jeffries before his departure abroad last Thursday morning, made it plainly understood that he prefers to fight in the United States.

Hugh McIntosh, however, who pulled off the Johnson-Burns fight in Australia, is awaiting Jeffries' arrival in Europe, and will doubtless make an alluring proposition to the retired champion to do battle with Johnson in the antipodes.

Sam Berger said to-day that there would be no difficulty over arranging the final conditions with Johnson.

"No unusual demands will be made on Jeffries's part," said Berger. "Jeff wants to fight, and under conditions that Johnson and the public will think are fair."

Berger also said that if he did not hear from Jack Johnson by the end of the week he would go to California. Johnson, according to Berger, has not covered Jeffries' forfeit, which would seem to indicate that he has no idea of meeting the boilermaker in the ring at any time. Johnson declares that it will be time enough to sign articles for a mill for Jeffries after he has defeated Ketchell in California in October. It has been the opinion of many sporting men that the tiresome Jeffries-Johnson wrangle depends wholly upon the result of the negro's battle with the Michigan Lion.

Y.M.C.A. Board of Directors Said Farewell to His Honour Last Evening

In connection with the regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Young Men's Christian Association last evening, the directors met for tea at Hooper's through compliment to His Honor Judge Roger, who will have to sever his connection with the Board on account of his removal to Cobourg. In replying to the many congratulatory remarks by Mr. Shook, the President, and Messrs. Peck, Ackerman, Connal, McFarlane and Conway, His Honor expressed his appreciation of the fellowship he has had in connection with the work of the Y.M.C.A. from its inception in Peterborough, and said that "he had got more out of the Association than he had ever put into it, and that he would continue to be interested in the Association, where he had spent many years of his life."

After supper the Board adjourned to the Y.M.C.A. building to transact their business.

Regrets at being unable to attend were received from several of the directors who are out of the city on business or vacation.

RESIGNS FROM STAFF OF Y.M.C.A.

Mr. Seymour Collings Leaves End of This Month for Springfield Manitoba

Peterborough Y.M.C.A. men will be sorry to learn of the resignation of Mr. Seymour Collings from the staff of that organization. For the past ten months Mr. Collings has held the position of physical director to the local branch, and has filled it most acceptably. Mr. Collings wishes to take a course in the Springfield Training School, however, and as such is the case, it has become necessary for him to give up his duties in this city. His departure will be greatly felt in all lines of sport in this vicinity, and especially so in baseball and football in which he has been a tower of strength.

ENGLISHMAN IN POLICE COURT PROVIDES GREAT AMUSEMENT

Has a Great Weakness for Hats and Roosters, Buys a Merry Widow and Parades the Streets.

There was a high old time in police court this morning. Three cases were on deck, and each of them was of an amusing nature.

In the first case an Englishman by the name of Wm. Northcoute was accused of stealing a bicycle from Thos. Segrue. Willie blew into this city some six months ago, and has since been a source of some little trouble and anxiety to both the police officers and the immigration agents. He has two weaknesses to combat with, one is a lasting friendship for the fluid that burns, and the other is a weakness for wearing apparel in the shape of leggings and hats. When he first hit the pike William had a little spare cash on hand, and in order to get rid of it, bought a seven dollar Merry Widow from a George street milliner, and tucking a bright green motor veil around it, paraded daintily down the front street with the hat over one ear. When brought to book and chided for his unmanly action, Willie promised to reform, but on being turned loose to pasture again he strayed from the fold and ten minutes afterwards was seen doing a Marathon down Water street, with one of Bob Gibb's tall silk hats on the back of his head. Next to chapeaux Willie likes fowl better than anything. The other day he was wandering past Mr George Graham's hen coop, when all of a sudden he took a great liking to a large rooster therein, and, tucking it under his arm, made for Ashburnham. A passer-by who noticed the affair, rang up the police station, and told them of the matter, thus it might be said, giving them what is commonly called a "fowl tip" After some trouble Willie was captured and the rooster returned to its owner, and a sharp lookout has since been kept on him to prevent him from continuing his performances.

With respect to the charges laid against him to-day, Magistrate Dumble remanded him for eight days in order that steps might be taken to bring about his deportation.

In the second case a local Jewish junk dealer charged a fellow countryman with having stolen a bag of bones. Inasmuch as the bag was only worth a quarter, the Magistrate decided not to try the case, and the accuser and the accused departed, each vowing to do business no longer with the other.

In the third case nine young men were up, charged with disorderly conduct on the night of July 18th. The Magistrate, after taking the evidence, fined each of the young men $2, and they departed with another week's wages gone for nothing.

MUSIC FOR THE MASQUERADE

Part of the Grand Opera House Orchestra has been engaged to supply music for the masquerade dance to be held at the pavilion at Juniper Island on Monday under the auspices of the Cottagers' Association.

Much interest is being taken in the dance, which promises to be one of the most delightful functions at Stony Lake this season.

BURLEIGH FALLS POWER QUESTION

It is likely that a meeting of the City Council will be held at an early date to go fully into the Burleigh Falls power question and decide what action the city is going to take. The option will expire in a few days and something has to be done at once.

GOVERNMENT TO PREVENT GIRLS DOING LATE WORK

Stringent Provisions of the Factories Act—Abuse Does Not Exist to Any Extent in Peterborough.

Toronto, Aug. 10.—A decided step to check the constant employment of girls in shops to a late hour every night may shortly be expected to be taken by the Ontario Government. The attention of Mr. J. I. Burke, chief inspector of shops and factories, under the new Factories Act, was called this morning to a report of a recent deputation from the employers' association, which waited on the Government asking that the rigor of the law be relaxed.

"The cases under consideration affects the whole of Ontario," said Mr. Burke. "The act says plainly that no owner of a shop shall employ a child girl or woman later than 6 o'clock at night except on Saturdays or days before a holiday, when closing hour is fixed at 10 o'clock. Many shopkeepers have been simply running wild and totally disregarding the law. We have been and are still busy collecting statistics, and when the proper time comes will make representations to the minister with a view to stopping the abuses which have arisen. In the case of factories, we are empowered to grant a permit which will allow the factory to run till 9 o'clock for 36 nights in the year, but the law does not give us this discretion with regard to shops.

"It is a difficult matter to regulate. We do not wish to see injustice done, but we want the law enforced.

"If the law is rigidly enforced it will affect village stores as well as city ones, and Mr. Burke pointed out that during the farmer's busiest season most of his shopping is done at night. The department has been repeatedly petitioned by employers, while the labor interests are just as anxious that the law should be carefully enforced."

Inquiry in Peterborough goes to show that there is very little late employment of girls here, the stores closing at 6 p.m. week days and at 9 or 10 p.m. Saturdays. Some places, such as ice cream parlors, employ girls until a late hour every night, but they are comparatively few.

BELLEVILLE HAS HOPES OF SECURING LOCK FACTORY

Would Employ 300 to 400 Hands—Peterborough Spoken of as Prospective Location.

The Belleville Intelligencer says:—We are informed on reliable authority that there is a strong probability of a branch of an up-to-date American lock factory coming to Canada. It will be a large concern and will employ 300 or 400 hands. The difficulty in the way at the present time, as for some time past, is the tariff. If the tariff can be adjusted so as to protect where it ought to protect, and left it as free where there is no need to protection, the factory will come sure. Belleville, Peterborough, L'Orignal and Toronto are spoken of as the likely points of choice. The parties concerned say they do not want any bonus, merely a favorable tariff. No doubt the City Council and the Board of Trade will get busy and see that Belleville's advantages are not lost sight of. A factory or two like that would help a lot.

57TH BAND FOR THE REGATTA

The 57th band will go to Chemong to-morrow for the regatta. The band will render a programme in the afternoon and will play for the dance in the evening.

A full rehearsal is called for this evening.

DOG KILLED BY AN AUTOMOBILE

A black dog belonging to Mr. R. McGregor, Water street, was run over by an automobile at the corner of George and McDonnel streets last evening about 6 o'clock and had its back broken. It died a short time after the accident.

TWO SOUVENIR BAND NUMBERS

Presented by Bandmaster Peel of 19th of St. Catharines to 57th

As a souvenier of the visit here of the crack 19th regimental band of St. Catharines, Bandmaster Peel has sent Mr Gliddon two very fine classical numbers to be added to the 57th's library. They are the overture to "Masaniello," by Auber, and the fantasy "De La Russie," by Edwin Harris. Both selections were beautifully played by the 19th at their concert here in Victoria Park, and were thoroughly appreciated by the members of the 57th.

Mr. Gliddon is very much pleased to have received the numbers, and they will be played by the 57th after the band has had sufficient rehearsal on them.

NOW PHYSICAL DIRECTOR AT SHERBROOKE

MOORS MAKE FIERCE ATTACK AGAINST SPANISH GARRISON

Penal Settlement of Penon de la Gomera is Assailed Under Cover of Darkness, Moors Dig Trenches and Open Fire on the Town.

Madrid, Aug. 12.—Advices received here from Penon de la Gomera, a Spanish island penal station on the coast of Morocco, say that the Moors are directing a fierce attack against the Spanish garrison there. The fighting began on Tuesday. At midnight the Spanish artillery seemed to have silenced the enemy, but the Moors dug trenches under cover of the darkness, and yesterday morning they reopened with a heavy fire and their bullets are falling in the streets of the town. Some of the projectiles are so large that it is thought the Moors possess light artillery. The civilians of Penon de la Gomera are aiding the soldiers in the defence of the place. There have been no Spanish casualties as yet.

A captive balloon in the Spanish lines at Melilla yesterday discovered two new camps of the Moors, which were promptly shelled by the Spanish artillery. The Moors were driven out, but they carried away their dead and wounded.

It is understood that Mulai Hafid, the Sultan of Morocco, has notified Spain of his readiness to send troops into the Riff region to chastise the Moors and establish peace. Spain, however, replied that this guarantee was not sufficient, and orders have been sent to Gen. Marina, who has nearly 40,000 troops at his command, to proceed against the Moors in the neighborhood of Melilla.

Alhucemas, Morocco, Aug. 12.—The unloading of stores here for the Spanish troops from the cruiser Extremadura has been most difficult, as the Moors have been harassing the men in charge of the work with a raking fire. The stores finally were disembarked, however, under the protection of a fire from the guns of the cruiser, the forts and the artillery on shore.

FINEST POWER SITE SAYS SIR WILLIAM

St. John, N.B., Aug. 12.—Sir William Van Horne was on the witness stand yesterday afternoon in an investigation into the affairs of the Grand Falls Power Co., and declared that he placed the value of the power site there, still undeveloped, at a million dollars, and stated that it was not equalled on the continent.

"We have nothing to compare with it in all America," said Sir William. "It is immense and is in such close proximity with the finest timber lands of the province."

In an interview, Sir William, speaking unofficially, said that notwithstanding the efforts of Letang and St. Andrew's to make themselves the terminal of the C.P.R., St. John must remain the winter port for Canada. He added: "Where the business is, the C.P.R. will go."

DICKIE FAMILY CELEBRATES

Galt, Aug. 12.—Victoria Park yesterday was the scene of a big re-union in celebration of the 70th anniversary of the settlement in this county of the well-known Dickie family, the founder of which, William Dickie, came here from Ayrshire, Scotland, in 1839. The old homestead in Puslinch township is still intact and souvenir pictures of it were distributed among the guests who numbered over 300, all being direct descendants of the Scottish pioneer.

Rev. John Richmond, of Detroit, was chairman. Among the speakers were Mayor Patterson, Rev. Robert Dickie, Montreal; Prof. Samuel Dickie, noted prohibitionist lecturer of Tennessee; John Dickenson, Toronto; Rev. Dr. Thompson, Ayr; Inspector Knowles, Hespeler; Rev. Dr. Dickson, Rev. R. E. Knowles, C. Cummings, and others.

FRUIT GROWERS ARE IN SESSION

St. Catharines, Aug. 12.—Annual picnic of the Lincoln County Farmers' Institute and Women's Institute was held yesterday on the grounds of the Experimental Fruit Farm and Rittenhouse School Vineland, about 3,000 being in attendance.

In Victoria Hall, speeches were delivered by a number of prominent men interested in fruit-growing. The general trend of the speeches was that growers of the district should unite and co-operate into one large organization in sending fruit to the northwest.

FRAUDS GROW BIGGER DAILY

New York, Aug. 12.—With a second charge lodged against him, Donald L. Perach, the young note broker who was arrested, charged with the larceny of copper stocks belonging to F. Augustus Heinze, is still a prisoner. The district attorney's office has ascertained that he was not alone in the transaction.

The case will be placed before the grand jury to-day, and the evidence at hand, it is said, will reveal a systematic scheme, worked not only in this city, but in Philadelphia and Boston, whereby stocks supposed to be tucked safely in the vaults and banks, have in reality been relinquished to individuals who placed them on the market at a profit.

A REQUEST FOR FIVE BILLIONS

Spokane, Washington, Aug. 12.—Delegates to the National Irrigation Congress set about to relieve the arid land situation yesterday when resolutions beginning with a call for "ample funds" and ending with a request for a fund of $5,000,000,000, were introduced.

The resolution asking for a national three per cent. bond issue of $5,000,000,000, was introduced by the secretary of the board of control, Arthur Hecter, of Spokane.

It is proposed to use this fund in five portions as follows: One billion for drainage; one billion for irrigation; one billion for deep water ways; one billion for good roads, and one billion for forest preservation.

Drought May Hurt Tomatoes.

Grimsby, Aug. 12.—Tomato men are becoming alarmed over the continued dry spell that is resulting in the vegetable being touched with the rot that is ever prevalent under such weather conditions as the past few weeks. There has been no rain of any account in the Central Niagara district for over three weeks and all varieties of vegetation is suffering. On the sandy land along the lake this is not quite so noticeable.

Will Begin at Once.

Port Arthur, Aug. 12.—W. L. Brown, president of the American Shipbuilding Co., will be here about August 20 to make arrangements to commence work on the new million dollar industry without delay.

Took Paris Green.

Wiarton, Aug. 12.—In a fit of melancholia, Wm. Labas, who carries on a bakery business, took a dose of paris green.

Revolutionists are scattered from New York to Los Angeles.

Unjustly Indicted.

New York, Aug. 12.—That an injustice was done to Mrs. Helen Spencer, who recently was arrested in Ecuador, and brought here on a charge of having engaged in the "White Slave" traffic for the Panama Canal zone, was admitted in court here yesterday, when the indictment against her was dismissed.

Three Went Down With Capsized Tug.

Rockport, Mass., Aug. 12.—In staggering round Cape Ann before a westerly gale, and loaded to her gunwales with anchors, the naval tug Nokinoot, Capt. Evans, bound from Portsmouth to Boston, capsized off Halibut Point at 5.30 a.m. yesterday, carrying down three members of the crew.

Smothered In Wheat.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 12.—Cecil Sedam, aged 11, while playing around a bin of wheat at the storehouse of Belden & Co., at Perry, fell into the bin, and with Neil Watkins, a companion was carried beneath a rush of wheat. Cecil was smothered to death.

Mother Drowns Self and Babe.

McComb, Ohio, Aug. 12.—The bodies of Mrs. James H. Ritter and her infant daughter clasped tightly in the woman's arms, were found in an abandoned well by the woman's husband who noted their absence yesterday morning.

Cattleman Loses $1,000.

Montreal, Aug. 12.—Isaac Montgomery, a cattle dealer of Irish Creek, Ont., lost his pocket-book yesterday containing $1,000, between the stock yards and the Windsor depot.

Vessel Drifting Ashore.

Beaufort, Va., Aug. 12.—(via wireless).—The Clyde liner Arapahoe, Jacksonville and Charleston for New York, has broken her tail shaft, and at 4.30 was drifting helplessly. A number of passengers are aboard. A strong northeast wind is drifting the vessel towards shore.

FOUR THOUSAND FARM HANDS DEPARTED FROM ST. JOHN, N.B.

First Batch of Eastern Laborers Will Start Work on Monday Morning—Roblin's Estimate for Prairie Provinces is 125,000,000 Bushels.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—About 4,000 men left yesterday for the west from St. John, N.B., with the first harvesters' excursion.

They are scheduled to arrive in Manitoba on Sunday and will be distributed through southern Manitoba, where harvesting is urgent, in time to go to work Monday morning next.

The first excursion from Ontario will leave Toronto a week from today, and others will follow a few days later.

The western grain fields are turning much faster than was expected, with the result that large and urgent demand for helpers is already uppermost. James Hartney, agent for the Manitoba Government in Toronto, is receiving letters daily setting forth the need of laborers. They seldom fail to mention that the crop of wheat is an excellent one and much better than the average.

The farmers of Manitoba will require about 13,000 men from the outside and Saskatchewan about 9,000, to be distributed as follows: G.T.P., 268; C.P.R.: Pleasant Hills Branch, 815; Moose Jaw to Outlook, 473; Yorkton to Shebo, 320; Main Line, 2,082; Arcola Line, 1,610; Wolseley, Reston, 238; Soo Line, 1,988; C.N.R. Regina to Warman and Goose Lake District, 1,160; Main Line, 341; Brandon to Regina, 100.

Premier Roblin of Manitoba estimates that the wheat crop of the three northwestern provinces will aggregate 125,000,000 bushels, barring accidents.

A grain dealer's correspondent wired from Deloraine yesterday as follows:

"Wheat in Souris, Napinka and Deloraine districts better than an average year, crops even, good stand and fair length of straw, heads are little short but unusually well filled. Ten days more without frost will see whole crop safely made. Oats better than for some years. Harvest begun."

DR. AUSTIN FLINT.

DR. AMOS T. BAKER,

White Plains, Aug. 10.—At the hearing as to the sanity of Harry Thaw Drs. Hirsch, Flint and Baker were among the alienists who declared that Thaw is insane and would be a menace if set free. The young prisoner is very much depressed at the turn of affairs at the hearing and has about given up hope of his release.

SHE JUMPED FROM FERRY

An Unknown Woman Commits Suicide at Windsor — Would Not Accept Proffered Aid

Windsor, Aug. 12.—In full view of a hundred passengers on the ferry boat Excelsior, an unknown woman committed suicide at noon yesterday by throwing herself from the upper deck into the river.

The tragedy occurred as the boat neared the Canadian side, and in a place where the current runs very swiftly. Several women who saw the act became hysterical.

The boat was quickly brought to a stop and life preservers gotten ready but the body never reappeared. All that remained on the surface where the woman sat, a pocketbook containing some money was found.

Charles McKay, a Toronto traveler, says the unknown made no attempt to grasp a chair thrown to her, and that she sank almost immediately.

LATE TICKS FROM WIRES

Two Winnipeg men were fined two hundred dollars each for manufacturing butter by a filthy process.

William Stearn, the long-distance swimmer, had to give up an attempt to swim the English Channel because of seasickness.

The New Brunswick Board of Education decided to adopt military and physical training in the public schools and provincial university.

The Grand Trunk Pacific will build a line to Emerson, Man., and from there secure running rights over the Northern Pacific to the Twin Cities.

Lottie Gillson, 12 years old, was drowned Tuesday in Campbell's Mill Pond, Ridgetown. While playing on the bank she slipped into the water.

Mrs. Berry of Winnipeg was drowned while boating with her husband on the Red River, near Selkirk, Man., yesterday. Her husband was rescued in an unconscious condition.

Stanley Norton and David Davale, self-confessed burglars at Winnipeg were sent to the penitentiary for five and two years, respectively. They committed a series of thirteen burglaries during the past month.

The Boston & Maine express, which left Sherbrooke Tuesday night, met with a peculiar mishap at Eustis. When going at a fair speed a loose horse on the road jumped between the tender and the baggage car, with the result that two cars were derailed and the horse instantly killed.

ODDFELLOWSHIP IS FLOURISHING

Ottawa, Aug. 12.—At the first general business meeting of the Grand Lodge, I.O.O.F. yesterday reports were presented by the grand officers Grand Master McBride reported a total membership of 40,437, being a net increase to June 30, 1909, of 1,255 The secretary of the relief association reported that the revenue for the year was $363,824, and the expenditure $246,480. The disbursements or mortuary account were $191,864. The amount transferred to the surplus fund was $124,000. The net assets of the order now stand at $794,102.

The Rebekkahs Assembly, I.O.O.F., yesterday morning installed new officers as follows:

President, Miss Anna Bacon of Blenheim, Ont.; vice-president, Miss Ruby Brady, Ottawa; secretary, Mrs M. A. Pearce, Toronto; treasurer, Mrs. N. Dodson, Chatham; warden, Mrs. C. Edwards, Bracebridge.

HUGE SALMON CATCH IN B. C.

Vancouver, Aug. 12.—All records in the salmon catch on the coast were surpassed yesterday when the Fraser River fishermen and gill netters and purse seiners of Puget Sound were forced to abandon work because they could not dispose of the catch.

There is the enormous total of 2,234,000 sockeyes at the Fraser River, Bellingham, Blaine and Anacortes canneries.

Thousands of the fish are going to waste; the canners are not prepared to handle the total catch, but are speeding machines and men up to the highest notch and running the entire 24 hours without stop.

PRESIDENT MAY CROSS THE LINE

Washington, Aug. 12.—It is not impossible that President Taft may cross the line into Mexico to greet President Diaz of that republic when he visits El Paso in October.

Some time ago there was a tentative agreement that neither President should meet in the centre of the international bridge, each standing in his own territory and shaking hands across the border. It was suggested also that a dinner be held on the bridge, with Mr. Taft sitting at the head of the table on the American side and President Diaz at the head of the table on the Mexican side.

It appears, however, that this plan may not prove feasible, and it has been suggested that other arrangements be made.

UNMANNED VESSEL DRIVES ASHORE AT LINGAN, C.B.

Members of Crew of Canadian Vessel Myrtle Are Supposed to Have Taken to the Boats and to Have Been Drowned.

Sydney, N.S., Aug. 12.—Yesterday afternoon, people near the coast line at Lingan, C.B., had their attention directed to sea by the strange actions of a schooner which could be seen some distance off shore with sails partly set, careened in the blast of the hurricane which prevailed.

Owing to the manner in which she staggered shoreward, now pointing high in the wind and again yawning in the trough of the sea, it was evident that something was wrong on board.

The vessel ploughed her way into the bay and struck on the beach, several hundred yards from the shore. Huge waves continually broke over the ship and a rescue party was got ready, and an attempt to reach the stranded vessel was made, should there be signs of life on board. However, there was no call for assistance, and as the storm continued with unabated violence, throwing up huge seas in which a small boat could not live, those on shore did not put off to the wreck.

Late yesterday it was learned that the vessel's name is the Myrtle. She is apparently a new vessel, and has not been in the water more than a couple of years. The supposition is that the captain, finding his vessel on a lee shore, ordered his men to take to the boats, which were swamped. The vessel lies about a quarter of a mile north of the northern head of Lingan, and although exposed to the full force of the huge waves, it is not breaking up. Practically all the sails of the vessel have been torn to ribbons, and are flying in tattered remnants from the mast.

A Canadian flag is flying at half-mast in the main rigging. One dory in a wrecked condition had been washed ashore. It is evident that the craft is a fishing vessel from one of the Nova Scotia ports, but which one cannot be ascertained. Vessels of this description carry from ten to eighteen men, and it is feared here that the crew of the Myrtle have been added to swell the toll of the sea. However, small hope is held out that the men may have landed at some isolated point along the shore and may later be heard from.

Reference to the Canadian register shows several vessels bearing the name of Myrtle, but which of them is wrecked cannot be determined.

IS VICTIM OF THE VENDETTA

New York, Aug. 12.—Victim of the vendetta, Rafael Gascone, defended by Albert T. Patrick and befriended by Harry K. Thaw, whom he came to know in the Tombs, died yesterday afternoon in a hospital where he had lingered since he was shot on the street Tuesday night by a boy of fifteen.

With his dying breath, Gascone charged young Santaniello Amato, with having shot him "in revenge for my having killed his brother," the ante-mortem statement reads. Gascone signed the accusation with a cross. Within an hour he was dead.

Santaniello was seriously stabbed when Gascone turned and grappled with him after the shooting. He is in a hospital and if he recovers will be maimed for life.

HEADQUARTERS FOR ESPERANTO

Chautauqua, N.Y., Aug. 12.—The Esperanto Congress yesterday decided to move the executive headquarters of the American Esperanto Association from Chicago to Washington, D.C., because of probable meetings of the sixth international congress in that city next August. The new executive committee consists of Dr. Ivy Kellerman, Columbus, Ohio; W. J. Spillman of the United States Department of Agriculture, and James McKindry of Pittsburg.

New England is represented at the conference by 432 delegates.

OPEN VERDICT IN JENKEN CASE

London, Aug. 12.—After hearing the medical testimony in the Jenken case last night the jury brought in an open verdict as follows:

"That the deceased, Martha Jenken, came to her death at her late home, lot 10, con. 7, London Township, on Friday, July 30, 1909.

"The jurors find that death was due to injuries sustained on the head by the deceased.

"How or by what means the said injuries were inflicted the jurors are unable from the evidence to determine."

The additional evidence offered last night threw little light on the woman's death. Charlie Jenken, the young son, was recalled and told of a row between his mother and father some weeks ago, when Mrs. Jenken hit her husband on the head with a wrench, and he threw her down.

The jury was out 25 minutes.

ASQUITH AT BIRMINGHAM

London, Aug. 12.—The Chancellor, Lloyd-George, has arranged the abandonment of the tax on minerals not yet mined in favor of some scheme for mineral royalties.

The Liberals are resolved to carry the struggle into the strongholds of the protectionist party, and it is announced that Premier Asquith will address a monster meeting in Joseph Chamberlain's constituency, Birmingham, Sept. 17.

The Unionists have promptly taken up the challenge and have prevailed on former Premier Balfour to address a similar Unionist demonstration in the same hall a few days later.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Will Share the Cost.

London, Aug. 12.—The Canadian Associated Press learns that the next plenary sitting of the Imperial Defence Conference has not yet been summoned, but it is expected it will be to-day or Monday. On the question of the military defence of the Empire, it is understood that general unanimity has prevailed and that some far-reaching decisions have been arrived at on the naval question, all parties of the Empire represented have expressed their intention to take a fair share of the cost of naval defences.

Mines May Be Flooded.

Springhill, N.S., Aug. 12.—Strike conditions to-day remain unchanged. Formerly when the miners went out on strike, the company received notice, thereby affording an opportunity to get horses and perishable property out of the mines, but this time horses nearly perished. The local Government may have to take charge of the property to prevent the mines from flooding.

Million Dollar Fire.

Middleton, N.Y., Aug. 12.—A loss estimated at $1,000,000 was caused by the fire which swept thirty-six buildings from the main street of the summer resort town of Monticello, N.Y., Tuesday night. The buildings burned included hotels, stores and residences. The fire was got under control yesterday morning after dynamite was used.

Excursionists Injured.

Hamilton, Aug. 12.—An H., G. & B. car filled with Salvation Army excursionists, returning from Grimsby, was allowed by an open switch to collide with another H., G. & B. car standing in the terminal station last evening. Many passengers on both cars were cut and bruised, but none seriously hurt. Among those who required the doctor's attentions were: Miss Eva Godfrey, 118 Peter street; Mrs. Gibbs, 128 Ray street, and Miss Price, the matron of the Rescue Home.

Brockville's Typhoid Scare.

Brockville, Aug. 12.—Notwithstanding that Brockville's water and milk supply has been pronounced pure by Dr. Connell, the Queen's College expert, typhoid fever is epidemic in town, almost every day bringing forth fresh cases. In a letter just received from Dr. Connell he says the milk contains no fever bacilli. He had previously tested the water.

WHAT A LIBERAL JOURNAL SAYS

The St. John Daily Telegraph is out against the annual effort to transfer all the young men of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, and Prince Edward Island to the West to furnish men to harvest the wheat crop. The West is a great country, says the Telegraph, but New Brunswick is better. "We cannot build up New Brunswick by encouraging this annual exodus to the prairies. We have no cause to worry about the harvesting of the wheat crop. Men will be found to do the work. Our own men are needed here, and it is our business, the business of our legislature, our teachers, our boards of trade, and our citizens generally to devise ways and means to counteract the showy attractions of the West and make this Province, industrially and agriculturally, the busiest and the most attractive in the Dominion."

The significant feature of this article is the evidence that it affords of a revival of interest in agriculture in the Maritime Provinces. The Halifax Chronicle says that in Nova Scotia improvement is noted on every hand. "Farmers are taking a greater interest in what to them is a profession. Values are increasing. Farms that could be purchased a few years ago cannot be had to-day for any money. There is less of that unrest that was once noticeable, and more desire to settle down on the old place and improve it."

While the whole Dominion is interested in the harvesting of the Western crops, we must expect that each Province will put its own interests first, and endeavor to retain its own necessary proportion of farm assistants. Everywhere the problem of farm labor is difficult, but the difficulty of the West, as a new country, is most acute. An army of men are required for a very short period, for whom it is difficult to find employment all the year round. The ultimate remedy, so the agricultural experts say, lies in the diversification of farm industries, so that the men who are employed for a few weeks in cutting the grain can find other employment during the remainder of the year. A still better inducement is offered in the West, namely, the opportunity given to the hired man to take out a homestead for himself."—The Toronto Star (Liberal.)

A GREAT SURPRISE

The surtax to be levied against Canadian goods appears to be a great surprise to Canadian Liberals. It may be to them, but it is not to Canadian Conservatives. Tariffs are first and foremost, weapons of defense, and it is as a weapon of this character that the Payne Bill puts on the surtax of 25 per cent. against Canadian goods, so long as we maintain our Preference with Great Britain. It seems that the surprise part of the bill is that Canada is included. It was thought that the colonies of Great Britain were to be excluded. This delusion has proved itself once more. The United States is not doing anything for our benefit that it can help, and we need not think it has any intention of doing so. This hostile action will affect our trade seriously. It will make of our American trade, which is much larger than that with the Mother Country, a poor affair. In fact it will practically stop it. Out of our little "bunch of trade" the loss of our American trade will be an immense sacrifice. Not that it will affect our allegiance, Canadian sentiment does not depend on meat and potatoes nor the favour of our American cousins. But it all shows how absurd are the contrivances of the Liberal tariff-mongers to evade the system of world-wide protection. It begins to look also as if "what fools these mortals be !" was intended for Liberals and the Globe after all, and not for the wicked Tories. We were getting along nicely having laid the foundation of a great and prosperous country by the N.P., when along comes the Preference; then American retaliation, and next—What?

EDITORIAL NOTES

It is refreshing to notice that at last the eastern journals are beginning to wake up to the ruin wrought in Eastern Canada by the too frantic development of the west.

The St. Swithin's day proverb ought to be buried along with a lot of other second-hand superstitions. It has failed completely this year, but of course the cognoscenti do not observe those things.

From the Toronto Star.

A correspondent in another column takes exception to a letter by "Donegal" on the question of British titles misused in Canada. There is no real dispute between our two correspondents, however, as "Donegal" did not argue that Mr. Chamberlain was not entitled to be described as "Right Honorable," but that even though entitled to be so described he was not usually referred to as "Hon. Mr. Chamberlain," but as "Mr. Chamberlain."

Many English dailies and weeklies are received at this office, and we find that "Donegal" is right in saying that the usual practice of these journals is to give to a member of the British Cabinet the plain prefix "Mr."

Here, where titles are less common, the newspapers follow a more generous usage. Members of the Dominion and Provincial Cabinets are nearly always granted the honorary title of "Hon." There is in Canadian newspaper offices an unwritten law that a man who has been a member of a Dominion Cabinet is entitled for life to be accorded the use of this prefix, while the member of a Provincial Cabinet is only entitled to be referred to as "Hon. Mr. ————" while he is a member of the Cabinet.

But, after all, we do not have to adopt British usage. If by varying that usage we can suit our own convenience better, we venture to say from experience and observation that it will be varied to whatever extent proves most convenient.

NOAH WAS BLACKBALLED

Detroit, Mich.—The Society of Naval Architects rejected Noah for honorary membership, when his name was proposed as the father of the ship designing profession. The reason given was "that Noah was a gamekeeper and not a ship designer primarily".

It all depends on the point of view. It is the same with "Fruit-a-tives".

Some people take "Fruit-a-tives" for Constipation and Biliousness. Others use them for Stomach Troubles and Dyspepsia. Still others find "Fruit-a-tives" an excellent tonic and blood purifier. Many more say that "Fruit-a-tives" are the best Kidney Regulator and a certain cure for Neuralgia and Rheumatism. For all these troubles, "Fruit-a-tives" may be said to be infallible.

Everywhere in Canada — in the crowded city—on the lonely prairie—in fishing villages and mining camps—people depend on "Fruit-a-tives" to cure them and keep them well.

THEIR BUNGALOW

By Nixon Waterman.

(From the Saturday Evening Post.)

Just a pair of robins build
Their love-wrought nest without the aid
Of some conceited bird, who dares
To tell them how it shall be made,
So John and Mary proudly planned
Their home, and decreed 'twould be a sin,
Amid their rosy dreams, to let
An architect come butting in.

Alas! it was not wisely planned,
For doors and windows, so they find,
Are out of place; some rooms too large,
And some too small; but never mind!
With pride they show their house to friends,
Who, as they view it, come to know
Why John and Mary will persist
In calling it their "bungle, oh!"

OF INTEREST

Mr. Rockefeller

(Sidney Low, in the Nation)

"Whatever may be urged in defence of the operations of the Standard Oil Company, no one can say that they are worked in the spirit of Christian ethics, or that Mr. John D. Rockefeller himself acted up to the tenets of a creed which bade him take no thought for the morrow, and find his treasure in incorruptible things.

"Like many other successful business men in the United States, he apparently kept his commercial and private morality in watertight compartments, and it puzzles some observers to understand how he managed to perform the operation. In other words, how can a deeply religious man occupy himself during his hours of activity in a manner which is often religious and sometimes anti-religious?

"The truth, perhaps, is that religious and ethical conceptions exercise less influence upon conduct than is commonly attributed to them. Life is not so much a science as an art, a matter of practice, temperament, knowledge and training. Men have excelled in that art, as they have in others, with all religions and with none.

"What is the true value of ethics and religion. Can mann go through life without any synthesis at all? Surely not. Faith is needed not to make a man live better, but to make him feel better. And a theory of the universe is required not to direct his conduct, but to sanctify him in the successes and fortify him in the failures of action.

"It is clear that Mr. Rockefeller's practice of what he calls 'the difficult art of getting' was not determined by his religion. He would have acted much the same as he did and probably with much the same results, if he had not been a devoted member of his church. But he would not have felt nearly so comfortable; he would have lacked that inner glow which makes him a happy man in spite of his wealth, his weariness, his narrowness, his crudity.

"He would not have found consolation in the thought that the world which has made John D. Rockefeller its richest inhabitant is divinely ordered. He would not have been so sure of his own righteousness, or so callous to the sufferings of his victims. He would not have been able to decree the massacre of his enemies in much the same spirit as that which inspired Godfrey of Bouillon, or a sergeant of Cromwell's Ironsides, or Gustavus Adolphus, or any other entirely devout destroyer. Like them, he had faith, which not only casts out fear, but gives its possessor power to sustain all kinds of shocks and buffets, including those of his own conscience.

"The Protestant religion (New England version) did not make Mr. Rockefeller a successful man—it did not make him, in any true sense of the word, a good man—but it seems to have given him that peace which the world cannot bring, and fortified him, not merely against the obloquy of his fellow-men, but also against dissatisfaction with himself. He is calm, contented, kindly, tranquil in mind and soul, at ease in his relation towards the Universe and the general scheme of things. But his success as a man of action does not spring from this source. It is due to his expertness in a difficult art—the art of financial adventure—in which he would probably have failed if he had not kept it sternly apart from his religious ideas and ideals."

Since our last week's news appeared the baseball of the Church League has somewhat changed. The Catholics by defeating the Methodists made all teams a tie. The new arrangement calls for a game each.

On Friday night a very exciting contest was pulled off, the Methodists defeating the Presbyterians in a hot contest, the score being 9—7. The first innings was a tie, 3—3. The 4th put the Presbyterians 3 to the good, making the score 6—3. The Methodists' half, however, turned the tide. They, after a batting rally, secured 6 runs, bringing the score to 9—6 in their favor. In the fifth they held the Presbyterians down to one run, ending the game the total score 9—7, the Methodists being holders of the big end.

On Monday night the Methodists bumped up against the Catholics, a win for the former meaning the championship. The Catholics won the toss, going to bat first, Pickard, who was twirling for the Methodists, being right on edge, fanned the first two and retired the next on a grounder, the Methodists securing three earned runs in their half. The second helped the Catholics to secure 2 runs. The Methodists, however, again came to the front with 2 more, making the score 5—2. The Catholics took the lead in the third with 4 runs, 3 being scored on errors by Rogers at third. The Methodists, not to be beaten, put three runs over the plate, the score now being 8—3 in the Methodists' favor. Again Pickard settled down, fanning three men, the Methodists scoring 4, bringing their total to 12 against 5.

But oh, fireworks. Darkness was settled now, it being too dark for decent playing, the umpire, however, refusing to call the game. The Catholics secured two runs, the catcher not being able to follow the ball, both men missing their third strike. On two hits bases were filled. Tucker unable to judge a fly then throwing almost blindly to home, Hendren not seeing the ball till it was on him, striking his mit and glancing off, being lost in the darkness two feet from the plate, clearing the bases. The score was tied with a man on third and all complaining of darkness, but still the umpire refused to call play. When the runner attempted to steal home he was put out. The umpire immediately calling the game. It seems very unfair to call a game in the middle of an innings and waiting for a runner till he is put out after a team tieing the score. The game is to be played over again on Friday evening.

Previous to the above game while Doherty, the Catholic pitcher, was warming up, Mr. Jim Rogers (Gingu) was the victim of a nasty accident. He was catching off Doherty when he misjudged a short curve, going between his hands, hitting him on the upper lip, causing a cut 3-4 of an inch long on the outside and another inside. Four stitches were required to sew it and it was found to have loosened five teeth. Gingu has been suffering intense pain and will be laid up for two weeks.

During the game Mr. Oral Johnston got a nasty blow from a pitched ball, it taking him on the ankle. The crack was heard all over the field, taking Oral off his feet. He was laid up for a couple of days, but is limping around now. At first it was thought the ankle was broken, but examination showed only a bad bruise.

POLICE COURT NEWS.

Walter Hornsby on Saturday, July 31st, drove to Hastings, where liquor got the best of him. On his return to town he endeavored to lick everybody he met. One young fellow however, got the best of him, causing him to use obscene language. Walter was allowed out on $200 bail and appeared before Reeve Breault and J. L. Squire, local magistrate, in the absence of Mr. Edmison, on Monday.

The evidence of four witnesses proved him guilty, but the magistrate allowed him a very lenient sentence, imposing a fine of $5 and costs, $16.35 in all.

A large number of Peterborough people went to Chemong this afternoon to attend the annual regatta being held there. Many more will go out this evening to attend the dance, which will be held in the pavilion.

Signs Wanted

The attention of the Review has several times been drawn to a state of affairs existing here which should be remedied. At a large number of street corners in the city there are no signs designating the thoroughfares and much inconvenience is caused thereby. At some places the names are out in the pavements, but in the winter they are covered up and cannot be seen. In the number of signs designating the streets Lindsay is said to be far ahead of Peterborough. The matter is one the city council might take up.

DISGRACEFUL AFFAIR AT OVAL NOT TO BE REPEATED IN HURRY

Two Young Men Fined for Raising Disturbance in Connection With Ball Games Last Saturday—"Sport of This City Must be Kept Clean," Says Magistrate Dumble.

There will be no more rowdyism in connection with the ball games in this city. There has been a good deal of wrangling going on among the players in the Senior City League during the last few games, and there is to be no more of it. In fact, the wrangling and disputing reached such proportions that it was finally necessary to bring the matter to Police Court. Last Saturday, when the game between the Park Street and T. A. S. teams was about to be played, a dispute over the umpire arose. Hot words ensued and finally two young men came to blows.

This morning the park constable, who was on the grounds at the time and saw the affair, laid a charge of disorderly conduct against the two young men, and the case was heard before Magistrate Dumble at 11 o'clock. After hearing the evidence, the magistrate gave the accused a heart to heart talk, and so as to impress it a little more forcibly on their minds, fined them each five dollars, to be paid in ten days.

"You might as well understand," said his Honor, "that the sports in connection with this town have to be kept clean and gentlemanly, and the sooner you understand that, the better for you and everyone else."

BROCKVILLE IS BEING FAVORABLY CONSIDERED

In Connection With Annual Outing of 57th Regiment, Which Will be Held on Labor Day—Arrangements Now Being Made.

Arrangements are being made by the officers for the annual outing of the corps, which will be held on Labor Day this year. Where the regiment will go has not been definitely settled, as invitations have been received from several places. It is understood that Brockville is being favorably considered, and that the Island City will be the objective point of the trip if suitable arrangements can be made. An announcement will be made in this connection during the next few days. A trip to Brockville would no doubt please the members of the corps as the town is a very attractive one to visitors, especially in the summer.

The regiment is in good shape and should make a favorable impression on their trip. Labor Day is the 6th of September this year. The regiment will leave Peterborough on Saturday night and will return Monday night.

LARGE NUMBER OF CAMPS DOWN RIVER FOR THE CIVIC HOLIDAY

In talking with Mr. Rye, of the Otonabee boat-house, the Review learned that there were more campers down the river last Sunday and Monday, than there has been for the last five years. In fact at seven o'clock on Saturday night, it was impossible to get a suitable camping spot between Wolfe street wharf and Hale's bridge. Nearly every open spot, which was at all convenient or likely, had been taken and those going down the river late on Saturday night were forced to go three or four miles further on before obtaining a good location.

Another noticeable feature of the river on the holiday, was the great lack of gasoline launches during the day. Generally there is fifteen or twenty of these small motor boats darting about, but as most of them had gone up to the lakes for the regatta, there were very few of them around.

1,200 EXCURSIONISTS IN PETERBOROUGH TO-DAY

Three excursion trains arrived on the G.T.R. to-day two from Orillia and one from Cobourg and Port Hope. The latter excursion was held under the auspices of St. Mark's church and Woodmen of the World, Port Hope, and St. Peter's church, Cobourg. Five hundred came on the trip.

It required two sections of eight cars each to bring the Orillia excursion to Peterborough. The Orillia band, a good musical organization, was on board the first one, and played a lively march from the station to the National Hotel.

Mayor Rush and Ald. Buller, chairman of the Fire, Water and Light Committee, Ald. Hicks and Fire Chief Howard welcomed the visitors at the station.

THE BIGGEST FISH OF THE YEAR AT STONEY LAKE

Mr. L. Herron, of Pittsburg, who is registered at McCracken's Landing, caught the biggest fish yesterday in Stoney Lake that has been taken out of the lakes this year, according to reports. It was a magnificent 'lunge, weighing 23 1-2 pounds.

Mr. Herron had a fierce struggle with the fish before he landed it. It fought like a demon and was killed before it could be brought into the canoe, which was nearly upset by the fish suddenly diving under it when Mr. Herron was endeavoring to land the big fellow.

The fisherman was under a decided handicap in hauling in the fish as he was alone in the canoe at the time he caught it.

DAVIDSON--PRICE NUPTIALS

The marriage took place at Belleville yesterday of Mr. Henry A. Davidson, son of Mr. Hugh Davidson of Aylmer street, Peterborough, to Miss Elsie Muriel Price, daughter of Mr. and Mrs David Price of Belleville. Those in attendance at the wedding from Peterborough were Mrs. Hugh Davidson and Misses Lottie and Aletha Davidson, Messrs. W. S. and Oscar Davidson and Mrs. R. H. Dixon.

The Belleville Intelligencer contains the following account of the happy event:—

At 2 o'clock this afternoon a very pretty home wedding took place at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. David Price, Rear street.

The bride was Miss Elsie Muriel Price, youngest daughter of the city treasurer, and the groom Mr. Henry A. Davidson, druggist, Moosejaw, formerly of Winnipeg.

The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. J. R. Wilson, B.A., of Lindsay, a former pastor of Bridge street church.

The drawing-room where the joyous ceremony took place was tastefully decorated with ferns, potted plants, and asters, presenting a most charming appearance.

At the hour above named the bride, leaning on the arm of her father, entered the drawing-room whilst the wedding music was being brilliantly played upon the piano by Mrs. J. E. Thompson of Winnipeg, a sister of the bride. The groom and attendants were in waiting to receive her.

The bridesmaid was Miss Gertie Price, a sister of the bride, and the groomsman Mr. Walter Davidson, barrister, Peterborough, who is a brother of the groom. Miss Lottie Davidson, sister of the groom, was maid of honor, whilst little Miss Helen Price, Dutton, Ont., a niece of the bride, and Master Edmund Thompson, Winnipeg, were attendants.

The bride looked very sweet and winsome in a lace robe over chiffon silk. She wore the traditional bridal veil and carried a shower bouquet of white roses.

The bridesmaid looked very striking in a gown of white silk mulle and wore a large white picture hat. Her bouquet was of pink roses.

The maid of honor wore a gown of pink silk mulle and a large white picture hat and carried pink roses.

Mrs. Price, mother of the bride, wore a black sequin gown, and Mrs. Davidson, mother of the groom, was attired in a grey silk gown and wore a large black hat.

At the conclusion of the ceremony the young couple received hearty congratulations. Those present were the relatives of the contracting parties and a few intimate friends. The wedding breakfast which followed was daintily recherche.

The groom's present to the bride was a handsome set of mink furs, to the bridesmaid a beautiful gold pendant brooch, and to the groomsman, maid of honor and attendants appropriate gifts.

The bride was the recipient of a large number of beautiful and costly gifts, evidence of the esteem in which she is held by her many friends.

At 5 o'clock Mr. and Mrs. Davidson left for the west, and after a visit to several places of interest will proceed to Moosejaw to take up their residence.

The bride was one of Belleville's best known and most pleasing vocalists, and her host of friends will wish for her a happy and prosperous voyage through life, and in this wish the Intelligencer heartily joins.

WAS LEAVING WITH HIS FRIEND'S ROLL OF BILLS

When the Proprietor Thought a Settlement Would be in Order—Kind Friend Was Going to Take Train Without Handing Over the Money He Had Temporarily in Charge.

There was quite a sensation in a local hotel this morning when the proprietor detained one of the guests who was leaving the house to take the train and demanded that he hand over $30, which he was accused of stealing from a fellow guest who he was with last night.

The two were quite companionable last evening and the man who lost the money was pretty well under the influence of liquor when he retired for the night. His friend was the only one with him during the evening and when he woke up this morning and found his roll missing he at once came to the conclusion that he had been touched by his short acquaintance associate. He then complained to the proprietor.

The man who took the money was well dressed and it was a matter of surprise when the proprietor demanded it back this morning and threatened arrest if it was not forthcoming. He approached the light fingered one in a confidential tone, but the latter resented the accusation and the loud and wordy argument which followed interested the several listeners in the rotunda.

The money was paid back and the proprietor told the party who had it in temporary possession that his patronage was not desired in the future. The latter claimed he simply took the money for safekeeping as his friend was not capable at the time of looking after it himself. It is somewhat of coincidence, however, that the kindly treasurer was about to leave for the train with the cash in his possession.

ENGINEERS SAW SOME OF PETERBOROUGH'S INDUSTRIES

His Worship Mayor Rush, had charge of the visiting engineers while they were in the city yesterday. He escorted them while going the rounds of some of the leading local industries. They were shown through the Quaker Oats mills, J. J. Turner & Sons factory, Peterborough Canoe Co., and the Wm. Hamilton Co. The engineers were much pleased with their visit here and were surprised to find so many important industries in the city.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

SHORTAGE OF GASOLINE IS REPORTED HERE

A shortage of gasoline is reported in the city, and the situation is causing some alarm to the owners of launches. The automobile dealers have very little on hand, and the local branch of the Queen City Oil Company has many orders ahead.

A large amount of gasoline is used in Peterborough during the summer months on account of the large number of launches and automobiles in operation.

A LOOK FACTORY

What is being done to get the American Lock Company to locate here?

It will be remembered that the Review gave, a few days ago, advanced information of the desire of an American company to establish a branch in Canada, without a bonus, and to employ 300 or 400 hands. No city can offer such advantages as ours, and doubtless the Council will take the matter up. It is rumored that a well-known Toronto capitalist, interested in Peterborough, would be glad to see it come here, and is helping to that end. Would it not be well for the city to send a representative?

WHAT CAN BE SAID OF IT?

Premier Sir James Whitney, having failed in the mining business, has now set up as a hotel keeper. A Government official has been placed in charge of the Royal Hotel, Bobcaygeon, whose landlord recently shot his wife.—The Examiner, Wednesday, Aug. 11, 1909.

It is difficult to say why the Examiner made such an ill-judged criticism in its editorial column, of Sir James Whitney as the above unless it is that an overwhelming desire to "get at" the present provincial secretary, Mr. Hanna, furnishes the motive. A frightful tragedy took place. The father is in gaol and the mother in her grave. No one is left to bear the responsibility of the hotel's license, and in order not to heap further misfortune on the bereaved children the Whitney Government, instead of revoking the license and closing up the hotel, put a man in charge temporarily. Does this not show a watchful care of the premises, a close touch with licensees, and, above all, a kindly consideration for the family? For the Examiner to seek to cast a slur upon Sir James Whitney on account of it, is not worthy of the Examiner. It is not worthy of any newspaper. It is not even "peanut politics." We confess we are surprised and do not wonder that the public is indignant. To fight political battles is one thing but to treat so tragic an event and so sympathetic an action in such a heartless way is so unaccountable that rather than reply to the "criticism" we prefer to leave it upon the author's conscience. It is a longtime since such a charge was made before, if indeed it has ever been made, and we hope it will never be made again. We may be sure the people of Bobcaygeon will bear no malice towards the Government for its kind act, nor will the bereaved and stricken family.

It was a time for indulgence, even if that were needed, but surely not for harsh, and, we must believe, unthinking authorship.

NOT A GREAT IMPROVEMENT

Grass in Front of the Armouries Still in Bad Shape — A Piece of Gross Neglect

Here is another proof of the old adage that "there are always two sides to a question." Just after the big celebration on the 24th of May it was decided that it would be nice to have a strip of green award in front of the new Armouries, and in order to bring it about orders were given for grass seed to be sown in copious quantities in that vicinity. Something must have been wrong with the store of grass seed or with the Government supervisors, however, as in a few weeks there grew up a most healthy and abundant crop of weeds. In fact, the crop was so very healthy and abundant that it reminded one more of a buckwheat field than of a public lawn. Visitors in the city gazed upon it with awe.

About ten days ago the crop was harvested and the sheaves brought in. Lo, the next evening, one of the local dailies, deigning to cast a forgiving glance in the direction of the Park, was led to exclaim that "it was much improved." "In a few short weeks," it said, "there will be at this point one of the nicest lawns in the city. A great improvement; certainly a most decided improvement."

And just here is the point of the discussion. Is it as great an improvement as has been declared? When the weeds were cut, a heavy and unyielding growth of stubble was left. This may or may not be the beginning of a good lawn, but if so, it will not be for some generations to come. Perhaps even greater improvement than our contemporary pictured might be brought about by merely running a plow over the landscape, and planting a new lot of fully-guaranteed grass seed.

HORSE FELL AND BROKE SHAFTS

Mr. and Mrs. Lillico had an exciting experience about a quarter to eight o'clock last night while out driving. They were passing the corner of Charlotte and George streets when the horse became frightened at a street car and did some cutting up, which made it lose its footing and caused it to fall. Both shafts were broken and the harness had to be removed before the animal could get up. Except the shafts being broken no damage was done. Mr. and Mrs. Lillico were both uninjured.

BUSINESS "FROSTY" AT THOUSAND ISLES

Utica, N.Y., Aug. 11.—The Thousand Islands is one of the greatest summer resorts on this continent. There are no finer in Europe. A western man who now resides in Utica, saw the St. Lawrence river for the first time in his life a few days ago, on a brief visit. He said to-day that without doubt nature has made it the most superb summer resort in the country. It is at its loveliest now, he said, and the fishing is fine.

But the westerner had a sad tale to tell of the season up there, so far as it has gone. "They tell me there," he said, "it's the poorest from a business point of view, they've had in fifty years. Very few were at the various hotels and cottages."

"At one of the largest hotels," he said, "there were nine persons having dinner besides myself and 50 waiters standing idly about."

All along the "Fifth avenue of the St. Lawrence"—the wide waterway between Clayton and Alexandria Bay—so called because of the magnificent summer palaces built on islands on either side, he counted 30 that were boarded up. On a great number the sign "For sale" was posted up. Cottages that were worth $20,000 and $25,000, with the islands they are built on, are in the market for $4,000 and $6,000. Smaller cottages, with their lots, can be had almost for a song, according to what the westerner was told.

Mrs. Williamson's Many Friends at Fort William Pained to Hear of Her Death

Monday's Fort William Times-Journal says:—

A telegraphic communication received about 2.15 o'clock yesterday morning informed G. H. Williamson, secretary of the Fort William Y.M.C.A., of the sudden death of his wife at one a.m. Sunday morning.

The death occurred at Peterborough, where Mrs. Williamson went about six weeks ago to nurse her mother, Mrs. J. Coyle Brown, who was in poor health for some time past. The message was signed by Mrs. Williamson's father, who is a public school inspector in Peterborough, and had it not asked what arrangements Mr. Williamson would make for the burial it would have left some doubt as to whether it was Mrs. Williamson or then mother. The telegram didn't state the cause of death.

The grief stricken husband left by the Toronto train yesterday for the home of the deceased. Only Saturday he received a letter from his wife, who appeared to be as well as usual, and the news of her demise following soon after that came as an awful shock.

Mrs. Williamson, who with Mr. Williamson, came here some two years ago, from Peterborough, made many friends during her residence in the city, who will mourn her death. The funeral will likely be held at Peterborough.

IT COST THE POKER MEN $50 APIECE

Judgment Given in Case of Four Men Arrested in Raid Last Night—Fines Had to be Paid Forthwith—Chief Wanted Everything Confiscated.

The four poker players who were arrested last night in a raid on a Water street all pleaded guilty to the charges against them through their counsel, Mr. J. Haverson, this afternoon.

"The judgment of the court," said Magistrate Dumble, "is that the defendants, making admission of guilt, be fined $50.00 each, the fines to be paid forthwith."

Previous to the delivering of judgment the Magistrate, Chief Rooze and Mr. Haverson had quite a lengthy discussion. Mr. Haverson thought that two of the younger men should be given a fine of $25.00, but the Magistrate could not see it that way. "If I made any distinction," stated the court, "the public would not see the reason of my doing so and fining one offender a smaller sum than another."

Mr Haverson also thought that a little time should be allowed in the payment of the fines, but it was decided that they should be paid forthwith. At first the defence thought of fighting the case and an enlargement till Wednesday was discussed, but after a conference with his clients, Mr. Haverson stated that they would pay their fines.

A couple of checks of $100.00 each, which were given as bail bonds, were taken to pay the fines on the consent of the signers of them.

The chief wanted the table, the cards and the money taken in the same seizure, confiscated by the court. The Magistrate did not think that under the circumstances the confiscation would be desirable.

WRIT FOR $4,212 ISSUED AGAINST MR. M. L. HOUDREY

Mr. Edward Genno, of Sudbury, the former manager of the roller rink here, has issued through his solicitors, Messrs. O'Connell & Gordon, a writ for $4,212.50 and costs against Maurice Louis Houedry. It appears that the defendant has entered upon the premises the plaintiff had rented as a roller rink and made use of it and the goods and chattels for his own purposes.

The endorsement on the writ is briefly as follows:—

$2,212.25 damages for wrongfully entering upon the lands and premises leased by the plaintiff and for converting to his own use the chattels and effects of the plaintiff.

The plaintiff further claims the sum of $2,000 as damages for breach of covenant by the defendant to repair the roof of the building described in the said lease.

The plaintiff also claimed an injunction restraining the defendant from using or disposing of the plaintiff's goods or chattels.

JEFFRIES-JOHNSON FIGHT IS ARRANGED AT LAST

Chicago, Aug 11.—Articles of agreement for a fight between Jack Johnson and James J. Jeffries for the heavyweight championship of the world were signed here to-day. The fight is to take place within eight months, before the club offering the best inducements. All bids for the fight are to be made within sixty days.

Sam Berger, manager for James J. Jeffries; Geo. Little, Johnson's manager and Jack Johnson were present at the meeting when the articles were signed. Little, however, had nothing to do with the arrangement of terms for the fight, having turned the whole affair over to Johnson. The articles prepared by Jeffries were given to Johnson by Berger. After carefully perusing the paper Johnson handed them back to Berger, remarking as he did so that they were not at all satisfactory to him. He declared he was ready to sign agreements, but he wanted to sign an agreement to "fight." He then outlined what he conceived would be a satisfactory agreement.

A warm discussion followed. Berger objected to any mention of the purse in the articles, but he finally yielded this point. Johnson was equally as insistent that the reference to Jeffries as the heavyweight champion of the world be stricken from the agreement, declaring that his position on this point was irrevocable. He finally won out, and all reference to the subject was omitted.

The agreement, as signed, calls for a fight of from 20 to 100 rounds for the heavyweight championship of the world. The division of the purse was left to the decision of Jeffries.

It also provides that, as a guarantee of good faith, each of the parties to the agreement shall post $5,000 with Chas. A. Comiskey, of Chicago, within 72 hours, with the understanding that the $5,000 operate as a side bet on the contest.

The following is the agreement signed by Berger and Johnson—

Form of agreement entered into this 11th day of August, 1909, between Jack Johnson, of Galveston, Texas, and James J. Jeffries, of Los Angeles, California;

It is agreed between these men mutually that they shall box a certain number of rounds, the same to be anywhere from 20 to 100, for the heavyweight championship of the world.

Contest to be held before the club offering the best inducements and mutually agreed upon by the contestants.

The division of such purse shall be on a basis of either 60 per cent. and 40 per cent. to the winner and loser respectively, or 75 per cent. and 25 per cent., or winner may be permitted to take the entire amount. The decision in this matter to rest with James J. Jeffries.

The sum of $5,000 each is to be posted with Charles A. Comiskey, of Chicago, as a guarantee of good faith and the fulfilment by each side of the terms of this agreement. Said money to be posted within 72 hours. It is further agreed that the above five thousand dollars shall operate as a side bet on the result of the contest. It is further agreed that the club will be selected and mutually agreed upon sixty days from date, at which time all further details will be mutually agreed upon.

Contest to take place not later than six months from date of selecting club and the signing of final articles.

Signed, Jack Johnson. Signed, Sam Berger, for James J. Jeffries.

Hamilton will issue debentures for $80,000 for schools and [illegible] for finishing the Technical school.

CANADIAN TO FIGHT ATTELL

For the Bantamweight Championship of the World on August 20th

San Francisco, Aug. 11.—The Mission Athletic Club completed its card for August 20, when Monte Attell and Percy Cove were matched to fight 20 rounds for the bantamweight championship of the world, the weight to be 115 pounds at six o'clock in the afternoon. This bantamweight contest, together with the lightweight match between Johnny Frayne and Dick Hyland, will be the complete card, no preliminary being necessary. Eddie Smith will referee both matches.

Little or nothing is known personally of Cove, but he had a good record in the Northwest. In build he is a pugilistic freak, as he stands over 5 feet 7 inches, and can still make the bantamweight limit. In the present match he is practically fighting on a winner take all basis, as he is reserving but $50 to cover his training expenses. Cove is doing this for the sake of getting a chance at Attell.

T.A.S. TO DROP OUT OF LEAGUE

A meeting of the City Baseball League was held last night when the protest of the T.A.S. against Park street team was considered. The protest was thrown out, and the representative of the T.A.S. team stated that the Abstainers would drop out of the league.

What is going to be done now is a question.

KELLY WANTS ANOTHER FIGHT

Would Like to Meet Tomy Daly Here Again in Return Match

Buffalo Jimmy Kelly has written to Mr. Chris. Graham, suggesting another match here between Kelly and Tommy Daly. Kelly says that Daly claimed at the time that he underrated him and was not in the best condition to do himself justice.

Kelly ventures the opinion that a return go should draw well in Peterborough. Mr. Graham is not thinking seriously of promoting another Kelly-Daly bout.

CRICKET

The test matches are over, Australia winning the majority. The last one was concluded at the Oval yesterday. Australia scored 329 and 339 for five wickets (innings declared closed). England 352 and 104 for three wickets ending in a draw. The "ashes" remain with Australia.

Next year the big league begins. Home and home matches in South Africa, Australia and England. A big order this!

IF LINCOLN HAD "GROWED UP" NOW

Says the Universalist Leader:

"What would modern educational experts have made of Lincoln if, as a baby, he had been put in their care? They would probably have started him on sterilized milk, clothed him in disinfected garments, sent him to kindergarten, where he would have learned to weave straw mats and sing about the 'Blue Bird on the Branch.' Then the dentist would have straightened his teeth, the oculist would have fitted him with glasses, and in the primary grade he would have been taught by pictures and diagrams the difference between a cow and a pig, and, through nature study he would have learned that the catbird did not lay kittens. By the time he was eight he would have become a 'young gentleman'; at ten he would know more than the old folks at home, at twelve or fourteen he would take up manual training and within two years make a rolling pin and tie with a blue ribbon. In the high school at sixteen where in four years he would learn that Mars was the reputed son of Juno, and to recite a stanza from 'The Lady of the Lake.' Then to college, where he would have joined the glee club and a Greek letter fraternity, smoked cigarettes and graduated, and then become a clerk in a banker's office; and never, never do anyone any harm! Well—perhaps—we don't know and can't tell what might have been, but we can't help feeling thankful that Lincoln's training and education were left to Nancy Hanks—and God!"

POLICE MADE RAID ON ALLEGED GAMING HOUSE LAST EVENING

Four Local Men Were Taken into Custody Charged With Being Inmates of it—Come up for Trial This Afternoon—Allowed Out on $100 Bail Apiece.

Four prominent local men were up in Police Court this morning, charged with being inmates of a gaming house. Policemen Newhall and Adams made the raid late last night, and succeeded in capturing several of those who were frequenters of it. The Court room looked like the setting on a vaudeville stage this morning as there were a large number of colored card tables, packs of cards, etc., on hand. The prisoners were remanded until this afternoon at two o'clock, and were granted bail, until that time, of $100 apiece. They will be represented this afternoon by Mr. J. A. Haverson, of Toronto, who is coming down from that city by the noon train for the purpose.

WHY GERMANY IS SO FAR AHEAD OF ALL OTHER GREAT NATIONS

The Automatic Style of Education Gives Way to the Old Fashioned Training of the Powers of the Mind — No Royal Road—Mere Results Not Reliable.

About ten years ago our New South Wales Government sent commissioners throughout most of the leading countries of the world to investigate educational methods in Government schools, and to report. They appear to have kept their heart up well, and to have been tolerably satisfied as to our own methods, until they came to Germany. There, the methods employed, the money spent, and the results achieved, not only surprised, but alarmed, them. They returned, and after long and very careful consideration, brought in their report to the Parliament. It was to the effect that, although our system of education had been thought by us to be equal to any in the world, it was so far behind Germany, and some other countries, that nothing short of a revolution would be necessary. The old system, which was too often merely a "cram," appraised by another hard and fast system of "Examination by Results," must be abolished. This came as a shock to the whole community. Would it be wise to introduce suddenly a system that would be brand new to inspectors and teachers of every grade? The commissioners urged that it was essential. Parliament decided that it should be done, and thus what is known as the "New Syllabus" came into vogue.

The new idea appears to be to train the pupil—his mind, his eye, his hand, his powers of originality, invention and self-reliance; to teach him to think, to work out problems, and to find out by his own efforts how to do things which at the outset he cannot do. All this instead of the former method of imparting to him a certain amount of specific information. Necessary information, commonly known as "a good education," he is still to get, of course, but he is to discover it by being allowed individual methods of obtaining it; as, for instance, instead of being told what a difficult word means, he is to have his own dictionary, and look it up for himself, the idea being not so much to teach him the meaning of the word, but to train the faculty of "self-help" in the boy, and start him out in life along practical lines, that, with ordinary diligence, coupled with good character, will make a man of him.

His eye is to be trained. He is to see and handle specimens of pictures of everything that comes within his range of study, as far as such things can be represented. He is to have the "real thing" whenever it can be placed in his way.

He is to be taught much less of information that can never be of use to him and very much more of what is [illegible] [illegible] the eye and hand the kindergarten methods of paper-cutting and plaiting are used. Then came the mechanical trades, and the study of horticulture in the school garden, the principles of agriculture, with cognate trades of butter and cheese making. Nature-study follows a number of branches. The girls are taking up cooking in some schools in addition to sewing. The reading is no longer entirely from school reading books, but is mostly from a school newspaper, a facsimile of the ordinary illustrated journal of the day, containing articles of the greatest interest concerning any part of the world, thoroughly up-to-date, and blending entertainment with instruction.

Naturally there are many queries as to the results of the new syllabus. The School Inspectors' Report for 1908 are now published. Inspector Smith says: "It may be admitted that the average boy of to-day will probably show a higher percentage of errors in spelling, if tested in a difficult passage, bristling with words he may never have to use in his ordinary life. But it is beyond all doubt that he would make an infinitely better showing in spelling words in his original composition, or in spelling and using words which come within his own vocabulary. And he will show capacity for using a dictionary or lexicon which was quite unknown to his compeer of ten years ago.

Similarly, while he may not know the exact height of Kosciusko, or the length of the Bredbo, he has a skilled knowledge of the use of the atlas and gazetteer, and a much finer appreciation of the bearing of his country's physical conformation upon its industries and trade.

The boy of to-day may not be able to name in order the wives of Henry VIII., but he has a much sounder conception of the great historical movements of modern times, a much better understanding of the bearing of Australia's and England's past story upon the problems of the present, and a much finer capacity for accurate thought upon the problems of government, war, trade etc.

He has also a decidedly greater capacity for reasoning about numbers, and a marked ability to compute rapidly within the range of problems which touch his daily life.

Inspector McCoy reports that in the Lismore North Cross, District "several schools are provided with a Babcock milk-tester, and the senior pupils make periodic tests with a view to finding out the profitable and unprofitable cows in a herd. In several instances the information thus gained has proved of practical value to the parent."

Inspector Kennedy reports that in the Taree, Manning River District, "when a local resident wishes to ascertain the commercial value of the milk produced by a certain cow, or to test the efficiency of his cream separator, he sends to the school samples of the milk, to be tested by the pupils, under the teacher's supervision. The local butter factories show their appreciation of the work thus being done in, the schools by supplying free of cost all the sulphuric acid required in the tests."

Some of us think these methods are full of potential good. They are training for us a future manhood and womanhood, alert, observant, practical and efficient, which will deal with the problems of this young continent with more efficiency and economy than any previous generation.—Correspondent of Christian Guardian.

BANK CLERK GIVEN THREE YEARS IN PEN

Special to The Review.

Toronto, Aug. 12.—John A G Anderson, the Bank of Montreal clerk, who was in court this morning on several charges of fraud, was sentenced to three years in the penitentiary at Kingston. He pleaded guilty to passing forged cheques on the T. Eaton Co., but he admitted a number of other charges. It will be remembered that he either made or stole an accepted stamp of the bank, and went all over Europe on the cash he raised by the fraudulent use of the stamp.

He was arrested in Vancouver two weeks ago and was brought here. He pleaded guilty when first charged.

TENT MEETING WELL ATTENDED

The speaker at the tent meeting last night was Rev. J. G. Lewis of Picton. An average number were present. The subject was "The Power of Christ to Save." Jno. 3:14-15. Lessons were drawn from the plague of serpents, as illustrating the effect of sin. It is unreasonable to charge others with criminal neglect when we ourselves are responsible for our own condition. The speaker to-night will be Mr. A. G. Young, and the leader will be Mr. W. G. Whalen.

The meetings close Saturday night.

TRADE UNIONISM OVER THE CHANNEL

Some Interesting Comment on Late Labor Disturbances in the French Capital

Mr S. Gompers, having made a tour of England and noted conditions throughout the Island, crossed the channel into France. He came in contact with the leading spirits in the late labor troubles resulting in the strikes against the government administration of postal and other affairs. His review of matters throws a light on the situation.

The various passing phases of trade unionism in France, as coupled with revolutionary political projects, form a stock theme for writers of all sorts of opinions on the subject, from the dreamer who catches in one or another of the attendant circumstances, a promise of the fulfilment of his ideal State, to the cynical newspaper man who sees in the continuous performance of the contesting leaders an endless supply of "copy." There is always something new to chronicle, something fresh to be offered in comment. I cannot, of course, offer in this letter the confident conclusions to which one might arrive after an exhaustive inquiry into the present phase, but my opportunities during the last week have been unusually good for seeing some of the governing facts in this situation.

I have been in touch with the leading characters in the French labor movement, in and out of office, have spoken at an important meeting where representatives of all sides were present, and free to ask me questions, and have been interviewed by a swarm of newspaper men who waited at my hotel to make articles out of me, to earn their honest living, and who in turn I have interviewed.

My short trip in France, now over, with many events occurring daily that had some relation with my mission, I feel called upon first to say that the cordiality with which I was treated on all occasions, most gratifying it was, left me with the feeling that the organised French workmen recognise the significance to themselves of the American labor movement and wish to learn the principles which have been the cause of our advancement. While in my talks in public and private I was called upon to explain our methods, at times to that necessary extent which embodied the criticism of the sort of politics that hamper the French labor movement, I was listened to in every instance with attention and respect. There was shown very little of that spirit of wrangling and demonstration that has unfortunately characterized those leaders of socialism in America who, without sound reason, pretend to think that they are promoting the same cause as the socialists of Europe.

The reader may at once get a point of observation which, whether entirely correct or not, will enable him to survey the situation as a whole if I begin by stating the views of M. Rene Viviani, Minister of Labor and Member of the French Cabinet, as he gave them to me in an interview on Thursday, the morning after the national celebration of the fall of the Bastille, July 14. His are, of course, the views of the present administration—or, as they say here, Government of France. I was presented to M. Viviani formally in his office by M. Barrat, one of the investigators of the department, to whom, the usual courtesies to strangers had been extended by me last year at the American Federation of Labor headquarters in Washington.

M. Viviani is an enthusiastic admirer of American trade unionism. After the greetings, I asked M. Viviani what grounds there were for the statements I had frequently heard before and since coming to France, that his government was opposed to working class organization to such an extent that on the occurrence of a strike of any character the authorities might be expected to order the intervention of the army or provide a supply of strikebreakers. M. Viviani replied that the charge was baseless. Never had the present Government interfered on any occasion, when the strike was between a private employer and his men, except when actual violence had taken place, with attacks upon persons and destruction of property. It was then only when Government employees had gone on strike, endangering the public safety, that soldiers were sent to the scene or men hired to take the place of the strikers. "In these cases," said he, "the nation being the employer, the suspension of an essential public business and the stability of society were threatened. A strike of Government functionaries could not be tolerated. The work of postmen and Government telegraph operators, for example, must go on uninterruptedly if a country is to maintain order, peace, communication from place to place, publicity of current events and those conditions of commerce in which above all other classes the masses of working men have a vital interest. The present Government found it necessary to put an end to the strike of the postmen and telegraphers and then made its explanations to Parliament, and had been sustained in the action, and now promise to continue the policy that had thus far been followed. The malcontents were led by politicians holding extreme, impractical and inconsistent views. They were trying to mislead the working classes, while often promoting their own political fortunes. As to the "C. G. T." ("Confederation Generale du Travail", General Confederation of Labor), it by no means represented the majority of the organized industrial workers of the country. By an unfair system of voting at its delegate sessions, a comparatively small number of extremists controlled its actions. The large and staple national unions, such as the Typographical, road men, the Miners were thus outvoted by delegates representing, in cases, but a few thousand members of the G.T.T. represented only about one-third of the union members of France."

"The uninformed readers of certain French daily newspapers," he continued, "might be led to believe that the country was in a constant state of protest and disorder arising from the Government's attitude on the labor question. Not so. Much attention giving the disturbers by the press in general, because of politics, and not as a result of a real gravity in the situation. France, in general, was at peace industrially. The unions were quietly but persistently pursuing their work of organizing and promoting the welfare of their members; the scenes of outbreaks were only in Paris, and occasionally in a few industrial centres. The Government had been more sympathetic in its efforts on behalf of the working classes than any preceding Government in France. The establishment of this department, now in the third year of its existence, earnestly striving to be of service to labor and of the country, is one of the best proofs of my statements. The cabinet will continue its present course depending upon the common sense not only of the French people generally, but of the working people of France particularly for support."

I confess that I had heard officials even in the United States and elsewhere glibly make statements of a simple character, but M. Vivani really impressed me with his insincerity. I differ with him strongly as to the right of the working people in any employment whether private or public, to cease work. The right to cease work distinguished the free men from the slave who must work regardless of the conditions imposed upon him by his employer, whether that employer be an individual, a firm, a corporation or a state, but in France, as in many countries, the pernicious tendency of thought among many employers is to tie man to his work.

At M. Vivani's estimation of the generally stable character of the unions in France outside of the few industrial centres, I recalled my visit to Calais, with its many pleasant features. When with my little party I landed, on coming from Dover, accompanied by Secretary Appleton, of the General Federation of Trades of Great Britain, we were met by a score of delegates of the Lace Makers' Union, which is strong in the north-east of France. In appearance and address these men were of the very best type of wage workers. Their Union, they explained to me, had been modelled on the English system, and they had mainly followed through trade union methods in increasing wages and otherwise improving their conditions as workers. Their wage scale now compares well with that of the English workers of the same trade. At Caudry, especially, where the industry has grown considerably in recent years, the Union has at the same time developed strength. At present employers and employed are both doing well. The Mayor of Calais, who was present, and some of the Councilmen, are union members. They have helped in the improvement of the municipality, sufficiently well in fact, to be reelected to office. Some of these councilmen call themselves socialists, in which case the name does about as much good, or about as much harm, as it does in the case of the voluntary cooperative society of Calais, which also goes by the title of socialist. In either case work is done for the present day, beneficial in character.

There have been few strikes at Calais at times; but neither Unionism nor public welfare have thereby suffered seriously. On the contrary, they have abolished grievances and brought about improved conditions. Incidentally to such a few strikes which have occurred, agitation has been lively, and some friction with the police has occurred, but neither Unionism or the Public Welfare have thereby suffered seriously. France could and will, very well get along and progress with such a character of trade unionism as practised by the Lace Makers at Calais and the practical trade unions, which obtained in many trades.

Simonstown, Cape Colony, Aug. 12.—The British cruiser Fortex returned here yesterday after an unsuccessful search for the steamer Waratah, during which a distance of 1,320 miles was covered. The Waratah, a British steamer, has been missing since July 26, when she sailed from Port Natal. She had on board 93 passengers and a crew of 207 men. A majority of the passengers were colonials and the others Englishmen returning home from Sydney and Port Natal.

Posse Pursuing Murder Suspect.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 12.—Since just before noon yesterday, county, town and city officials, with many farmers and farm laborers, some of whom were armed with shot guns, have been searching the marshes that extend from near Holy Sepulchre cemetery west along the shore of Lake Ontario to a number of ponds, for a man who, it is thought, may be the murderer of Anna Schumaker, the 17-year-old girl who was assaulted and killed at the cemetery last Saturday afternoon.

Sensitive Tobacco Plants.

In Cuba the best tobacco comes from one strip of land only, the slopes of a certain river, and even there a north wind may ruin the crop. Tobacco is the most sensitive plant we know of. The smallest thing affects its flavor. Plant Virginia tobacco in Germany, and the result is a better tobacco, but it is German tobacco, not Virginian. In north Borneo they produce the most delicate and silky leaves that ever were seen, but the tobacco lacks character and taste. Send Havana seeds to the Philippines, and you merely produce a superior Manila.

The Buffalo man testified that he had tendered for a cement sidewalk at $1.86 per yard, yet a tender for $2.27 had been accepted.

Prisoner Escapes.

Midland, Aug. 11.—Dehoe, the young man arrested Monday for forgery, escaped from the lock-up on Monday night. Yesterday a long bench was hanging from an upstair window by which means the prisoner had evidently escaped. It is a mystery to the authorities how he escaped from the cell with the door locked.

Saturday Bargains

Only Handfuls of the Summer Goods Remain

So vigorous has the man with the big pencil been. So few of each kind are there that it is hard to particularize. But to make a final clearance we're putting the prices down still further, to such a point that they will be quickly snapped up by women that know. What's the odds whether a thing is the first or last of a lot, so long as it is good and a bargain? Some few of the many —but some come expecting to find broken lots and equally broken prices.

THE GYPSIES ARE NOT IN HURRY TO LEAVE OTTAWA

Ottawa, Aug. 11.—The gypsy cases are over for the time being at least. This morning Magistrate Goyette gave judgment in the perjury cases. The members of both gypsy gangs were dismissed and each will pay half the costs of the court.

The head of the Mexican band says he will institute further proceedings against the Ottawa gypsies. He stated this morning that he would either have the little girl, Katrina Alexia, now in the Ottawa camp, or the sum of $1,000, which he claims he has paid for her.

Every member of the Hull band was out this morning, and after the magistrate had given his judgment there was great consternation among the strange people.

The old chief of the Mexicans told a reporter this morning that his trouble since coming to Hull has cost him $1,000, including lawyers' fees, fines and court expenses.

The magistrate advised the people this morning that to get out of the city was their best course. The gypsies affirm that they will remain.

ATTEMPTED ROBBERY IN PARK LATE LAST MONDAY NIGHT

Man Named Desboro Was Attacked by Two Youths in Central Park While on His Way Home — Robbers Became Frightened and Took to Their Heels.

At the Police Court this morning two young men, named Fallon and Connors, were charged with having waylaid R. Desboro with intent to rob. Mr. R. F. McWilliams appeared for Fallon and Mr. G. N. Gordon for the second man.

On behalf of the prisoners their counsel pleaded not guilty and asked to be tried summarily. Chief Roszel was not ready to go on with the case, however, and the prisoners were remanded until to-morrow morning. Bail for Connors was fixed at $500, and on this being offered he was given his liberty. The Magistrate refused to grant bail for Fallon, however, and it will be necessary for him to stay in jail in the meantime.

While no evidence was taken in connection with the case, still some facts about the occurrence have leaked out, and they concur somewhat, with the story that Disbow tells, which is as follows:

He was returning home from the city late Monday night, and, in order to make the journey a little shorter, had decided to take a short cut across Central Park. The night was exceedingly dark, and there were very few people abroad at the time. Just as he reached the centre of the Park a voice called from the shadow of the Bandstand, and at the same time two men sprang out upon him. Knowing that they were after his purse, he defended himself to the best of his ability, but would have fared but badly had not his assailants become suddenly frightened, and taken to their heels.

Mr. Disbow hastily telephoned the Police Station and Policeman Newhall was soon on the scene, and yesterday afternoon Fallon and Connors were arrested charged with the deed.

ARE AFFECTED BY HOT WEATHER

The Tomato Plants are Dried up and Rain is Needed Badly

The excessive heat that was experienced last week has not been without its effects on garden produce and many of the vegetables are suffering for the want of rain and moisture. Tomatoes have suffered especially and the plants are in a dried up state, which keeps the fruit from filling out to a good size.

But it is now hoped that the cooler weather will bring rain before and permanent damage is done.

GIRL'S DEATH WAS SECOND TRAGIC ONE

Cobourg, Aug. 11.—Two years ago Mr. and Mrs. Robert Andrews and their family were overwhelmed with grief when the body of their young son, a schoolboy, was taken from beneath the wheels of a freight train at the G.T.R. station here, almost severed.

Last night another well nigh insupportable grief was their portion when it was learned that their beloved daughter, Clara, a bright young woman in her twenties, was burned to death in the fire at Hanlan's Point. Mr. Andrews, who came with his family to Cobourg seven or eight years ago, is an employee of the Crossen Car Works. They reside in a cottage on University avenue, and the deep sympathy of every Cobourg citizen is with them in this terrible hour. Miss Andrews had a number of chosen friends. She has three sisters here, Mrs. Thos. Niles and Mrs. Andrews, and one unmarried sister. She visited at her home here early in the summer, and before going to Toronto was waitress at the Dunham Hotel, where she was employed for some time.

BACK TO THE ASYLUM FOR STANFORD WHITE'S SLAYER

Has Same Delusions Now That He Had When Crime Was Committed—Will be Given the Liberty He Had in the First Days at Matteawan Asylum.

White Plains, N.Y., Aug. 13.—The State of New York won a complete victory over Harry K. Thaw when Justice Isaac N. Mills decided that the slayer of Stanford White is still insane, and sent him back to the criminal insane asylum at Matteawan.

Not one of the many contentions made by Thaw during the three weeks of his recent hearing was sustained, but Justice Mills practically orders that Thaw at Matteawan be restored to the privileges he enjoyed during the first three months of his stay there, and that his mother be allowed all possible privileges when she calls to see him.

Thaw received the news with slight display of emotion, apparently expecting an adverse decision. A copy of the courts' decision was handed to him. He read it without comment until he came to the following sentence: "If those beliefs constituted delusions in his mind when he committed the homicide, they are the same now."

"That's not so," he said, and marked the lines with his pencil.

Thaw was smoking a pipe and as he read he puffed faster and faster until the air about him was a cloud of smoke.

Justice Mills draws the following conclusion: The insanity with which Thaw was afflicted at the time he committed the homicide was of the kind known as chronic delusive insanity, or paranoia.

In killing White, the justice holds that Thaw believed "he was acting as the agent of Providence and performing a praiseworthy act, and, like that of David in slaying Goliath, or St. George in killing the dragon."

"Upon my own personal observation of the conduct of Thaw, his actions and speech in the court-room, both on and off the witness stand, I have been impressed that he is now of unsound mind," says Justice Mills. "He was exceedingly nervous and very frequently interrupted his counsel with suggestion."

Not the least significant sentence in Justice Mills' decision in the opinion of lawyers, is one which declares that Thaw's delusions had become fixed and established prior to the time of his marriage. "It is pointed out that this sentence may, if desired, provide grounds for proceedings by Mrs. Evelyn Thaw for the annulment of her marriage."

MOTHER'S WILL IS CONSENTED

Son of Late Col. Leys of London Alleges Unsound Mind

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 13.—Alleging that his mother was of unsound mind when she executed her last will and testament in November 1906, and also that undue influence and fraud were used in securing her signature to the document, Dr. Francis Leys of this city, son of the late Col. Leys of London, Ont., yesterday filed a petition in the Probate Court asking that the probating of the will in London be not permitted, but that a former will, executed in 1903, and which he declares to be the rightful one, be probated in Detroit.

The case possesses an extraordinary legal aspect, and prominent attorneys here express the opinion that before a satisfactory solution is reached, the case will be brought before the Supreme Court of the United States.

Owing to its peculiar international features, the court officials here do not believe that Dr. Ley's petition can legally be complied with, and in furtherance of this view Judge Bohnert of the U. S. Circuit Court, before whom the matter first was presented, has refused positively to issue a mandamus to compel Probate Judge Durfee to hear testimony in the matter.

According to the provisions of the first will in 1903, Dr. Leys was given a large portion of the $500,000 estate, but the second will decrees his portion to be entailed.

THREE BIGAMY CASES HEARD

Toronto, Aug. 13.—Bigamy was featured on the police court bill yesterday morning, when three persons charged with that offence were called to the bar. George T. Stead of Walkerton pleaded not guilty and was remanded a week. George is single, but it is charge that he knowingly went through a form of marriage with Mrs. Minnie Pink. Minnie was also charged and pleaded not guilty and was similarly remanded.

Rupert Garland was called for a like crime. He elected to be tried by a jury and was remanded till Tuesday.

Lee Boo, a Chinese, charged with keeping a common betting house, and 28 of his fellow-countrymen, charged as frequenters, were also remanded.

SAYS THERE IS SLAVERY IN COBALT CAMPS

Ottawa, Aug. 13.—Andrew Levi, a laborer, who was in the Police Court yesterday, charging two men with knocking him about, told a story about going to the custom house to expose the license law infractions on the Montreal River.

Questioned after court regarding the statement, Levi made a very serious charge against contractors for the Cobalt power dam, now being erected at Montreal River.

"The place is worse than the slave camps of the Michigan woods," declared Levi. "The work is being mostly done by poor Italians, who have been induced to go to Montreal River by promises of high wages, but they are kept virtually prisoners by a boss who also conducts the illegal whisky business."

THE REVENGE OF A CONSTABLE

Woodstock, Aug. 13.—G. Whittaker of Owen Sound, formerly of Woodstock, was brought to this city under arrest yesterday, charged with writing a menacing letter.

Whittaker wrote to Constable Fred Hill accusing him of having over-collected from Whittaker on a judgment, and threatening prosecution. Hill thereupon went to Owen Sound and arrested the man on a charge of sending him a threatening letter.

The magistrate found him guilty and he had to pay costs of the court, $36.

The Montreal road is owned by a company and has for a long time been in the very worst shape, for a toll road, it is alleged.

SERIOUS FIGHTING AT FORT WILLIAM

Several are Wounded in Fight With Strikers—Effort of Men to Stop C.P.R. Police From Passing Results in a Promiscuous Fusilade of Bullets From Both Sides.

Fort William, Ont., Aug. 13.—In a clash between special C.P.R. constables and a crowd of striking 'longshoremen yesterday morning bullets flew promiscuously for a few minutes.

Revolvers and rifles were the weapons and while there were no fatalities, several men were seriously wounded. The casualty list includes:

Chief Ball of the C.P.R. police, wound in abdomen.

Sergt. Taylor of city police, slightly hurt.

C. M. Dickenson, reporter for The Times-Journal, slightly hurt.

— Carpenter, C.P.R. constable, knee badly smashed.

John Lane, butcher, forehead grazed by bullet.

Strikers: Foreign leader shot through groin; another through the arm; several others slightly wounded.

Yesterday afternoon a detachment of the 96th Regiment was called out. Mayor Pelletier read the riot act and the waterfront was declared to be under martial law.

The battle occurred at the corner of McTavish street and the C.P.R. sheds. About 9 a.m. the C.P.R. brought in about 30 special constables. At the C.P.R. station they were sworn in and then started for the coal docks. On the C.P.R. bridge were standing about 30 strikers, who followed the constables down Hardysty street. Near the sheds about 200 strikers gathered, looking for trouble.

Half an hour later the C.P.R. police went across the road to a boarding-house and the strikers at once declared that they would not let them go back.

Ald. Rankin came down and made a speech, stating that the C.P.R. were willing to give 20 cents for day work and 25 cents for night work. The strikers would hardly listen at all, but watched the boarding-house like hawks.

About 11.30 the constables started coming out. Only two were outside when the shooting started. The first constables to come out were told to go back, but they pulled out revolvers and threatened to shoot. One of the strikers in the lead started to raise his stick and threatened to hit him, and the constables, it is said, began a regular fusilade of revolver shots.

It was only a minute before there was a battle in progress in the centre of the street. The strikers used revolvers first, and so did the police, who drove the strikers back somewhat and managed to reach the shelter of cars drawn across the road at the entrance of the freight shed.

"Bring rifles," was then the cry of the strikers, and about a dozen men rushed to nearby houses and came out with rifles. Sheltered by the corners of houses, they continued the skirmish and showed no signs of retreating. The men with rifles were encouraged by their fellow-strikers, and two or three could be seen in a group around a man with a gun, showing how to use it.

Men were seen running in and out of houses for ammunition, and as fast as it could be brought the shooting continued, lasting 15 minutes.

All last night strikers remained around the sheds, firing revolvers and rifles into the air. Men are constantly on guard along the streets leading to the docks and accost all strangers who appear in the vicinity, demanding of them a statement that they are not going to work, and when that is given they are generally allowed to pass. Guy Allen attempted to drive through the lines with his delivery rig, refusing to explain. The horse was stopped and the harness cut to pieces. Allen was roughly handled and his rig smashed.

For some time things have been threatening among the foreigners who constitute the freight handlers, and it has been freely stated that there are 200 mauser rifles in these now lawless hands.

Threats have openly been made that on appearance of militia that several prominent officials, including the chief of police, would be murdered, this last being attributed to a well-known Italian agitator.

Soldiers Ordered to Scene.

Winnipeg, Aug. 13.—At 6 o'clock last night, 50 men of the Strathcona Horse, Royal Canadian Mounted Rifles, part of the permanent corps, left by special train for Fort William on orders received from Ottawa.

TARIFF SESSION COSTS MUCH MONEY

Washington, Aug. 13.—It is estimated that the cost of holding the special session of Congress to pass the tariff bill was at least $500,000. This does not include the increased expenses of the Government printing office in printing the hearings before the ways and means committee, the various reports and documents, the congressional record, the tariff bill in its various stages and the Payne law as finally enacted. Accurate information as to the additional expense incurred by the Government printing office is not available, but it is estimated to be as much as $300,000 or $400,000.

The Alguire cheese factory at Westport was burned.

IMPROVEMENTS TO QUEENSTON HEIGHTS

Niagara-on-the-Lake, Aug. 13.—A feature of the annual gathering at Queenston Heights yesterday of the Niagara Historical Society was a strong speech by James Armstrong in favor of the proposed Laura Secord monument being a memorial hall, with room for a museum and library of interest to visitors.

There was unanimous endorsation of this idea, and many of those present urged that the time had come when the attractiveness of Queenston as a holiday resort should be improved by beautifying the reserve along the river bank, erecting pavilions for shelter and rest, and in other ways making this historic spot attractive to the holiday travelers who at present are unprovided for.

Addresses on historic subjects were given by Alex. Fraser, B.A., provincial architect; A. W. Wright, Rev. A. F. Macgregor, Rev. J. C. Garrett and others. The meeting was a great success.

BADDECK IS AGAIN TRIED STILL GOING CAUTIOUSLY

Aviator McCurdy Keeps to Running Along the Ground With Only a Single Flight Into the Air and an Immediate Return to Earth.

Petawawa Camp, Aug. 13.—"Baddeck No. 1," the new Canadian aerodrome, at 5.30 last night for the first time left the ground, making a short "hop" of about seventy feet in length and rising 9 or 10 feet from the surface. Only one test was made.

The aerodrome went along the roadway for nearly half a mile at a rate of at least thirty miles to the hour. When J. A. D. McCurdy, the aviator, turned the controller upwards, the drome gracefully shot into the air, but he at once turned the controller down again and the drome took the ground easily. Then the aerodrome, keeping to the roadway, ran back towards the shed and was shoved in there.

McCurdy does not consider this as an ascent; "simply a little hop," said he. "We will have another trial tomorrow and I may say that for three or four days we have got to make little hops like that to get acquainted with the ground."

Col. Fiset, Deputy Minister of Militia, said: "The aerodrome makes great time and looks good. It is wonderful, wonderful. McCurdy is a plucky chap. They are wise not to attempt too much at first. I believe the Wrights in Washington kept the public waiting eight days before they made their ascent."

Gen. Otter was an interested spectator, but did not care to express an opinion.

Col. Rutherford was pleased with the test, but he looked on it only as a preliminary one, and expected much more ambitious ventures before long. Gen. Macdonald and Major Maunsell spoke much in the same strain. As soon as the drome reached the shed, Col. Fiset, Gen. Otter and others shook hands with Messrs. McCurdy and Baldwin (who was in the aerodrome when she came back to the shed) and congratulated them.

It is understood that the aviators will make short "hops" for the next day or two and probably begin longer ascents about Tuesday or Wednesday.

While it is too early for anything definite yet, the machine seems to be well put together and it is fully expected it will be a success.

Over two hundred, including automobile parties from Pembroke and elsewhere, witnessed the flight. The Militia Department officials here will return to the capital on Saturday.

"We do not consider to-nights effort a flight," said Wm. Macdonald of the Baddeck. "It was quite successful, but was a hop, not a flight."

Before the flight the big field was cleared of all spectators.

Yesterday morning Col. Fiset said: "I do not think Canada should or can afford to purchase an aerodrome of the present experimental stage. There is not enough known about them yet to warrant the Government buying them."

INSANE HERMIT IS AFFLUENT

Pittsburg, Pa., Aug. 13.—Never did a miser hoard his gold and keep secret that he was a man of wealth as did Peter Leibauch, a hermit, 43 years old, who was removed yesterday from his hovel to the Marshalsea Insane Asylum.

A search of his hovel by the police revealed $60,000, and, in addition two immense zinc boxes filled with gold pieces, dollars, pennies, nickels and silver coins of all denominations, each denomination tied in a separate sack. In one sack was more than $1,000 gold, upon every one of which there is a premium. The detectives estimate the fortune at about $300,000, not including five bank books, which show aggregate deposits of $18,000.

THE GLOBE PERPLEXED

The Globe is having a hard time maintaining its political equilibrum these days. It worships the ancient image of Free Trade as a Hindu worships a myth, but that is about "all there is to it," as the old woman said when her hair blew off and left her at the mercy of the broiling sun. Wishing to disguise her feelings as well, probably, as her pate, she made a cosmetic of mud and water, with which she besmeared herself, and to all inquirers who insisted on knowing, she answered, "Nothing, I'm all right." But still her soul was harrowed up and she could find no rest for the sole—for the top of her head. It is so with the Globe. A more important contributory confession to the cause of true reform in the way of providing protection where it is needed than the following editorial of that journal, it would be hard to find:

(The Globe)

Among the allegations regarding Germany that are current in British journals and in the speeches of British statesmen is one to the effect that Germany is industrially better organized than Great Britain is; that the laborers are better housed and fed than British laborers are; that the artisans in manufacturing establishments are generally more skilled than British artisans are; and that German manufacturers are more disposed to meet the reasonable requirements of their foreign patrons, even if it costs them trouble and expense to do so. That there is some truth in these assertions is beyond all doubt. There has been during the past generation in Germany a vast improvement in economic conditions, and withal a gratifying diminution of the number of the unemployed. Meanwhile the population of that country has been rapidly increasing, because emigration has almost entirely ceased.

It must be admitted that industrial conditions are very far from satisfactory in Great Britain. There is inveterate stolidity and immobility among the agricultural laborers that even Joseph Arch, with all his personal magnetism and sociological saneness, could not greatly disturb, far less overcome. "The man with the hoe," continued to be, ever since Mr. Arch passed away, "the man with the hoe," and nothing more. The condition of the artisans in factories is not much better on the average and in the long run. Too often they have to live in insanitary dwellings and do their work under disease-producing conditions, or in contact with unprotected machinery. The number of the unemployed is far larger than it ought to be in a great manufacturing country that has more capital than it can invest at home and can bring in all its raw materials free of customs duties. The workmen in factories are too often not only incompetent, but apparently incapable of acquiring the skill that is absolutely necessary to efficient production. Sadly pervasive is the invincible obstinacy of the manufacturer himself, who seems to prefer losing a customer to changing his methods.

What shall Great Britain do to be saved in this strenuous and interminable industrial warfare? Train soldiers and build warships, say the militants, and provide the necessary revenue by taxing imported food; grant old-age pensions, improve the dwellings of the laborers, establish labor exchanges, provide technical training by means of trade schools, and provide the necessary revenue by taking from the holders of unused land part of the increase of value due to the general progress of the community, say the anti-militarists. Recent events in Great Britain have set off the two parties sharply against one another, and between them the public at large must ultimately judge.

What Great Britain needs just now more than anything else, if she is to escape the doom of the unfit to survive, is industrial, not military, efficiency. If it is true that the British race has deteriorated physically, the effective correctives are heart and hope, a higher standard of living, and such a technical training in youth as will make up for the discontinuance of apprenticeship. If it is true that British artisans have fallen behind behind [illegible] personal skill, the effective remedy is greatly improved and specially adapted education. In short, if the foreigners have really succeeded in overtaking, if not outrunning, the once pre-eminent race in the competition, the beaten nation should make a persistent effort to discover the necessary restoratives and spend its revenues in providing and applying them, instead of loading itself down with an excessive and paralysing incubus in the form of jingoistic militarism.

PROPORTIONAL REPRESENTATION

The development of "electoral representation" systems is coming to a new stage. At present a parliamentary majority may be elected by a popular minority. Hare, in his great work on minorities, makes a strong plea for the direct representation of minorities. Mr. F. D. Monk, the Conservative leader in Quebec, is taking the matter up and leading a movement for the better representation of the popular will. There is no doubt much room for improvement, not only in this, but in many ways. The simplification and cheapening of legal procedure is one of them.

U. S. HITS HARD

The article quoted in another column from the Canadian Courier on Canada's trade peril shows how crude the trade and tariff ideas of the Liberal party have been and what they are naturally leading to. A protective tariff is for protective purposes, as its name implies. It may be made misuse of to bolster up monopolists—for a time; but in these days of world-wide tariff-making it is suicide to denounce or ignore it. The inexorable law of circumstances is fast bringing Canada into the trouble zone. No policy that fails to take into account that of one's neighbors and one's rivals is statesmanlike. It may be theoretically correct, as Free Trade is. Circumstances alter cases, however, and he is a poor sailor who would not alter his course when a storm is brewing. Canada is in grave danger of losing, as the Courier points out, a large slice of trade. We must now make use of that Protection which the Liberal party has affected to despise. It may save us yet. We can only hope so.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Rev. Father Tyrell, the noted Jesuit, who was ex-communicated by the Pope for his modernistic tendencies, is said to have died outside the pale of his former church.

The civic grafters of Montreal have their friends and apologists as all others of that ilk have. They are so enterprising and helpful to the material prosperity of the city, don't-yer-know?

The testimony given in the inquiry in Montreal as to what occurred between the Paving Co. and the aldermen, looks as if it had been found impossible to cook the facts. Cooking facts is bad cooking, being very dangerous and the Government behind ready and willing to prosecute to the limit of the law, for perjury makes it doubly dangerous.

We can only seek to use this shock as a means of bracing our people against the religious laxity and moral decadence which are creeping in among us, of awakening the churches to follow their sheep into the wilderness and of adjuring all citizens to do their duty to their neighborhoods.—The Montreal Witness.

Lady Aberdeen has inaugurated a crusade in Ireland against tuberculosis which is "a veritable plague there. The population left at home is not nearly so robust as the part that emigrated and this fact is beginning to be only too apparent. The new movement is well supported and is being pushed with vigor and success. It is called the fight of pure food and pure air against filth and laziness. The motto of the movement is "Save Ireland."

Hon. W. J. Hanna, the Provincial Secretary, returns from abroad in a day or two. He is to receive a demonstrative welcome and no one deserves it more. He is a man of rare ability and commanding character. If any one ever thinks of the bosh that members of the late unlamented Ross aggregation used to talk of themselves and their own fancied superiority that person will also in all probability laugh if the comparison is not too odious even for that, which is likely.

Ottawa, August 10.—The commissioners of the National Transcontinental Railway are understood to have issued orders holding payment of progress estimates of contractors along the line of construction where charges of over classification have been made. This action is taken pending inquiry by the chief engineer, Mr. Gordon Grant.

Mr. Grant, the new chief, is now out on the line inspecting the work with particular reference to these allegations of over classification and it is pending the receipt of his report that the monthly payments by means of progress estimates on district engineers' certificates have been suspended.—The Witness.

Veal Calves.

Prices ranged from $3 to $6.25, with a few new milk fed calves at $6.50 per cwt.

Sheep and Lambs.

The run of lambs during the week was light, owing to low prices a week ago, and farmers not having time to deliver them at country stations, being busy with the harvest. Lambs were quoted to-day at $5.90 to $6.75 per cwt., and selected lots were bought by butchers at $7 to $7.50. But the latter prices are no criterion for drovers to go by in buying for next week's market, as should there be heavy deliveries prices will go back to where they were before. Citizens will understand why they have to pay more for their chops when they see their butcher had to pay choice prices for choice quality lambs. Export ewes, $3.60 to $3.75; rams, $2 to $2.50 per cwt.

Hogs.

Receipts during the week have been light. Mr. Harris reported prices unchanged at $7.90 for hogs, fed and watered at the market, and $7.65, f.o.b., cars. H. P. Kennedy reports his prices as unchanged at $7.85, fed and watered, and $7.60, f.o.b., cars, country points.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

A MEDICINE BOTTLE.

Useful Present For the Friend Who Is Going to Travel.

A most useful present to make for the friend who is going to travel is the linen bag to hold bottles of medicine. Dull green, blue or brown linen would be suitable for the bag, which has two rows of four pockets each. The lower pockets are deeper and hold the larger bottles. These are stitched on by machine and have an oblong strip of the material for the bottom, so that the bottles set in nicely.

A piece of tape is fastened to each pocket and also to the bag, which allows the pockets to set forward a little. The top of the bag has a casing through which is run a wooden rod, while tape is attached to each end to hang up the bag by, and the whole bag is bound with the same tape. The upper pockets are set in with small box plaits.

LETTERS OF CONDOLENCE.

Be Brief and Try to Express Your Sorrow Naturally.

To the majority of persons there is no more difficult social duty than that of writing letters of condolence, and many shrink from it. Yet those who are in sorrow so greatly appreciate messages from their friends that no effort to write such a note should be considered too irksome.

As a matter of fact, the writing of such letters should be no effort, for every word should be spontaneous, coming straight from the heart to comfort those afflicted. These letters differ in tone and in length according to the degree of intimacy one has with the person to whom one is writing. To formal acquaintances the correct form is to send one's visiting card, on which one writes at the top of the card "Deepest sympathy" or "Our deep sympathy for you and yours" when you wish to include their family and your own.

Letters of condolence should always be written on white note paper with black ink. Tinted paper for this purpose is incorrect, while colored inks for social usage are obsolete. When penning such a note write legibly, for the mind and the eyes of the reader will be under a great strain, and it is a kindness to avoid any possibility of taxing them.

Try to express sorrow naturally, just as you would talk, and do not endeavor to say much, for a few rightly chosen words will adequately carry the feeling. It is usually most comforting to the bereaved to hear the lost one praised, so always try to put in your letter some tribute. Recall kindnesses done by the one now dead or any personal thing you can think of, and when you are writing of some one with whom possibly you had not a personal acquaintance think of things you have heard others say and quote them with sincerity, for they will be a comfort and help toward the consolation to which you are seeking to contribute.

It is most thoughtful when writing to persons in affliction, after expressing one's sympathy, to offer one's services in any way that might be useful. There are often little things others can do for friends until the first shock passes and life resumes for them more normal conditions.

In writing always make it evident that you are more than ready to do these acts; but, having offered, do not press yourself upon them, for to do so would be tactless and intrusive. Some persons are sensitive to the invasion of their privacy, so it is well not to be overzealous in one's desire to help.

Mrs. Fiske's Work For Animals.

Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske finds time in all the activity of her stage duties to work for the cause of kindness to animals. Every year she sends a subscription to a humane society in Milan, Italy, and just now she is distributing pamphlets urging the better treatment of horses in lumber camps. She is sending these pamphlets throughout this country and Canada. She says horses in the camps are practically without protection and that the lumbermen need instruction in caring for them. The actress frequently distributes pamphlets on the humane treatment of animals to drivers of horses in the streets. She never fails to do this when she sees a man cruel to his horse, always carrying a few pamphlets.

A Wise Precaution.

A wise teacher has taught her pupils to make paper cornucopias for drinking cups instead of using those found in public places. Folding paper drinking cups come in packages at very small prices and are a possibility not only for traveling, but for the shopper, who often goes thirsty through the morning or afternoon rather than drink from the cups at the fountains.

London manufacturers have been warned to cease employing children under the legal age limit.

DESCRIPTION OF BLERIOT'S NEW FLYING MACHINE

The London, Eng., Times gives a very interesting and detailed account of the aeroplane which has won such great distinction—

"The machine in which M. Bleriot achieved the flight is the Bleriot XI, so called because it is the eleventh constructed by its inventor with a view to effecting practical flight. The construction of this machine, which is a monoplane, was begun in December, 1908, and it was exhibited at the Salon du Grand Palais. Its first trial took place on January 18, 1909, and the machine flew for the first time at Issy in the following February. From February to March it was tested at Buc with a R.E.P. (Robert Esnault-Pelterie) motor. The area of its sustaining surface, which was at first 14 square yards, was then increased to 17 square yards. Its spread is 8 1-2 yards. Under these conditions the small monoplane left the ground very easily, but could not stop in the air more than two minutes. Its motor was then replaced by a three-cylinder Anzani of 105 mm (4.13 in.) bore and of 22-25 h.p., weighing 132 lbs. in working order.

"The framework of the Bleriot XI. is of ash and poplar, stiffened with piano strings. It weighs 45 lbs., and is about 23 feet long; it can easily carry a load of 660 lbs. placed at its middle point. The landing chassis, including the wheels and springs, weighs only 66 lbs. The inclination of the tail of the machine, and the warping of the wings, ensuring lateral stability, are effected by means of a hand-lever, whilst the vertical rudder is moved by a bar pressed down by the foot of the aviator. The propeller, which is a Chauviere, one of the type known as 'Integrale,' is placed in front of the machine, and is so designed that the air it throws back does not meet the framework of the aeroplane. It has a diameter of a little under 7 feet, and, working the Bleriot XI, it has an efficiency of 85 per cent, which is the highest ever obtained.

"There are limits in the nature of the necessary materials to extension of aeroplanes, in the direction of weight-carrying," adds the Times. "That department will have to be left to the dirigible balloon, which has the great advantage that its power increases with increase of size at a greater rate than the resistance offered by the air."

BUTTONS DRESSES BY MERE STRING

Benefactor of the Human Race Appears in New York City

New York, Aug. 12.—More than nineteen thousand applications for tickets from all over the country have been received for the "clothes show," which will open in Madison Square Garden on Saturday next. All known, and some unknown, kinds of men's and women's clothes will be shown.

Every long-suffering husband should go to the show, for there will be present a great benefactor of the tribe. Some genius—name unknown as yet—has contrived an arrangement which will do away with buttons and hooks and eyes in the backs of women's dresses. All the husband has to do is to pull a string, and, behold! Madame's directoire is form-fitting. Another invention which will be displayed is a collar button that can't roll after it hits the floor, a permanent crease that won't come out, and won't let trousers bag; a waistcoat that can be worn inside out; a skirt that can be pulled up and made into a rain hat.

LOST IN WOODS, OLD LADY HAD TRYING EXPERIENCE

The Madoc Review says:—Last week the Review had an item to the effect that Mrs. John C. Taylor, a well-known old resident of Madoc, had been out in the woods or swamp near the foot of the lake, and had not been found up to the hour of going to press. Happily she was found during Thursday forenoon, and conveyed to her home at the residence of her son, Frank, and is since apparently none the worse of her trying experience.

She wandered away on Tuesday afternoon, while returning from the lake at Henderson's landing, where she had dinner with some friends. By some means she got into the bush east of the talc mine, and continued going in the wrong direction until she was past the foot of the lake. Tuesday night she slept on a big stone, and she does not remember much about her travels on Wednesday, but that night she improved her bed somewhat by the addition of some planks. Thursday morning about 10 o'clock she was found by Johnny O'Grady, on the old Grady farm, between two and three miles from her home. She was very tired, hungry and thirsty, and had lost shoes and stockings in the swamp, and must have been barefooted at least 24 hours, so her son thinks. Beyond being stiff and sore, she has since been none the worse of her adventure.

Neighbors to the number of fourteen searched all Tuesday night with ten lanterns. This number was largely increased day and night Wednesday, and many from the village joined in the search, but their operations were around the swamps near the lake, where it was feared she had fallen in. A much more extensive search was being organized Thursday morning, when the welcome news came that she was found.

Wm. Labas, a Warton baker, attempted to commit suicide.

LARGE CROWD SEES ANNUAL CHEMONG Y. C.'S REGATTA

Largest Crowd That Has Ever Witnessed That Event—Excursions From Lindsay, Stoney Lake, Sturgeon Point, Bobcaygeon, etc.—Dinghy Race Won Mr. A. A. Hollingshead, of This City—List of Prize-winners.

The annual Chemong Yacht Club regatta was held yesterday afternoon, under the most favorable circumstances. The weather was ideal, neither too hot nor too cold, and with just enough wind to allow the sailing races to be run off. Certainly the weather man was on his best behavior and did his best for the yacht club. The crowd was enormous. Never has the regatta been greeted with such an universal attendance, as that of yesterday. Excursions were run from several outside points. About two hundred came down from Lindsay and Sturgeon Point on the Otonabee. The Stony Lake brought about the same number from Juniper, while the regular trip of the Manita tended to increase the crowd. Then there were some three hundred people from this city in attendance, it being the Thursday half holiday, a large number of clerks and their friends took advantage of the occasion to journey northward. Some were in 'busses, but the majority drove out in buggies and livery rigs. The pine grove around the hotel was thickly populated with the horses and vehicles of those who drove out to the regatta. While the 'buss service might have been improved, still it was as good as could be expected under the circumstances. The big six-seated auto was to have run hour trips to and from the Park, but it broke down, and three of the ordinary horse 'busses were substituted. These had a busy time of it all afternoon and did a thriving trade.

The course for the races stretched along in front of the high bank from Hopwood's cottage, to the finishing line in front of the Yacht Club's boat house. The latter, as befitted the point of honor, was brightly decorated with different colored flags and bunting, and presented a most pleasing picture. A large number of the private cottages were also en fete for the occasion, and the park as a whole was looking its best. The lake was thickly studded with craft of every description, sail boats, row-boats, launches and canoes, all were present in large numbers, and each had a capacity freight of pretty maidens and stalwart men. During the afternoon the Chemong ladies entertained the visiting ladies to luncheon in the club boat house.

The dinghy race was one of the first to get under way, but owing to the light wind prevailing it did not finish until about half-past four o'clock. Mr. A. A. Hollingshead won, being about fifty yards ahead, but the real race was for second place, between Mr. B. Hopkins, of Lindsay, and Miss M. Hall. Ten feet from the finishing point, the boats were bow for bow, but when they finally touched the finishing line the former was a trifle ahead, and as a result got second place. The win for Mr. Hollingshead gives him the Kawartha Lakes championship Cup until next season.

In the evening a large dance took place in the pavilion, during the progress of which Mr. D. Hughes-Charles presented the prizes to the winners of the different events. About thirty couples were on the floor, and a most enjoyable time was spent. The 57th band, which had been present throughout the afternoon, provided the music for the dancing.

On the whole the regatta was one of the most successful of the year, and the officers in charge are to be congratulated on the success which was attained by their efforts.

Mr. Travers, himself a sailor of note, is enthusiastic over the success of his first regatta experience here.

CAUSE OF DISAGREEABLE ODOR MUST BE REMOVED AT ONCE

Magistrate Dumble Gave Jew Till Next Tuesday to Remove Cause of Obnoxious Odor at Corner of Bethune and Simcoe Streets—Hints at Terrors Untold Should He Neglect to Do So.

At police court this morning, D. Florence was charged with maintaining a public nuisance at the corner of Bethune and Simcoe streets. Florence owns the large warehouse at that point, which was burned down some time ago. It seems there were in the warehouse at the time a large number of old rags, and several hundred bushels of peas. These, when the water from the fire soaked into them, began to rot and a most disagreeable odor prevailed around the neighborhood.

When the case was brought up, Magistrate Dumble wished a close and vivid description of the odor.

"Was it strong?" inquired His Honor.

"Yes," replied the witness, "it could be smelt three blocks away."

"Was it worse than pea soup?"

"Yes," again replied the witness. "I'll never be able to look pea soup in the face again."

"Well, if the obnoxious smell is not removed by next Tuesday it will be worse than ever, for there will be a dead Jew in the middle of it," exclaimed His Honor, and with this awful threat singing in his ears, Florence departed at an increased acceleration.

ALARM WAS TOO AMBITIOUS; WENT TEN POINTS HIGH

The visiting firemen from Orillia were given as effective a demonstration of the Peterborough fire alarm system as could have been desired when they visited the city on their excursion yesterday. It was the intention of the Fire, Water and Light Committee of the City Council to give a demonstration of the facility of the local system, and the quick response of the brigade for the visitter.

An alarm was sent in by Alderman Morgan from Box No. 21 at the corner of George and King streets in the afternoon. The call registered rather weakly at the fire station, and the man on watch said it indicated an alarm from Box No. 31. The firemen responded to 31 instead of 21, and the imaginery fire had gained considerable headway before the men arrived.

The fire chief made an investigation and discovered why the alarm had not been correctly recorded. It appears that one of the firemen was showing the working of the system to a visitor. He pulled the indicator and as he did so the alarm came in showing Box No. 31.

"IT'S ALL UP," SAID HUNTER, WHEN TOLD OF THE MURDER

Lindsay, Aug. 12.—The murder of his wife was mentioned for the first time to Joseph Hunter yesterday at the county jail. Dr. Jeffers, the jail surgeon, and L. V. O'Connor, of the firm of Stewart and O'Connor, lawyers for the defence, broached the matter to Hunter. At first the accused murderer did not seem to comprehend, but after he had been told straightforwardly that he was accused of murder he apparently gave up all hope.

"It's all up!" he said in the tone of a man who has been fighting against a series of unfortunate circumstances and finally gives up.

Hunter did not seem to know why he was being kept in jail until the time the crime was mentioned to him. He did not say anything himself about the murder, and no person had spoken about it to him at all.

"You have shot your wife," Dr. Jeffers said to him.

Hunter seemed dazed and stated that it was all a blank to him. He did not seem to have known his wife to be dead and in her grave.

Yesterday afternoon Hunter was crying like a child when in the jail yard for exercise. Governor Jackson takes him out every morning and allows him a certain amount of liberty in the yard.

This morning Hunter's mother and brother visited him and had a chat for several minutes in the jail. Hunter was brought from his cell and talked with his relatives in another room.

August May Make Record in Number of Marriages

That June is the month of brides is seldom disputed, but in Peterborough this year August is going to give the month of roses a run for the honors in the matrimonial line. There have been over a dozen weddings in the city since the first of August, and the parsons are kept busy tying nuptial knots. Keep your eye on August for a record in Cupid's game.

WAS LOTS OF EXCITEMENT

Horse Couldn't Stand the Sight of the Automobile and Loosened up Some

A runaway on Park street last night caused considerable excitement. A passing motor car frightened a horse so badly that it became uncontrollable and dashed up on the sidewalk with the result that the front wheel of the buggy was smashed against a tree and the driver was thrown out.

He luckily went over the pavement and alighted on a lawn inside the walk, escaping injury. The horse was held and quieted down by a couple of spectators to the accident, its progress being impeded till they arrived by the axle being held against the tree.

Isaac Montgomery, a cattle dealer of Irish Creek, lost $1,050 in Montreal from his pocket.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE ARMOURIES "LAWN"

The local representatives of the Dominion Government are doing a "noble" work in front of the Armouries—so to speak. It took all sorts of hounding to get the old drillshed down after the new one had been built and taken over. It took all sorts of slanging and complaining to get the debris of the late fire cleared away. But the crop of weeds four feet high that succeeded, it took the most cutting sort of remarks to secure their removal. Yet what have we! The stubble of the weeds, a ghastly sight. There is no "pull" in it, probably, or the whole mess would have been cleared up, the lawn seeded down and cut and trimmed, long, long ago, as it ought to have been. What is the good of all this silly bluff about enterprise, etc., etc., when a public park, one of the few pleasure-places for the people in the hot weather, is left in a disgraceful condition. It would not have been touched at all but for the overwhelming ridicule of the people and the independent press. There is no room for a banquet here except possibly on beef and "greens." Brickbats, not bouquets, would be thrown in this case. If the parliamentary representatives will not pay attention to the will and convenience of a people that is being reproved, evidently for having given an adverse majority in the city at the election last October, then it would be advisable for the city itself to take over the task. This piece of neglect must not be allowed to continue. People enjoy the park. Children play on it. Motorists may not need it, but the people do. But under this summer's conditions it has been more like a mullen patch on the shores of Rocky Lake than a piece of park in front of a city's armouries under the "care and protection" of a Dominion Government representative. The Examiner in replying to the plainly justified criticisms has not had one word to say of reproval. Its "fairness" is to be fairly judged thereby. To endeavor to repel the "attack" on the mullen patch by referring to the Normal School lawn is like defending the Quebec bridge slaughter by pointing to Victoria Park. Wake up! Wake up! Let someone with an honest desire to serve the people and not always and forever actuated by a desire to bluff and pose take hold of these things and give the city what it is entitled to, viz., a nice piece of well-kept lawn in front of the Armouries. Surely there are Dominion Government hangers-on enough in the vicinity. If not, then double the number, but give us the park.

PREPARE FOR TROUBLE

The Canadian Courier.

The man-in-the-street is paying but little attention to the U. S. tariff. Most of the writers have declared that raising or lowering that engine of protection makes little difference to Canada. The Montreal Star says: "An American tariff bombardment has no terrors left for Canada." This seems to be the general belief. The Toronto News has been trying to make the public believe that on March 31st next, Canada will pass under the maximum schedule, which is twenty-five per cent. higher than the minimum schedule which we now enjoy. It quotes the Democratic leader of the House of Representatives as saying that when the maximum section goes into effect, the United States tariff will be 27 per cent. higher than the average of the Dingley Bill — which Canadians considered infamous. It argues that Canada must come under the maximum tariff because of the British Preference, the French Treaty and the Ontario embargo on the export of saw logs. Its arguments seem clear and unimpeachable, yet the public is undisturbed.

Is this complacency justifiable? It is quite true that we buy twice as much of the United States as we sell, but we sell nearly ninety million dollars' worth of goods every year to your Uncle Sam. Can this be cut in two without our feeling it? We have steadily cultivated the British and foreign markets, and we may further expand our foreign trade in many ways. Nevertheless it is inconceivable that so great a rise in the United States tariff on Canadian exports can have no effect upon our national prosperity.

Then again, there will be a political as well as an economic result. The political result will be a cry for a higher tariff on United States goods coming into this country. Canada is not going "to take it lying down." She will retaliate. The Government will be forced to take action, and a tariff war will result. There seems to be no other way out.

GOOSEBERRIES PLEASED THE NEWSPAPERMEN

The Warder reportorial staff are exceedingly thankful to Mr. W. M. Robson for a couple of small paper bags of the finest gooseberries ever grown in Ontario. The berries are of an extra fine quality and measure on an average of one and a half inches in diameter. Mr. Robson sold eighty baskets of the choice fruit this season. They are an English berry, and he has two varieties, Whitesmith and Crown Bob.—Lindsay Warder.

Placer gold yielding $116 to the ton is reported found on the G.T.R. at Vermilion River.

OFFICIALS OF CITY LEAGUE HAULED OVER THE COALS

Spectator Alleges That T.A.S. Were Cold-Shouldered—Improper Treatment of Protest—A Question of Management.

To the Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I noticed in last evening's edition of the Examiner that the T.A.S. Baseball Club were allowed to drop out of the Peterborough City League. It seems to me that there was something the matter with this league from the start. That four teams should battle for the championship of the city since the first of the season, and finally one team given sufficient reason to drop out, seems to point to a defect somewhere. In my opinion there was hardly enough interest displayed in the league by the officers.

It is claimed that if the managers of the teams had not changed their grounds from Riverside to the Oval, the four teams would still be running without a hitch. The officers of the league felt rather injured when the managers came to them "to straighten out the tangle," which they themselves brought on. If the officers displayed the zeal that was expected of them when they were elected to govern the league, a meeting would have been called; new grounds selected, and officials appointed to look look afte rthe money taken in, before it was necessary for the teams to do this themselves. The officers themselves saw, or should have seen, that the management of Riverside grounds weren ot dealing fairly with the teams. Their taking such a large percentage of the gate receipts left only a paltry sum to be divided amon gthe four clubs, until finally the amount turned over to the teams was so absurdly low that it was necessary to make a change. Here is where, it seems to me, the league officials should have taken prompt action, and not remained seemingly contented, while the managers of the teams spared them the trouble of looking after new grounds.

This, however, does not seem to me to be the only reason for the hitch, which has come about in the league. There was not the feeling among the teams all year that should have existed. I was present at nearly every game played this year, and from remarks passed around me, as well as from the actions of those witnessing the game, I concluded that the supporters of each team were anxious, not that their own club should win, but that any team other than the T.A.S. should land the championship. Now, why should this be? The T.A.S. team went into the league and won four straight games at the start, on their merits. This put them in a very favorable position towards capturing the cup, and the other teams evidently began to realize that unless new means were adopted, the Abstainers would win out. Now, I do not belong to the T.A.S. Ball Club, nor to any other ball club in the city, but, having played the game myself here once, I was very much interested in these games, and consequently was present at as many as possible. At the first of the year, in fact, I was anxious to see the boys with the grey shirts win out, but I noticed that this team was getting their share of sympathy from the fans, and, in fact, that all the teams were, but the T.A.S. This was clearly shown in the T.A.S. vs. P.A.C. game at Nicholls Oval a few weeks ago, when the majority of the crowd present, encouraged by members of the P. A. C. and other ball clubs, crowded almost in on the diamond, thereby giving the catcher and basemen as little chance as possible to fulfill their duties. The report of the meeting in last night's paper also shows that the road of the T. A.S. to victory would not be strewn with roses if the managers of the other teams could help it. Manager Quinlan entered a protest on this game o nthe ground that the balls were unfit for use, and the official umpire was objected to, mentioning rules to defend his protest. I, myself, happened to be in a position back of the lines, to field one of the fouls, and I thought at the time that the ball I handed wasn't fit to carry a afar as the Oval. Yet, at this meeting the other night Managers Metherel, Pilling and Davidson, all three quite capable of doing the fair thing to the T.A.S. Ball Club, declared that the protest was "altogether of a flimsy nature." and consequently threw it out. These managers are to be congratulated upon their diplomacy in dealing so lightly with this protest, which was based upon the direct infringement on the rules of the game. If the true spirit of clean sport is so unknown to the management of these teams. I heartily agree with and commend Mr. Quinlan for withdrawing the T.A.S. team from the league.

ANOTHER HITCH TO DELAY THE CHAMPIONSHIP FIGHT

Plymouth, Aug. 12.—James J. Jeffries, on arriving to-day from New York, appeared to be surprised when informed that his representative, Sam Berger, had signed an agreement at Chicago yesterday for a championship fight between Jack Johnson and Jeffries.

"No one has any authority," said Jeffries, "to make any such arrangements in my absence. I have nothing to say about my fight with Johnson. The match will come off if I have anything to do with it, unless one or the other of us die. As to date when the fight will occur, it may be in six months and it may be earlier, or even later, but the sooner the better."

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Sam Berger, acting as the representative of James J. Jeffries in arranging for a bout between the former world's champion and the present holder of the pugilistic title, Jack Johnson, was imperturbed to-day by the report that his authority to represent the big fighter had been repudiated by Jeffries.

"Mr. Jeffries has undoubtedly been misinformed as to what was done yesterday and believes I concluded a final agreement with Johnson," said Berger. "I have telegraphed to him just what I did in negotiating preliminary arrangements with Johnson, as he had given me specific authority to do. The agreement signed yesterday is not, and never was considered by me as final. Indeed, in its wording is refers to the settlement of the final details after the club offer is accepted.

"The agreement contains only the preliminary articles and I am satisfied Mr. Jeffries will approve what I have done."

Jack Johnson was arrested to-day for exceeding the automobile speed limit on Michigan avenue, and released on bond.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—President Comiskey, of the Chicago Americans, said last night that business affairs would prevent his holding forfeits in the Jeffries-Johnson match.

"I see I was named as stakeholder," he said, "and while I appreciate being selected, I will have to pass the matter up. I would be too busy to give it attention."

LINES ON SPORT

The big regatta that was to have been held on Little Lake this year——

If another world's championship heavyweight fight is to be pulled off some enterprising concern will want the phonograph rights for the preliminary conversation.

Now that the Jeff-Johnson articles have been signed. Jeffries may object to them on his return and give time for some more hot air exchanges before the fight is definitely arranged.

The New York World suggests that Johnson gets an airship instead of an automobile, so the cops can't interfere with him for [illegible]

[illegible] only take back that kick in the face he gave Katls.

Boxing and wrestling are likely to be a dead letter in Peterborough this fall. W. B. Naylor wants some matches here, but he might as well hold them in private as far as attracting an audience is concerned. A well-conducted six-day walk would pay, however!!!

Johnson's next bout will be in Frisco with Jack O'Brien. The dancing Philadelphian and the champion are slated to go 20 rounds.

It's about time to start talking Rugby organization.

The Barrie baseball team has gone stale and has lost the last three games played. Burton is still pitching good ball.

Rochester has hit the toboggan slide and will be ousted out of first place if the losing streak does not come to an end. Toronto is due to win a few games, having lost five in a row.

A Peterborough man bet five dollars with a friend yesterday that Detroit would win the championship of the American League. Was it a safe wger?

It looks as if baseball was superceding lacrosse and football in this district. There are leagues in nearly all the surrounding town and villages, and the game is flourishing.

Pittsubrg maintains her lead in the National League, but hasn't a great deal to spare. New York and Chicago are both dangeruos contenders for the pennant.

MAX WANTS TO LEARN

What the Wrestling Prospects are in Peterboro' This Year

Who do you think has written to us? None other than our old friend Max Wiley of Rochester. Max will be remembered by the interested ones as having wrestled a match here some time ago with Kennedy of Montreal, in which Max put it over Kennedy extensively and quickly.

What Max wants to know is the prospects for wrestling here this fall and winter. He says he is in a position to have some matches pulled off, and if this city would pay, he would be willing to book them here.

The Review hesitates to give an answer, but anyone wishing to communicate with Mr. Wiley will be able to get him at his address, No. 3429 W. State avenue, Rochester, or in care of the sporting editor of the Rochester Democrat-Chronicle.

SIMPSON MAY BE MANAGER

Mentioned for that Position With the Hamilton Tigers

Hamilton, Aug. 12.—Some changes will be made in the executive at the annual meeting of the Tigers Football Club to-morrow night. W. H. Seymour, the president, has stated that he will resign, and Dr. W. G. Thompson, the manager of the team, has stated that he will also drop out.

Maurice Long is spoken of as president, and Ben Simpson, the star left half, is favored by all for the position of manager. He has announced that he will retire from the game, but should he become manager, he could play also if he decided to continue to play. It is likely that Arthur Turner, who played with Queen's University last year, will take a place on the back division.

The Tigers are planning to give Bobby Kerr a banquet on his return from England at the Royal Hamilton Yacht Club house, and he will be tendered a citizens' banquet at the Hotel Royal a week from Thursday night.

WORLD'S RECORD FOR SPEED

Brockville, Ont., Aug. 12.—The power boat Standard made what was probably the world's record for speed from Ogdensburg to Alexandria Bay, when she covered the 36 miles in exactly 50 minutes. The conditions were perfect. The Standard is entered for the Gold Challenge Cup races, and is regarded as a formidable competitor.

HERE'S A BET FOR SOMEONE

When interviewed this morning regarding the proposed walk. Mr. Reynolds state d that no wager had been made, but he was anxious to make the trip. He was willing to wager $200 against $150 that he could make the trip in 14 1-2 hours and push a four-wheeled cart the entire distance. He will cut off the half hour if his opponent will bet $500 to his $200

THE HOOK

Judging by the newspaper reports everybody who dies is highly respected. The inference is that those who are not respected never die.

We would like to know who is in charge of the aerodrome at Petawawa—the newspaper correspondents or McCurdy or Baldwin? The scribes appear to be getting fresh.

Summer is on the home stretch, and is not likely to break down on the last lap, either

It is hard to decide which is the worst—to follow in the wake of an automobile or to sit beside the sporting editor when he is smoking a Turkish cigarette.

Someone has been cruel enough to suggest that if the newspapers publish many more aviation stories from Petawawa they will be degenerating into fly-papers.

Here are two lines from some "In Memoriam" verses in the Hamilton Spectator

"Sleep, father, sleep, thy toils are o'er,
Sweet be thy rest so oft needed before."

Judging from this we would imagine that the family must have raised an awful row at night.

Barnum and Bailey are not coming to Peterborough this season. The gypsies spoil the circus prospects.

The reason why pumpkins grow so rapidly around Lindsay is because they want to get big enough to get away. And they can't be blamed, either.

An inmate has escaped from the asylum at Hamilton. Even crazy people want to get away from the burg behind the hill.

Society is beginning to hold sway at Petewawa. The aerodrome Baddeck had a "hop" yesterday.

They are going to use odorless oil for sprinkling the streets in Toronto. Why can't they use the same kind in automobiles?

CITY LEAGUE GAMES AT RIVERSIDE PARK TO-MORROW

It's back to Riverside Park for the City Baseball League!!

The change to the Oval has not proved satisfactory, and the park management has decided to take the temporary wanderers back again under the same conditions as formerly.

There will be a double-header at the Ashburnham grounds to-morrow, the excitement commencing at two o'clock, when the T. A. S. team will clash with the Strathconas. The Abstainers want a victory in order to stay in the running for the championship, and "Bill" Metherel says the Commissioners are going to take advantage of to-morrow's opportunity to crawl out of the cellar.

The Park street nine, the league leaders, will meet the West Ends in the second game. This will be a lively contest, as both teams are intent on getting away with the [illegible] end of the score.

The admission to the two games will be fifteen cents. Ladies will be admitted free.

The struggle for the leadership of the league is sizzling hot, and a big crowd should see to-morrow's contests.

The official standing of the league follows:

| | Won. | Lost. |
|---|---|---|
| Park Street | 5 | 2 |
| T. A. S. | 4 | 2 |
| West Ends | 3 | 4 |
| Strathconas | 2 | 6 |

To-morrow's games will be handled by a competent umpire and there will be no discrder or wrangling.

INDIAN WAS TERROR OF THE WHOLE HUDSON BAY DISTRICT

Is Captured With the Aid of the Lasso and Brought to North Bay in Straight Jacket —Tied to Trees at Night

Special to the Review.

North Bay, August 13.—After a terrible journey of 1,000 miles through the northern wilderness, John Chasson, a Cree Indian, in a crazed condition and of enormous size, arrived here, bound hand and foot in charge of Indian and English guards. Chasson was the terror of the whole Hudson Bay district, and many murders are credited to him."

He was finally captured with the aid of a lasso and placed in a straight jacket by a crowd of men.

On the way down he was tied to trees at night. His hair was eighteen inches long.

CHEMONG AUTO-BUS IS CAUSE OF SOME ANXIETY TO FARMERS

It is awful to be afflicted with a nervous temperament. One day last week the big Chemong auto bus was hieing itself homeward, when it encountered a farmer with a waggon full of boxes of cheese coming in the opposite direction. As soon as the farmer saw the "devil-waggon" in the foreground he immediately became greatly agitated and backed his horses off the road. The farmer was going through the swamp at the time and had forgotten the soft and muddy nature of the land. As soon, therefore, as the wheels left the road they sank up to the axles in the soft earth, and despite the straining of the horses, remained firmly imbedded. Finally the man in the auto bus took pity on the poor unfotrunate, and returned to his aid, and after carefully unloading all the cargo of cheese they were able to put the waggon on to the road again

The village was deserted as usual on Wednesday afternoon, the half-holiday. A number spent the afternoon at Round Lake, where the fishing is extra good at the present time. Two loads of young people went to Healey Falls and one load to Trent Bridge, where an enjoyable time was spent.

The doctors hope to save Mr. Craighead's arm, which was so badly mangled at Central Ontario Junction on Tuesday night.

Miss Gertie Young spent Wednesday at Trent Bridge.

STIRLING TO HAVE ELECTRIC LIGHT

On Monday last Stirling carried the Electric Power By-law by the overwhelming majority of 139 to 9. The proposition offered and accepted was from the Seymour Power Co. They guaranteed to supply electric power for ten years at $20 per h.p. The contract terminates at the end of ten years, and if power can then be procured more cheaply elsewhere the village can discontinue the contract, or, if satisfied, can renew it. A 24-hour-a-day service will be supplied and the town, as well as having every street lighted, will have power for sale, thereby being in a position to hold out inducements to manufacturing concerns.

EXCURSION TO LINDSAY

The Otonabee Navigation Company ran an excursion to Lindsay on the steamer Otonabee on August 10th, the day after Civic Holiday, but as a great many found it impossible to take the trip so soon after the holiday, another trip is being held on Tuesday, August, 17th in response to popular demand.

To-day the second excursion is being run to Peterborough under the auspices of the Woodmen of the Woorld, in Lindsay, and will reach here about 7 o'clock. It is stated that over 400 boarded the Otonabee at Lindsay this morning.

LARGE NUMBER AT TENT MEETING

The tent service last night was very well attended. The leader was Mr. W. J. Whelen. Rev. Mr. Coon led in prayer and Mr. Huycke sang a solo. Mr. A. G. Young, the speaker, took his text from Numbers 32, 20, 23.

Times of seeking security are very often times of danger, said the speaker. It was so with the subject of the text. It is not because men are blest temporally or seemingly securely for the future that they are safe, but they safe when they lay themselves at the feet of the Captain of their Salvation and go forth in his strength to conquer sin and help others. He that concentrates his whole effort on himself will lose himself. He that gives out for God and humanity will gain peace and joy and life everlasting.

To-night Mr. W. J. Whelen will be the leader and Mr. A. G. Young will lead. All are welcome.

HOW THE SISTERS WENT TO DEATH

The inquest this morning on the body of Sister Marie Denise, of the Convent of St. Felix de Valois (nee Marie-Louise Caroline Merizzi, of Napierville), one of the two nuns who were drowned near Bordeaux on Tuesday, after falling from the C.P.R. bridge, established the pathetic circumstances that the sisters were holding hands when the one next the engine of the pilgrim train from Montreal was struck by the cow-catcher.

Only three witnesses were called.

The engine driver, Amedee Biron, said he saw on turning the curve from Bordeaux a black mark in the distance on the bridge. That was the nuns. He blew the whistle and put on the emergency brake. The sisters were on the side of the fireman, so he did not see the locomotive strike them.

Percy Denis, the fireman, said he saw the front part of the engine strike one of the sisters. The one next the river was holding the one next the engine by the hand when the latter was struck and so pulled the other with her into the river.

A pilgrim named Joseph Mineau, who was on board the train, testified that he felt the vibration of the brakes being put on and heard the whistle blow.

The jury returned a verdict of excusable homicide.

The body of the other nun, Sister Marie Herve (nee Isabella Parent), who belonged to the same convent, has not yet been recovered.—Witness.

INCREASE IN TRAFFIC ON TRENT CANAL

Ottawa, Aug. 12.—While trade conditions generally show improvement and increases all along the line, the volume of traffic on the canals this year so far has decreased quite noticeably in comparison with last year. Up to the end of June the Soo canal traffic had fallen off by 1,182,102 tons, the Welland by 63,953, the St. Lawrence canals by 77,869, and Ottawa canals by 30,750. Two increases were 7,500 on the Rideau and 10,500 on the Trent. The grain movement is not so heavy this year, while the strike on the Great Lakes and the accident at the Soo have doubtless exercised an influence. The decrease, however, is in practically every line of freight and it is rather difficult to explain. The July showing so far as the figures have been received, is better.

WOMEN WREAK DIRE VENGEANCE

London, Aug. 12.—Details of the lynching of a young and beautiful woman by a crowd of jealous members of her own sex are to hand from St. Petersburg.

The affair took place in the village of Veleckhi last week. The victim had incurred the hatred of the other women in the village by her flirtations with the men of the neighborhood, both married and single, and feelings reached a climax when it became known that on her account one of the young men of the village had broken his promise to marry another girl.

On coming to the church the other day the women, both old and young, threw themselves upon the flirt and in spite of her cries for mercy tore all her clothes off. They then dragged her through the streets of the village by the hair of her head, beating and stoning her mercilessly.

At first the men laughed, but when they saw how savagely the girl was being maltreated they attempted to rescue her. The infuriated women, however, drove them off, and then dragged the unhappy victim, who was by now a mass of wounds, to a large tree just outside the village, where they hanged her to one of the branches and then lighted a fire of brushwood under her. When the police arrived on the scene they found the victim of the women's fury lying dead under the tree, blackened to a cinder.

NEAT WORK COGAN

Prof. Octavius Charles Cogan, who went through the Boer war, and who incidentally has all the appearance of a bush fighter, gave a splendid exhibition of slack wire walking across the canal last night, which was witnessed by 300 people. Cogan went through the hoop, danced, tossed stones, stretched out, and did other tricks in approved style. He has offered to donate $10 to the man who can pull him off the wire into the canal to-night in a tog-of-war.—Brantford Expositor.

HOLD-UP CASE CAME UP IN THE POLICE COURT TO-DAY

While Going Through Central Park Late Last Monday Night Geo. Desbrow Was Held Up by Two Young Men, Who Demanded His Money—Trial Conducted This Afternoon.

The case against Fallon and Connors of attempted robbery of Thomas Desborough came up in the police court this morning. Mr. G. N. Gordon appeared for the defence. Mr Desborough took the box first and told his story, which was as follows:—

"I am a baker by trade, and am living at the C. P. R. station just at present. I begin work at 11.30 every night. Last Monday evening I was going to my work as usual, and in order to take a short cut I went through Central Park. When about half way through the park I sat down on a seat to light my pipe. There were three men sitting on a seat close by, and presently one of them walked over and sat down beside me. He asked me what my name was, and then a little later on what I had on me. I told him I had nothing for him, and in order to get out of the way I walked off. He followed me, however, and catching up to me, grabbed me and began to pummel me, loosening one of my teeth and making my nose bleed. At the same time he began to clutch at my pocket. I defended myself, and he called for his comrade. Knowing that the two of them would be too much for me, I called for help, crying "Police! Murder!" At that the two became frightened and took to their heels. As soon as I had reached Mr. Lush's bakery, where I work, I telephoned for the police. Fallon followed me up George street for three or four blocks.

POLICEMAN NEWHALL.

P. C. Newhall, when called to the stand, said that he was coming down George street on Monday night when suddenly he heard someone call "Murder." He stopped, and immediately afterwards saw two men running across the park towards the northwest. They were followed by a third man, who afterwards turned around and came back toward him, to where the officer had ran up near the band stand and recognized the man as Connors and followed him for a while. Soon after Desborough's call to Lush's bakery was received, and the policeman named the man on the spot, from the description which was given. On Wednesday afternoon P. C. Newhall arrested him. At first he denied any knowledge of the affair, but later on he confessed that while he knew about it, he had had no hand in it.

About eight o'clock on the same day P. C. Newhall captured Fallon and brought him to the station. Mr. Desborough went to the station a few minutes later and recognized him as one of his assailants.

The next witness for the Crown was Mr. Harry Lush, of Lush's bakery. He said that on the night in question Mr. Desborough had come to him with his face all bleeding and generally used up, and had told as he had in court. He believed the facts were as given, as Mr. Desborough's statements could always be relied upon.

At the time of going to press, Mr. Gordon was still cross-examining P. C. Newhall, and the magistrate had not given his verdict in the case.

THE "THIEF" CAN TRAVEL SOME

Went Twenty Miles in One Hour and Fifteen Minutes

Following his success at the Sturgeon Point regatta on Thursday, when he easily won the motor boat race, Mr. Clifford Scott, accompanied by Mr. C. W. Burgoyne, went down to the Stony Lake regatta with his launch, "The Thief," which was held on Monday last, and defeated the best boats there, winning a handsome brass set of signal lamps. On the return trip "The Thief" made distance from Buckhorn to Bobcaygeon, twenty miles, in one hour and fifteen minutes, and from Bobcaygeon to the Falls, seventeen miles, in one hour and ten minutes, without any special pushing. The launch was built by Mr. Jesse Perrin of the Falls, who understands the launch-building business from A to Z. Part of the credit for the good showing of "The Thief" must be given to the owner of the boat, Mr. Scott, whose skill in the handling of launches is well known. He and Mr. Alvin Gould left yesterday—Thursday—for the Chemong regatta. —Fenelon Falls Gazette.

DEFENCE CONFERENCE WOULD UNITE THE COLONIAL FORCES

Decision Reached by Delegates in England is That the Troops of the Colonies Should Have Training Uniform With Those of Old Country.

London, Aug. 14.—One great homogeneous Imperial British army, uniformly trained and equipped, is to be the outcome of the Imperial conference on the naval and military defences of the Empire held at the Foreign Office the latter part of July.

In general terms, the plan provides that all troops of self-governing colonies shall undergo precisely the same training as the home regulars in order to be ready to take their places beside the latter whenever and wherever necessity may arise.

Military training colleges along the lines of the staff college at Camberly are to be established in the oversea dominions, and there is to be a continuous interchange of officers from all parts of the Empire so as to insure absolute uniformity of organization and training.

In a recent speech outlining the probable strength of this army of the Empire, War Secretary Haldane estimated that the United Kingdom, Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa could furnish a total of six divisions. This is equivalent to twenty-three army corps, which is the strength of the German army.

The Canadian Associated Press understands that the results of the military defence discussions of the Imperial Defence Conference are regarded with the highest satisfaction by the Imperial Government, and the Army Council there are certain the question of detail, which it is expedient to withhold from the general knowledge, but the main result of the military side of the conference is a complete acquiescence by the oversea delegates in the Government's proposals, the plans of which provide for the complete interchangeability of forces.

Bradford, Eng., Aug. 14.—In a speech here last night Secretary for War Haldane expressed the greatest satisfaction that the Imperial Conference on the naval and military defences of the Empire had arrived at an agreement.

He announced that while Lord Kitchener, the newly-appointed inspector-general of the Mediterranean forces, is in Australia, Lieut.-Gen. Sir John French, commander of the First Army Corps, is going to Canada to work out the details of the plan there.

Lieut.-Gen. Sir John Denton French was one of the few brilliant commanders in the South African war, and his name, through his exploits in that campaign, is well known to Canadians. He will not be 57 years of age until Sept. 28 next, but his distinctions are many—K.C.M.G., created 1902; K.C.B., created 1900; G.C.V.O., created 1905; D.C.L., Hon. Oxon.; LL.D., Cambridge; general officer, commander-in-chief of the first class; lieutenant-colonel 19th Hussars since 1902; commanding the First Army Corps since 1901.

Beresford Not Conclusive.

London, Aug. 14.—The Imperial Defence Committee's sub-committee which was appointed to investigate the recent criticisms made by Admiral Lord Charles Beresford of the state of the navy, has issued its report, which is signed by Premier Asquith, the Earl of Crewe, the Secretary of the Colonies; Viscount Morley, Secretary for India; Sir Edward Grey, Secretary for Foreign Affairs, and Richard Burdon Haldane, Secretary for War.

The report partially exonerates the Admiralty of Admiral Beresford's charges of having endangered the country by the unwise organization and distribution of the fleet, and having too few cruisers and small craft and inefficient war plans, but it finds that both the Admiralty and Admiral Beresford are blameable for inharmonious co-operation.

Record Aeroplane Flight.

Mineola, L.I., Aug. 14.—What is said to be a record cross-country distance flight for an aeroplane in this country was made by C. Foster Willard in the Golden Flyer yesterday when he covered 12 miles in 19 1-2 minutes.

A Long Hoof Back Home.

Kingston, Aug. 14.—John Wech, aged 60, walked from Toronto and was arrested for being drunk and disorderly on the street. He said he would hoof it back to Toronto, and was allowed to go.

RUMOR IS STARTLING

Supposed Murdered Man May Still be Alive—Was Maurice Ryan Innocent?

Whitefish, Ont., Aug. 14.—Was Maurice Ryan hanged an innocent man at North Bay, June 5, for the murder of his brother, Joseph Ryan, or it is mere coincidence that the following autograph was found on the walls of Whitefish Station yesterday afternoon: "Joseph Ryan, Rutland, Vermont, June, 1908, westbound." The signature was among hundreds of other autographs.

At the trial a letter was introduced, said to have been written by Joseph Ryan from St. Alban's, Vermont, and also evidence that he had been seen at North Bay in February, 1908.

Maurice Ryan stoutly protested his innocence at the trial, and "I am innocent" were his last words on the gallows.

The autograph is not a hoax, and while Ryan was known as a poor writer, it may have been written for him by others. An effort will be made to secure specimens of his handwriting from the chief of police of North Bay for comparison.

It was never proven conclusively that the skeleton found in the woods, and alleged to be all that remained of Joseph Ryan, was so in fact.

TRADE RELATIONS WITH WEST INDIES

STRIKERS AT FORT WILLIAM DEPRIVED OF THEIR WEAPONS

Soldiers Make a General Seizure of Arms, But Fail to Find Any Large Quantity of Guns or Ammunition—150 French-Canadians Imported.

Fort William, Aug. 14.—With 150 local men of the 96th Militia Regiment and 70 men of the regular Mounted Rifles from Winnipeg on duty, there were no signs of trouble from the striking C.P.R. freight handlers yesterday. All parts of the company's sheds are being guarded by the soldiers.

The first work done by the military yesterday was to clear a mob of strikers from the streets around the Avenue Hotel, Col. Steel's headquarters. Some of the strikers took refuge in a deserted building, but were driven out without an argument, after which a big batch of the strikers, who are all foreigners, were rounded up and searched for concealed weapons. Only one man was found with a revolver and he was arrested. A search of the houses tenanted by the strikers, was then begun, but the ammunition and firearms located and seized proved comparatively small. A wagon load of liquor was confiscated from an Italian store.

Yesterday afternoon 150 French-Canadian laborers were brought in by the C.P.R. to act as strike-breakers, their train being run along side the cars where the soldiers are quartered.

General Superintendent Burry in a statement yesterday said:

"Things are clearing now and the Keewatin, passenger boat will go out this afternoon and the Alberta will go on time to-morrow. We don't anticipate further interruption of traffic with the troops here. We are ready to act under the Lemieux Act and rest on that. These men quit without notice and without any effort to confer with the company. We attribute this to the Greek element, of which there are some two hundred among the dock strikers. We had one thousand men altogether, the balance being Huns and Italians. The Greeks told them on Monday they must quit work or they would shoot them, adding that they were going to hold the company up.

"They did not make any formal demands on the company, and have not done so yet."

More Troops In Readiness.

Winnipeg, Aug. 14.—The 90th Regiment yesterday received orders to be in readiness to proceed to Fort William should further rioting occur.

WOMEN TO CONTROL VOTES

London, Aug. 14.—The Times' Wellington correspondent cables statistics indicative that within twenty-five years the majority of the voters in New Zealand will be women. In 17 electorates the women already enrolled outnumber the men.

The Attorney-General, speaking on the subject yesterday, said there was a reduced degree of domesticity among the New Zealand women.

The women were less inclined to make home their only sphere, and their sympathies and activities were widening.

He is of the opinion that when the reform of the liquor trade, for which women have long been struggling, had been achieved, their zeal would be diverted toward securing other social and political reforms.

Generally, he thought, their influence would be for good.

PROBABILITIES.

FARMER FORETOLD HIS OWN DEATH

Goderich, Aug. 14.—Nixon Sturdy, a wealthy Goderich Township farmer, was accidently killed Thursday evening at Foster's bridge near Homesville on the Maitland River.

Sturdy had two minor accidents during the day, and in premonition, remarked at dinner, "It seems as if I am going to be killed to-day."

PRAYER REVEALS SECRET OF DEATH

Ashabula, Ohio, Aug. 14.—His little playmate's prayer being overheard by the child's mother Thursday night yesterday resulted in the finding of the body of eight-year-old Sammy Walker, who was drowned in the Ashtabula River Wednesday while playing on a raft with other boys. Searchers found the body in the river after hunting through the night on the alarm sounded by the mother of the child, who had offered this prayer.

"Dear God, be good to Sammy. Forgive him, God, because he fell in the river; he was only a little boy and couldn't help it. And please forgive me, too, God, for being with him when he drowned."

Sammy Walker's playmates tried to rescue the child, but failed and were too frightened at the tragedy to tell of it.

HE SAVED HIS SISTER'S LIFE

Morrisburg, Aug. 14.—While some little girls were bathing in the St. Lawrence River, near Point Iroquois, Beryl Pelton, daughter of the editor of St. Lawrence News, stepped into a deep hole, with a treacherous undercurrent.

She was swept off her feet in a moment and was being carried out into the main current when her young sister, Norma, aged 11, standing on the bank, without a moment's hesitation rushed into the river with her clothes and shoes on, and, wading out nearly to her neck, succeeded in reaching her older sister, and with difficulty pulled her into shallow water, thus saving her life.

TWO TRAINS COME TO GRIEF AT SAME TIME NEAR TORONTO

Passenger Train Runs Into an Open Switch at West Toronto and Engine and Tender Are Derailed—Another Train Wrecked at the Don.

Toronto, Aug. 14.—An unlocked switch caused the derailment of the Grand Trunk flyer from Sarnia tunnel a few hundred yards north of St. Clair avenue crossing at 7.30 last evening. Fortunately no one was hurt.

The accident happened just before dusk. The train, which consisted of engine 1,005, tender, two baggage cars, five passenger coaches and one Pullman, was running about twenty miles an hour, and when the locomotive passed over the switch, the lever sprung, sending the engine down the main line and the tender and cars on to the siding. Both engine and tender were wrenched from the track, but the coaches remained on the siding uninjured. Engineer Dan. Liddell immediately applied the emergency brakes and stopped the train in a short distance, but not before two hundred feet of roadbed had been cut to pieces. Ties were smashed to splinters, and the heavy eighty-five pound rails were twisted like so much wire.

Almost at the same time, cars attached to the Grand Trunk transfer engine jumped the rails of the Don diamond and piled up across the tracks blocking the G.T., C.P., and C.N.R. lines. The engine was shunting the cars ahead of it down the belt line towards the city when the leading truck failed to take the point of a cross-track, with the result that two cars were shoved along the roadbed for about 100 feet and entirely wrenched from their trucks. The upper parts of the cars were badly damaged. Another car loaded with lumber and a fifth, loaded with bricks, were but slightly damaged.

SLEPT ON BRINK NIAGARA FALLS

Niagara Falls, Ont., Aug. 14.—As he lay asleep on the river bank Thursday night, a movement of two inches would have hurled Patrick Whitney to a horrible death over the precipice. He was prevented from making this move by Constable F. Bell who dragged him back from his perilous situation and locked him up. Whitney came here to spend the day and feeling tired sought rest on the river bank. During his sleep he rolled near the edge and was just about to roll over the precipice when Bell rescued him.

A note inside a straw hat found at Inspiration Point yesterday morning indicates that another man has committed suicide.

"I am tired of life. (signed) C.H.K." the note read.

GRAND TRUNK HAS SURPLUS

London, Aug. 14.—Accounts of the G.T.R. for the half-year to June 30 show surplus of £379,800, and with £12,200 brought forward, this will admit payment of the full dividend on the 4 per cent. guaranteed stock and on the first preference stock, leaving about £9,000 carried forward.

Heroic Police "Graft."

Omaha, Neb., Aug. 14.—When Policeman Horner recovers he will find that he is wearing the skin of eight men on his back. Some two weeks ago, while arresting a burglar, Horner was shot in the back. The Grand Trunk officials will be met at Vancouver by President Howard Eliot of the Northern Pacific and L. C. Gilman, assistant to Louis W. Hill, president of the Great Northern.

TWO MEN ARE KILLED IN PIT

Huntsville, Aug. 14.—Caught under a mass of falling gravel in the pit in which they were working, James Hughes and John Beswick met death some time yesterday afternoon.

When they had not returned to town by seven o'clock last night, a search party, fearing an accident, organised and hurried to the pit, two miles distant.

Beswick was found under nine inches of gravel and Hughes under about 15 inches. The mass had fallen several feet and the men would not know what struck them.

Hughes leaves a widow and three children.

Here For a Day.

Toronto, Aug. 14.—Yesterday he was lauded as a hero, to-day he is decried as a thief. That was the position of James R. Heard, when he appeared in police court yesterday morning. Heard was spieler for the Gem Theatre before the Hanlan's Point fire wiped out that place of amusement. It was he who saved the cashier of the place, Miss M. English. He was remanded a week on a charge of stealing two suit cases during the fire.

Stolen Mail Bag Found.

Brighton, Aug. 14.—The mail bag stolen from Brighton depot on June 2 was found yesterday on Johnson's farm, about a mile east of Brighton, by Thomas Kenny. It has been cut completely in two, and most of the letters had been opened. It is claimed that a gold watch and diamond ring was in this particular mail, but no trace of them, except the wooden box, was found.

Where Uncle Tom Was Sold.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 14.—The court house at Washington, Mason County, in which "Uncle Tom" of Uncle Tom's Cabin fame, was sold, was struck by lightning, and destroyed yesterday. The building was erected in 1794.

WHAT THE PHRASE MEANS

The Georgian Bay Canal scheme has failed to fool the people into further extravagance. Periods of depression have their good points. "Sweet are the uses of adversity." We never saw the real meaning of this proverb before, but in conjunction with the Georgian Bay Canal and similar schemes it has a meaning all its own and as clear as the eye of an ox. That we are already going behind at the rate of 3 or 4 million dollars a month on capital account is a mere bagatelle to the powers at Ottawa, who, however, when they run up against the new American tariff higher against Canada than ever; the famous Dingley tariff was, will not have "sic a gran" conceit o themsels." The year 1909 will be succeeded by a [illegible] that will prove still more dreadful if a more lively sense of Canada's powers and responsibilities in matters of trade is not shown at Ottawa.

WHAT THE QUEBEC LIBERALS WANT

Here! from the Ottawa Journal is the root of the matter, in a few words. "La Presse, of Montreal, keeps thundering away against Canadian participation in Imperial defence. We would bet dollars to doughnuts that if the Province of Quebec were a French-Canadian republic nothing less than a Quebec militia of a quarter of a million men would suit La Presse. It is not defence the heart of La Presse objects to, but the Empire."

The Toronto News quotes as above from the Ottawa Journal, one of the most responsible journals in Canada. And what it says is true. The French Canadians look to Great Britain because they need to be protected in the course of their racial development in Quebec and elsewhere. American domination would end their racial autonomy. So would Imperial federation. They would become part and parcel, merely, of a populous country, with with no particular racial future. In Canada they, naturally, expect some day to be paramount. They increase rapidly, and their leaders are the leaders of Canadian national government. They are a fine people, and their racial aspirations are, of course, not unnatural, but their hatred of imperial federation shows that they are not really desirous of being part of a British empire. It is a great pity. It will mean a struggle in the future which will leave many heartburnings and be the breeding-ground of much trouble. The craze for racial distinction is one of the most stubborn obstacles to universal brotherhood, and world-wide peace. It has not one redeeming principle to excuse the existence anywhere of its narrow vanity or its sheeplike herding together. It forms the crude basis of still cruder boasting, and while the good deeds of the father should be sounded in the ears of his offspring as an example, what better are the good deeds of one nationality than those of another? The sun shines upon one race as upon another. The rain falls likewise. There are no "chosen people" now. Let us give over this intolerable racial vanity and substitute brotherly love. It will allay much not unreasonable irritation.

AN EXTRAORDINARY POSITION

The Toronto Globe is quoted by the French-Canadian journals with great approval for having proclaimed that NO MATTER WHAT THE CIRCUMSTANCES, the supreme command of Canadian forces must remain in Canada. That this is the position of The Globe and its political leaders, no one will deny, but we do not hesitate to affirm that it is not the position of Conservatives and their political leaders. It is, moreover, an inconceivable position for a journal that would give the public the idea that it it not making slowly and surely for Canadian independence. To show what we will presume to call the impropriety of The Globe's position, let us take an instance. In the Boer war, would England have, for one minute, tolerated The Globe's idea of the supremacy of Canadian authority over its own boasted aids to the cause of Empire? It would seem as if The Globe has the susceptibilities of some portion of its own party in view, when it goes the length of asserting in such flagrant terms its hostility to British command in case of Imperial peril. What if Japan attacked Canada? Would The Globe still insist? If the facts of the case are looked at either sentimentally, or, as in the supposed case of attack upon Canada they show themselves to be entirely inconsistent with The Globe's idea. Let us preserve our civil and commercial autonomy by all means. There is no necessity of sacrificing them. But to say that we are also supreme in our military affairs is proclaiming a full measure of Canadian independence, both civil and military. Will loyal Canadian people acquiesce in such a dangerous doctrine? No wonder the Montreal Star has been aghast at The Globe's strange tactics since the conference in London. This question will be an issue in the near future if we are not much mistaken.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The boy Shah of Persia is determined to leave his post. He wants to stay with his father and mother. A boy with such a healthy disposition as that would probably make a good ruler.

"On the occasion of the terrible tragedy of Tuesday last upon the Canadian Pacific bridge joining Bordeau to Park Laval, M. C. Chaudire Campeau, of Ottawa, who directed the pilgrimage to St. Anne de Beaupre, and who from this seat was witness of the accidental death of reverend Sisters Maire-Denise and Maire-Herve, gave absolution "in articulo mortis" to the two unfortunate Sisters at the very moment of their lamentable end."—La Patrie (translation).

A great authority recently remarked that the struggle is now on between Reason and Authority as never before. From "authority" there is no appeal. It is to be taken for what it says it is, and there is no denying or criticising it. There is no compromise. Hence the "struggle" likely to ensue, and thus referred to. One side or the other will be victor when it is all over, and it is intensely interesting to watch the marshalling of the forces, the aspirations of Democracy on the one side, and the unyielding dogma of Theocracy on the other. The rule of the people by themselves under God in all branches of their destiny or the rule of God direct, as interpreted by those who say that they are commissioned to speak for Him, over an obedient and devout people.

Calling figures to our aid, the United States shares of our trade has risen from 44 per cent. in 1880-1890, to 60 in 1890-1900. By the same comparison of decade, Great Britain's share of our buying trade has fallen from 42 to 25 per cent in spite of the Preferential tariff. Our purchases from the United States have gradually risen and our purchases from Great Britain have gradually fallen—comparatively speaking. As buying is a problem as well as selling, our buying will present greater difficulties as well as our selling. In other words, when this tariff war begins, our foreign trade must fall off very considerably. This is not something which we may contemplate with equanimity.

It is easy to say that we shall find other markets in which to sell—and other markets in which to buy. Of course we shall. But during the readjustment we shall suffer as we did between 1865 and 1866. It will not break us but it may temporarily discourage us. It will ultimately help the Canadian manufacturer and ultimately benefit the British manufacturer, but it will seriously upset the present avenues of commerce.

To say that we can stand it if the United States can is foolish. If the United States did not sell us a dollar's worth of goods, that country would not greatly feel the change. For eighty millions of people to lose $800,000,000 of sales is not so disastrous as for seven millions of people to lose $80,000,000 of sales.—Canadian Courier.

"The passage of this machine across the Straits of Dover," said Sir Hiram Maxim to the Telegraph, "carrying its own weight, including the petrol, the water, and the man, has demonstrated that aeroplanes are able to lift and carry vastly more weight per square foot than mathematicians have heretofore been able to account for; in fact, the lifting power of a well-made aeroplane sailing through the air at a high velocity is greater than can be accounted for by any formula that I know of, and this machine has certainly lifted and carried more than twenty times what would have been supposed possible a few years ago by anyone who relied implicitly upon Newton's law. I think now there can be no question as to the facility of flying machines. What M. Bleriot has done is very creditable, and really marks a step in advance.

"Aeroplanes," added Sir Hiram, "have their limitations. They cannot travel any great distance because they cannot carry the fuel necessary. When someone can invent an engine that will convert into dynamic energy three-fourths of the energy in the petrol, then aeroplanes will be able to cross the Atlantic, but such a motor is not at present in sight. At present we are quite satisfied to get one-fifth part of the energy and waste four-fifths of it."

M. Bleriot, who is the inventor of a famous motor lamp which bears his name, is said by the Telegraph to have spent about £20,000 on experiments in aviation during the past nine years. His manufacture of aeroplanes has been the first of that kind in France. An admirer says of him that he keeps very much to himself, and is not at all communicative. He works very quietly for a while, and then one day he says, "I am doing this," and when he speaks thus it may safely be assumed that the thing is certain.

THERE THEY WERE STANDING ON THE WHARF

Lindsay, August 13—The excursion under the auspices of the Woodmen of the World, per steamer Otonabee this morning, to Peterborough, and return by train, was one of the largest excursions that ever pulled out of the local dock. The steamer had on then full load, 444, and besides some fifty or sixty people stood on the wharf unable to gain admittance to the boat. Custom Officer Lowanborough was right on deck with his little book and pencil and took count of every person that went on board, and as soon as the specified number that the boat is allowed to carry got on board he quickly pulled in the gang plank and allowed no more to board. Entreaties were useless, and after a good deal of wrangling the boat pulled out bound for its destination. As the day was delightful for such an outing, no doubt the trip through the lower waters was much enjoyed by all.

EXCURSION TO LINDSAY

The Otonabee Navigation Company ran an excursion to Lindsay on the steamer Otonabee on August 10th, the day after Civic Holiday, but as a great many found it impossible to take the trip so soon after the holiday, another trip is being held on Tuesday, August, 17th in response to popular demand.

To-day the second excursion is being run to Peterborough under the auspices of the Woodmen of the World, in Lindsay, and will reach here about 7 o'clock. It is stated that over 400 boarded the Otonabee at Lindsay this morning.

SOME DAMAGE DONE BY HAIL IN THE CANADIAN WEST

Mr. W. Kennedy has favored the Review with the following interesting letter from Melita, Manitoba:

This is a village about 25 miles south of Pipestone. It has a population of about 800. It is located on rising ground, and the streets are wide and clean. It has five elevators and all are required to meet the demands of the farming community, as it is a good farming district. The grain is looking fine, and the brightest hopes are entertained of reaping an abundant harvest.

The hail has done some damage, but the sweep of the storm was limited and not general. Some houses in the village were struck by lightning, and a horse killed, but the damage was slight. The grain fields mostly escaped.

Melita is well supplied with churches and ministers. There are four churches, so that if all attend the public services of the sanctuary, men, women and children, they would not average 200 for each church. The attendance on a Sabbath morning is very small, and I should think, discouraging, to the ministers who have to preach to more pews than people.

The improvements since I was up here, six years since, is everywhere to be seen, admired and enjoyed. In the putting up of fences, the cultivation of land, in the construction of roads, and in the erection and enlargement of fences, houses and the improvement of stock. I have attended two small fairs, and the horses and cattle were a credit to the farmers and to the county.

PIERSON.

This is a small village about 14 miles west of Melita, in the south-western part of Manitoba. It has three elevators and three churches, and a population of not quite 200.

All the churches have service at the same time, three ministers preaching to three congregations that do not number 200 when all are told, and yet the churches are calling loudly for more ministers in the west. What a shame. What a waste of public money; and what a waste of ministerial labor. Is it any wonder that our young men prefer to go to China and Japan under these circumstances? A meeting of Christian workers is much needed here. A large quantity of land here has been bought up by the American speculators, and thousands of acres of good land has not yet been touched by the plough. I have just been out to see a field of wheat containing 300 acres sown on the sod, never ploughed the second time. To plough 300 acres means something. The crop is likely to be fairly good. It would have been better if the land had been properly cultivated. It is possible to grasp too much. The weather is fine and has been for some weeks. Some grain will be out next week.

TRYING TO MAKE THOSE QUARANTINED PAY THE BILLS AT KINGSTON

City Trying to Collect "Epidemic Accounts"—Those Billed Have Joined Hands and Are Going to Make Fight—Letter Read From Peterborough.

Kingston, Aug. 13.—Last evening the second meeting of those billed for the recent epidemic took place at the Iroquois Hotel. The parlors were too small this time, and the meeting was held in the large dining-room. Dr. Evans occupied the chair and Mr. C. White acted as secretary.

Letters were read from Chatham, Sarnia, Toronto, Windsor, London, Ottawa, St. Catharines, Belleville, Trenton, Hamilton, Peterborough and Brantford, Ont., all of which had passed through a similar epidemic, and in every one it was stated that the municipality had paid all bills and never entertained the remotest intention of billing individual patients. Some of the cities written to expressed surprise in their letters at the thought of Kingston attempting any such procedure as asking the unfortunate personal sufferer to pay for an epidemic which visited the city unasked and uninvited.

Legal opinion was also read at the meeting which gave every encouragement to the billed, being to the effect that the accounts could not be collected. It was pointed out that every step taken by the Board of Health at the time was illegal from forcing patients out of their homes against their wishes to taking them to the isolation hospital located in another municipality.

The absence of all particulars in the bills sent out, and the attempt on the part of every city official to declare his personal opposition to the procedure was presented to the meeting and the billed ones are now more determined than ever to stand fast against the collection scheme.

Several new names were added to the list last night and the meeting adjourned until next Wednesday evening. In the meantime the mayor and members of the finance committee will be present for their views as to the collection of those accounts.

The last of the Halifax sealing fleet left on its nine months' cruise yesterday.

THE AMINETIES OF JOURNALISM

(Buffalo Courier.)

For a long time the Atlanta Constitution and the Atlanta Journal have been regarded as among the foremost newspapers of the South in ability, influence and usefulness. Ordinarily they are civilized and sensible, and have respect for the amenities of newspaper life. But for some unexplained reason they were completely knocked out last week by brainstorms of a most virulent, violent type, culminating in a phenomenal eruption last Friday.

On that morning of that bad-luck day Editor Clark Howell of the Constitution invited his readers to have a look at some of the episodes in the life of Editor James R. Gray of the Journal, and he ended his description of the exhibit by saying: "We realize fully the utter futility of controversy with a hopeless ass, to whom truth and honor are but empty words, but at the same time share the only comforting reflection that follows the bandying of words with a pole-cat—that now everybody in the neighborhood will know him by his smell."

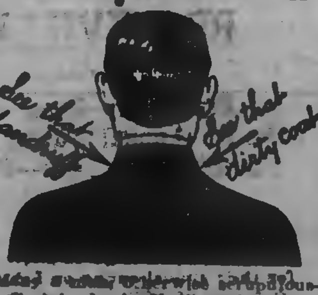
On the afternoon of the same day Editor James R. Gray of the Journal headed his columns with a word picture of Editor Clark Howell of the Constitution, some impressions of which may possibly be obtained from the following paragraph: "Caught red-handed as a fakir, convicted of a stupidity which cannot distinguish between public affairs that are legitimate and private affairs that are not legitimate subjects of controversy, and perverting even those private affairs with wilful mendacity, he exposes his true character to the people of Georgia as a fool, a scoundrel and a liar."

It is doubtful, however, if anything in the above exceeds in beauty the following editorial from the Examiner, especially where it uses the noble phrase, "platitudinous pig-wash," with reference to the Review's editorials:

(The Examiner.)

It seems to require a surgical operation, supplemented by a sledge hammer, to get the idea of a joke into the head of the editor of The Review. A day or two ago The Examiner, in a way intended to be jocular, referred to the fact, or rather fancy, that Sir James Whitney had gone into the hotel business — had put a Government official in charge of the temporarily deranged affairs of the Royal Hotel, Bobcaygeon. Whereupon, the editor took the matter seriously—as seriously as he is capable of taking anything—and poured forth half a column, be the same more or less, of platitudinous pig-wash and burlesque indignation upon its devoted head, bewailing the Examiner's heartlessness and want of sensibility in making so disrespectful bonifacial reference to the great Premier of Ontario. The Examiner is also excoriated for the crime of making light of a tragic occurrence. All of which is very funny. The Examiner intended the reference as a joke—a little one it may be—"but mine own." The "long vacation" seems to have concentrated the fatuousness of the silly season into one small head.

A Filthy Condition



Many a man otherwise scrupulously clean is dandruff dirty. The small persistent germs of dandruff working all day as well as night are constantly throwing off the small white dandruff scales which falling on the shoulders of a coat gives it a filthy appearance, which is repulsive to the friends of the victim.

Many men allow this condition to exist because they believe there is no cure for dandruff; they have tried various so-called cures with unsatisfactory results and naturally condemn all.

The famous prescription called Parisian Sage now put up in America, but only by the Giroux Mfg. Co., of Buffalo, N.Y. It is for sale in Peterborough by Wm. Madill druggist, who guarantees it to cure dandruff in two weeks or money back.

Parisian Sage is guaranteed to do more; it will make short, thin hair, grow long, lustrous and luxuriant; it will stop hair from falling out; it will cure all diseases of the scalp. W. KELSEY Zig-Zag Heat Tubes

Make the KELSEY WARM AIR GENERATOR the most powerful apparatus.

¶ The "Kelsey" warms fresh air by the best method; warms large volumes of air properly and forces to exposed or distant rooms; has double the weight and heating surfaces of the ordinary furnace, and utilizes all the heat to much better advantage; does not heat the cellar or waste heat up the chimney.

¶ The "Kelsey" does not warm the same air over and over like steam or hot water systems with radiators; costs less to install, and for management and repairs; and is more efficient, healthful and economical.

¶ These are a few of the reasons why the Kelsey Fresh Air System has been installed in so many of the finest class of City and Country Homes, Churches and Schools, and why it is being specified in preference to other systems.

JOSEPH HUNTER RECEIVING PRELIMINARY HEARING TO-DAY

Lindsay, Aug. 13.—Joseph Hunter will receive a preliminary hearing before Magistrate Moore to-morrow on the charge of wilful murder.

At present he is on remand in jail. The magistrate will decide whether he will be sent up for trial or not.

The hearing will be held in the judges' chambers in the court house. The court room is being renovated at present, and this prevents the trial being held there.

Hunter still maintains an imperturbable stoicism, and seems to be unaffected. He does not seem to realise the awfulness of the crime nor the seriousness of his position.

The prisoner's personal comfort is being attended to in every possible way. He may be placed in another corridor, now that two inmates have left the jail. One man was sent to Mimico and another to the Central this morning.

The curious public are not invited, by any means, to attend the preliminary hearing to-morrow. No sensational evidence, other than was given at the inquest, is expected. Relatives of Hunter will probably be present.

PLACED RAIL ACROSS ROAD IN PATH OF AUTOMOBILE

By placing a rail across the road some person or persons attempted to put a Peterborough automobile out of business on the road between Chemong and Lakefield, on Thursday night. The gentleman with the car had left Chemong Park about nine o'clock and taken a spin through Bridgenorth on the road leading to Lakefield. When he was returning he noticed a rail placed across the road, and was just able to bring the car to a standstill before reaching the obstruction. He changed his mind, however, and instead of removing the rail he put the car in motion and ran over it. No doubt the perpetrators of the act were in hiding near the spot to enjoy the fun, and it is the hope of the automobilist that they were satisfied.

TO BORE FOR OIL SOUTH OF WARSAW

Gas and Oil Rights Have Been Secured for 3,000 Acres—Machinery for Drilling Will be Here Next Week.

Within the next few days boring for oil will be started south of Warsaw, the gas and oil rights on a three thousand acre block having been leased by the Canadian-American Oil and Gas Company, which has its headquarters in Pennsylvania. Some of the best experts in the United States have made a careful examination of the district, and have reported most favorably on the prospects for striking gas and oil. All the surface indications are there, so that the outlook is most hopeful. The machinery for boring will be on the ground next week, being shipped here from Western Ontario. The block of land that has been leased lies between Warsaw and Indian River, and it is expected that the first shaft will be sunk on the Forsythe farm.

The leasing of the land has been done by Mr. F. J. Forsythe of Peterborough and Mr. M. Davidson of Trent Bridge. The results of the tests will be awaited with interest.

HIGHEST MARKS IN SURVEY EXAM. OBTAINED BY MAX FIFE

He Received Highest Marks of the Whole Dominion in This Particular Branch of His Work—Offered a Government Position, But Intends to Go On With Studies.

Friends in this city will be pleased to learn of the success of Mr. Max Fife in his recent examination in the west. Mr. Fife left here some two or three years ago for Edmonton, Alba., and has since been taking an engineering course in the city. When the results of the term examinations were published the other day, it showed that Mr. Fife had taken the highest marks of any in the Dominion in the surveying portion of the work. Immediately on the publishing of the news Mr. Fife received a wire from the Canadian Government offering him the position of chief surveyer in the middle west. He wished to continue his studies, however, and so refused the offered situation.

Mr. Fife is a son of Mr. James Fife, formerly of the staff of the local Collegiate Institute, and is well known to a host of people in this city. It is needless to say that his progress in the west will be watched with an even greater interest, on account of his success of this year.

ATTRACTIONS OF QUALITY AT GRAND THIS SEASON

The Productions Booked to Date Give Promise of a Most Interesting Season—A Happily Selected List of Big Musical Successes—Some of the Plays That Will be Seen at the Grand.

The theatregoers of Peterborough are promised a superior class of attractions at the Grand this season. Mr. A. J. Small, the booking agent for the circuit, realizes that worthy productions are given excellent support here and as a consequence has arranged dates for many of the leading offerings on the road.

The list of plays given below is limited to those booked to date and does not include nearly all the shows that will appear here this season and many other bookings will take place as the season progresses.

SPLENDID MUSICAL PLAYS.

Musical comedies are very popular in this city and the better class music shows are always given cordial receptions in Peterborough by good sized audiences. Of the fourteen attractions given below, no fewer than six are widely known musical shows of recognised quality.

They are "The Gay Musician," "A Knight for a Day," "The Honeymooners," by George M. Cohan; "The Time, the Place, and the Girl," one of the most tuneful and popular musical comedies in years; the talented negro comedians, Cole and Johnson, in the tuneful success of their career, "The Red Moon," and Ben Jerome's brilliant comedy opera that was received here before with such great favor, "The Royal Chef."

As the booking for the different offerings is not extensive at present very little can be said of the heavier plays although an excellent representation of them is assured.

From the dates it will be seen that George Arliss of "The Devil" fame will play a local engagement, perhaps in that much talked of drama, and the fascinating New York success "The Climax," will also hold the boards for a night.

This year the Grand will open on September 11th, but the curtain raiser to what should be the most successful season the management of the theatre will have enjoyed, has not yet been selected.

The bookings are as follows;

Sept. 22—The Gay Musician.
Oct. 2—A Knight for a Day.
Oct. 4—Guy's Minstrels.
Oct. 12—The Honeymooners.
Oct. 20—Bernard Daly in "Sweet Innisfallen."
Oct. 21.—George Arliss Company.
Nov. 10.—David Copperfield.
Dec. 21—The Time, the Place and The Girl.
Dec. 29—Graustark.
Jan. 6—Stetson's Uncle Tom's Cabin.
Feb. 7—The Red Moon.
April 7—The Climax.
March 19—The Royal Chef.
May 24—Martin's Uncle Tom's Cabin.

LOCAL REGIMENT WILL GO TO BROCKVILLE FOR LABOR DAY

It Has Practically Been Decided That Regiment Will Take Its Annual Outing in That City—Leave Here Saturday, Sept. 4th—Return Tuesday Morning, September 7th.

It has practically been decided that the local regiment will go to Brockville for their annual outing on Labor Day. Captains McWilliams and McClean were down in the Island City on Thursday last to see if satisfactory arrangements could be made for such an outing, and their report is so very favorable that it is now almost settled that the regiment will go to Brockville. In that case the regiment will leave this city late Saturday night, September 4th, and will be at its destination early Sunday morning. It will return late Monday night or Tuesday morning, and this will leave them two whole days in which to see the city.

In order that it may be in the best shape for the trip, the regiment will start to drill in the near future, probable next week, and weekly drills will be held from then until the end of the month, in order to bring it up to a high standard.

PLANS FOR ISOLATION HOSPITAL TO BE SUBMITTED TO MEDICAL ASSOCIATION

The revised plans of the new isolation hospital were further considered at a special meeting of the Property Committee, held yesterday afternoon. It was decided to submit the plans to the Medical Association before making a recommendation to the Council. It is likely that a special meeting of the Council will be held at an early date to take up the matter.

Those present were Chairman Ald. Bradburn, Aldermen McIntyre, Duncan and Mayor Rush.

Dr. McPherson, medical health officer, explained the plans to the members of the committee. He pointed out the purpose of the various rooms which are provided for, and why they are necessary. It is proposed that the long way of the building will face toward Water street, and the diphtheria side will face the boundary road. The hospital is to be situated on the north end of the Hilliard farm, just above the gravel pit and near where the smallpox tents are now located.

Ald. Bradburn said the problem was that the hospital would cost $12,000. The Council can, however, raise the debentures for the hospital without going to the people. The initial cost of the building would not be so very much, but the maintenance of the institution would be considerable.

The committee members discussed the question, and all agreed that such a hospital was necessary. Without a hospital every resident who has a case of scarlet fever in the house is put to the expense of a hundred and fifty to two hundred dollars, and the average person cannot stand that expense.

The city clerk looked up the city's legislation and found that the city could issue debentures up to $15,000 for the isolation hospital. The plans for the present hospital will cost $12,000, and the equipment complete about $2,000.

After further discussion Aldermen Duncan and Morgan moved that the plans be referred to the City Medical Association, and that Dr. McPherson arrange for the meeting and then report to the Mayor, who will call a meeting of the whole Council. This was carried.

LANDED A LARGE ONE

Mr. Maxwell of Toronto Caught 20 Pound Lunge at Stoney Lake

Mr. Jack Maxwell, treasurer of the waterworks department, of the city of Toronto, who with his wife and child is the guest of Mr. and Mrs. J. G. Turner, jr., at "Cox's cottage, Stony Lake, caught a lunge in Stony Lake on Tuesday, beside which the fish that pass through the Toronto water mains are mere minnows.

Mr. Maxwell was trawling near Mr. Acton's Island when the big fellow made connections with the alluring bait and Mr. Maxwell was successful in landing his capture. The lunge was a magnificent specimen, weighing 20 pounds and measuring 43 1-2 inches in length. The fish was one of the biggest caught in Stony Lake, this year. Mr. Maxwell shipped it to his home in Toronto.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

A GOOD TIME TO VIEW MARS

Rev. Dr. Marsh, of Springville, to-day forwarded to the Review some interesting data with regard to the planets Mars and Saturn. Both planets are now in an excellent position for inspection, but they will be even more favorably placed in about six months hence. However, they can be easily distinguished by the use of a small telescope, and the large ice cap on the southern part of Mars is most plain.

The planet Saturn is just behind Mars and with a good telescope several of the marks of its surface, too, are visible.

CROWD PLEASED WITH CONCERT

Band Gave Good Programme at Park Last Night

The 57th Band was in especially good form last night and gave a well-selected programme of standard and popular music. The usual big Friday night crowd was present at the park and encore selections were in demand.

The euphonium solo by Bandsman Cronk, "Old Kentucky Home," was the best received number of the evening, and he was given a recall. "Remick's Hits," "American Republic" and "Old Settlers on Parade" also won the appreciation of the audience.

The calling of peanuts, popcorn, etc., for sale has got to be an intolerable nuisance in the park on band nights and should be stopped.

KEEP OUT THE GYPSIES IS A GOOD POLICY

The policy of barring gypsies, which the new immigration commissioner at Ellis Island is enforcing, is likely to meet with general public approval. There is no conceivable respect in which they can be a benefit to our society. While not likely to be a charge on our communities in the ordinary sense, they are suspected of being so in another. They are hardly desirable neighbors even for a short time, and it has become the custom in most communities to refuse them a place to hold their camps. Picturesque no doubt they are, and reminders of certain phases of the days by the standard of utility, and according to that they are invariably found wanting.—New York World.

GOOD MARKET THIS MORNING

First Appearance of Apples in Reasonable Numbers

At last apples are beginning to appear in reasonable quantities on the local market. To-day there was a fairly good stock of them on hand, but even then the demand was greater than the supply. Harvest apples formed the greater part of those offering, and they sold at 20 cents a bushel. New potatoes were on hand in large numbers and sold at 25 cents per bushel. New corn brought 10 cents per dozen. There was a good quantity of wild raspberries and they were eagerly bought up at 90 cents per pail. Eggs sold at 20 cents and butter at 25 cents.

TRANSFERRED TO WINNIPEG

Mr. Park Porter Leaves for Western City on Monday

Mr. Park Porter, ledger-keeper of the local branch of the Bank of Toronto, has been transferred to the Winnipeg branch and will leave for that city on Monday. Mr. Porter will be greatly missed by his friends here, who will wish him success in his new field. Mr. Porter will be succeeded here by a Peterborough boy, Mr. Arthur Dawe, who has been connected with the Bank of Ottawa.

WAS NOT PLEASANT FOR THE CANINE

A local automobile owner is being laughed at by his friends for trying to hang his dog. He had no intention of doing away with the "pup," which, by the way, is a bull terrier, but placed it in the back seat of his car. The dog jumped over the back of the car and was soon being dragged over the king's highway at a lively rate. When passing through a village the boys called to the motorist, who, not knowing what they said, paid no attention.

Later it was discovered that the dog was not in the back seat, and, without loss of time, he was restored to a more comfortable position, and still lives to wag his tail.

Song Service

Song service will be held in Central Park at 8.15 Sunday night. The subject of the address will be "Hear." Among the hymns sung will be "Whosoever Heareth," "Hark There Comes a Whisper," "Hark, 'tis the Shepherd's Voice I Hear," "I Heard the Voice of Jesus Say." During the service Mr. Mulligan will sing "Alone in the Street." The audience is requested to join in all hymns.

WEDDING BELLS

EVERETT—ROBERTS

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Stephen's church, Chandos, on the 3rd day of August last, when Miss Annie Elizabeth Roberts, daughter of Mr. Joseph Roberts, a prosperous farmer of the township of Chandos, was married to Mr Henry T. Everett, of the city of Peterborough, jeweler. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. C. Lord, of Apsley. The church was beautifully decorated with ferns and flowers. Miss Packnell, of the city of Toronto, was bridesmaid, and Mr. Harry Roberts, brother of the bride, was groomsman. The bride was dressed in pale blue mercerized repp, trimmed with cream color all over lace and applique, and the bridesmaid in pale blue mull trimmed with velvet and insett. The bridegroom's present to the bride was a gold watch and chain, and to the bridesmaid a beautiful birthday ring. The presents to the bride were beautiful and costly, showing the high esteem in which the bride was held.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where about 75 guests sat down to a sumptuous repast, after which a very pleasant evening was spent in music and dancing.—Com.

HUGH McINTOSH TO OFFER $70,000 FOR PRIZE FIGHT

New York, Aug. 13.—Passing Jeffries in mid-ocean with no attempt to communicate with him by wireless, Hugh D. McIntosh, the man who promoted the Burns-Johnson fight in Australia, arrives here from Europe to-day. He intends, it is said, to notify Sam Berger that he will hang up a $70,000 purse for the proposed Jeffries-Johnson mill in the Antipodes, and believes that he can make money because of the feeling of intense hatred Australians have for the negro.

As Jeffries has already declared that he will not fight Johnson except on American soil, McIntosh is apparently secure in making his prodigious offer. Maybe he will agree to give $70,000 for a mill in this country, however, in which event he will come very near landing the match. It is believed, though, that McIntosh would have to select Nevada as the battleground, as he would probably meet with serious opposition from the various fight promoters who want to secure the big fight for California.

Plymouth, Aug. 13.—James J. Jeffries on arriving here yesterday from New York, appeared to be surprised when informed that his representative, Sam Berger, had signed an agreement at Chicago for a championship fight between Jack Johnson and Jeffries.

"No one has any authority," said Jeffries, "to make any such arrangements in my absence. I have nothing to say about my fight with Johnson. The match will come off if I have anything to do with it, unless one or the other of us die. As to the date when the fight will occur, it may be in six months, and it may be earlier or even later, but the sooner the better."

ONLY PRELIMINARY DEAAL.

Chicago, Aug. 13. — "Mr. Jeffries has undoubtedly been misinformed as to what was done, and believes I concluded a final agreement with Johnson," said Sam Berger, when told of Jeffries' statements at Plymouth. "I have telegraphed to him just what I did in negotiating preliminary arrangements with Johnson, as he had given me specific authority to do. The agreement signed is not and never was considered by me as final. The agreement contains only the preliminary articles, and I am satisfied Mr. Jeffries will approve what I have done."

MANAGER OF STRATHCONAS ANSWERS "SPECTATOR"

A Well-Reasoned and Kindly-Worded Reply—Rival Teams Always Cheer Leaders' Defeat—No Feeling Against T.A.S.

To the Sporting Editor of the Review.

Sir,—I noticed in last evening's Review a letter signed "Spectator," dealing with the local baseball situation, and in connection therewith I have a few remarks to make.

First, as to the charge against the officials in neglect of duty in looking after the league. The officials always recognized the fact that to run a league successfully the games had to be played where the crowd could be controlled and kept away from the play, and this was only possible on Riverside Park, as there is no other grounds in the city available for sports, where a game can be handled with any degree of satisfaction, and they foresaw the state of affairs that existed at the T.A.S. vs. P.A.C. game on the Oval, which "Spectator" refers to, and which is an evidence that they were right in their contention, and is acknowledged by "Spectator" in his letter to be a reason why the grounds should not have been changed.

This being the case, the officials would not change the grounds, and with myself, as manager of the Strathconas, always contended they should be played as the league started out.

Regarding the support of the crowd always being with the team playing against the T.A.S., I might say that the crowd always favors the team that is behind, and is this not more likely to be the fact with the players on the different teams who feel they always have a chance if the leaders lose, but never have a chance if the leaders always win.

As an evidence of this I would refer you to the last season or two of city league hockey. When the Strathconas were winning they hardly had a friend outside of their own immediate supporters, and in the game against Lakefield, found nine-tenths of the crowd—and a Peterborough crowd at that—pulling for an outside team. Had any other team in the baseball league this season been in the same position as the T.A.S. they would have received identical treatment. It's the way with the public and a man in sport for a short while will realize this to be true.

The meeting held the other evening has left "Spectator" with the impression that the T.A.S. received a raw deal. Does he know that the managers of the teams agreed to supply the balls for the games on suggestion by Manager Quinlan at the time the change was made to the oval, and that the ball supplied for the game protested by the T.A.S. was their own ball, they having rej[illegible] Park St. ball, the latter [illegible] ying a [illegible] and was satisfactory. For fear "Spectator" did not pick up the right ball, I might say that the ball on which the protest was entered was practically a new one, not being any more than slightly discolored, and neither balls had a stitch broken in them. A soft ball could hardly be banged out to the tennis nets for a three-base hit, and other long hits made, as can be verified by the score book. While the rule book calls for new balls for each game, does it not look a little far-fetched to protest a game for this reason, when the ball supplied was by the team protesting, and the system of each team supplying the balls introduced by the manager of the team.

Regarding Park St. team refusing to play with the official umpire, this is not the case. All they wanted was an additional man for the bases, as a game can hardly be handled by one man, on the large of the Oval, with the crowd running in, and no lines drawn. Umpire McCabe agreed with Manager Pilking when the suggestion was made to him, and gave the names of Sheridan, Kendry and Ray for the position.

It is harder to be crooked with two umpires than one, and Park St. were certainly not trying to steal a march on the T.A.S. Manager Quinlan has more than once expressed himself as being satisfied with the work of the umpires on such occasions.

I am merely answering this letter of "Spectator's," as as above, in short for these reasons:

First, to show that the officials of the league were right in maintaining that all games should be played on Riverside Park.

Second, that there is no feeling against the T.A.S., other than is to be found against any team that has a big lead on other teams of a league.

Third, that Manager Quinlan should have taken his defeat of the game played with his own ball, and Fourth, that the double umpire system for that game was perfectly satisfactory to both winner and loser.

If any team in the big league dropped out when they imagined they had a grievance, there would be mighty little baseball, and this pertains to any line of sport, and all players on the different teams are apt to look at matters from their own point of view, but it is not a sporty thing to drop out when one does not get his own way, and I do not believe yet that the T.A.S. team as a whole are of the same opinion as their manager.

TWO RINKS IN TOURNAMENT

Peterborough Bowlers for Dominion Tourney on Monday

Peterborough has entered two teams for the Dominion Lawn Bowling tourney, which opens on Monday at the Woodbine Lawn, Toronto. There are 102 rinks entered in the tournament, making the list the largest ever.

In the preliminary round W. McIlroy, of Peterborough, is pitted against R. Farrow, of Ottawa.

ATHLETICS

The bronze medal for the Victoria Harriers will be at the Review office on Wednesday.

A Hard Knock

To the Sporting Editor, Review.

Sir,—Judging from what I hear on the street, and from what I read in the newspapers, the affairs of the City Baseball League are in pretty much of a muddle. Looking at the situation from an impartial standpoint, it seems to me that there is too much of the village spirit prevalent in connection with sport in this city. Perhaps I should not say "village spirit," as I do not wish to cast a slur upon the villages.

When some of those engaged in sport in Peterborough learn what true sportsmanship is, when they cut out chewing the rag, when they get rid of the "thirty-cent" spirit and get away from the idea that everybody else is a crook of some kind, there will be some hope for athletics in this city.

"Spectator," who has a letter in yesterday's Review, has about as broad a view of things as a South Sea Islander, and in saying so I wish to apologize to the natives of the Southern Sea for making this attack upon them.

Yours, Etc.

GOSSIP OF THE FIGHTERS

Some News of the Big Fellows in the Pugilistic World

San Francisco, Aug. 11.—Negotiations opened by Promoter James Coffroth for the matching of Jack O'Brien with any one of three fighters who have been mentioned as receptive candidates, Jack Johnson, Al Kaufman or Billy Papke, were necessarily at a standstill last night because Quaker Jack made a trip to Catalina Island and could not be located by Coffroth over the long-distance telephone.

Had Coffroth been able to talk with the sick Philadelphian, it is quite possible that steps would have been taken toward a match with Al Kaufman. The blacksmith is quite willing to go twenty-five rounds with O'Brien, but remembering his experience some four years ago, does not care to a shorter distance. O'Brien has stipulated twenty rounds as the extreme limit to which he cares to go, but Coffroth had an idea that he might be persuaded to stretch it five rounds.

Jack Johnson, also mentioned as an opponent for the Quaker, has sent word to Coffroth that he will leave for San Francisco at once, and will then talk over matters as regards a fight. No word has come to the despatches sent to Billy Papke. O'Brien, according to a letter received by Coffroth, will be in San Francisco today.

It is whispered that Coffroth has an idea that Ketchel will not go through with his arrangements to meet Sam Langford in New York the third of September, and that Ketchel and Papke could be matched for forty-five rounds on Admission Day here, September 9.

In that case, if Coffroth is persistent in staging Jack O'Brien, he could sign the Philadelphian with Al Kaufman, or, possibly, Jack Johnson, for later September date, and thus have the card easily prepared.

New Yorkers are worrying some as to Ketchel. Judging from despatches that have come to hand, the New York club expected Willis Britt and the middleweight champion to leave San Francisco last Monday, but there is nothing known of the exact whereabouts of the pair, although they are somewhere in Mendocino County.

REV. DR. O'BRIEN IS HOME FROM TOTAL ABSTINENCE CONVENTION IN CHICAGO

Temperance Workers are Energetic for Success of Movement — Warfare Against the Salooon Will be Waged in Chicago — Rev. P. O'Callaghan New President

Rev. Dr. O'Brien, the spiritual adviser of St. Peter's T.A.S., has returned to the city after attending ed to the city after attending the 39th annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America in Chicago. Dr. O'Brien stated the convention was a thoroughly successful one and was largely attended by prominent Catholic divines interested in the cause of temperance. Many new measures for the widespread advancement of the temperance cause were taken up and discussed in detail.

TO FIGHT THE LIQUOR TRAFFIC

Chicago during the next 12 months is to be the centre of the most determined warfare on the liquor industry ever undertaken by Roman Catholic temperance advocates. This was announced Saturday by Rev. P. J. O'Callaghan (newly-elected President of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America.

The initial step in the proposed battle against the saloon will be the establishment in Chicago of national headquarters of the organization, which heretofore had had no general offices. Following the selection of quarters President O'Callaghan and his supporters will map out a plan of campaign against the saloon along aggressive political lines.

Catholics throughout the country will be urged to join the temperance forces, and literature on the liquor subject will be spread broadcast, particular attention being paid to those districts where local option is likely to become an issue in political elections. Keeping in mind that more than 1,000 townships in Illinois were voted "dry" in 1908 and that the same issue will come before the voters next spring, the temperance workers declare they will make their influence tell at the coming elections.

Rev. Father O'Callaghan is the head of the Paulist Order in Chicago and pastor of St. Mary's church. He is one of the ablest and most aggressive clergymen in the country, and it is predicted that he will show results when another year rolls around.

ARRANGEMENTS FOR FAIR; DIRECTORS MET LAST NIGHT

An excellently attended meeting of the directors of the Peterborough Fair was held last night at President Leary's residence, when important arrangements were made in connection with the exhibition this fall. Under the new and progressive directorate, the Fair has been annually improving, and in view of this it would seem no exaggeration to state that the Fair this fall will be more attractive and of a better quality as regards to live stock and other exhibits than it has been since it became a yearly fixture.

Those in attendance at the meeting last night were President Leary, who occupied the chair; Mr. J. H. Garbutt, first vice-president; Mr. S. F. Redmond, second vice-president; Mr. F. J. A. Hall, secretary-treasurer, and the following directors:— Messrs. George E. Elliott, J. J. Turner, and John Brown, James R. Bell, William Collins, George A. Gillespie, James Baptie, S. A. Oke, E. W. Jones, Dr. King, J. A. Storey, John Cox, D. Cruikshanks, C. Moore, S. Milburn.

The following from the Peterborough Turf Club was read:

Mr. F. J. A. Hall,
Secretary, P. A. S.

Dear Sir,—I am instructed by the Peterborough Turf Club to notify you that at our meeting last night we decided to give you the grounds for your Fair for $100, payable within ten days of this notification.

W. JONES,
Secretary, P. T. C.

The directors decided that in view of an agreement between the Turf Club and the Association, by which the Turf Club had the use of the Agricultural Society's portion of the ground for the year in consideration of the Turf Club allowing the society to use the track for the three days of the Fair, it was decided not to comply with the request for the $100.

All the judges for the different exhibits were selected and great discrimination was shown in the choosing of thoroughly competent officials for the respective departments.

The speeding in the ring events were talked over by the directors and good contests in this department with tempting purses will be arranged.

The grandstand attractions always are a strong drawing card and are greatly appreciated by the large majority of the patrons at the fair. This year the special acts will be more novel and attractive than ever and the bookings have been supplied by a New York syndicate which makes a specialty of supplying performers and acts for big fairs and summer parks.

A troup of seven Arab acrobates said to be veritable wizards in the acrobatic and balancing acts have been engaged as the top liners at a considerable expense to the directors. They are expected to give the biggest feature act ever performed at the local fair and will be substantially assisted in the grandstand entertainment by a clever animal show in which three performers put eight dogs, a pony and a monkey through a series of difficult and highly interesting stunts. Other grandstand attractions of merit will also be arranged for later on.

Among the special races will be a carters' race, an expressman's race (hobbles barred in both), and ex-Mayor Yelland's dog race.

A GRAND KIDNEY MEDICINE

"Fruit-a-tives" Cured Him When Everything Else Failed.

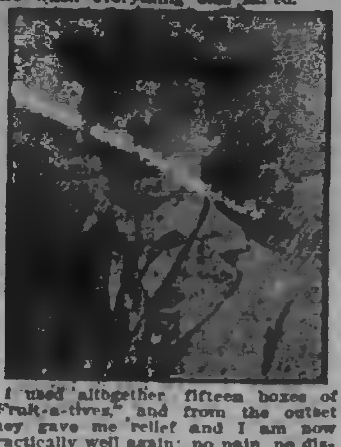
Ulverton, Que., March 17th, 1908.

I wish to place on record, for the sake of others who may be suffering in the same way that I suffered, that no medicine I ever took did me so much real good as "Fruit-a-tives" did.

I suffered for many years with Kidney Trouble, with bad pain in the back.

I took every known kidney remedy and kidney pill, but nothing gave me any relief, and I was getting discouraged.

I was advised to try "Fruit-a-tives" and did so—and this medicine cured me when everything else failed.



I used altogether fifteen boxes of "Fruit-a-tives," and from the outset they gave me relief and I am now practically well again; no pain, no distress, and all symptoms of kidney disease have entirely left me. I am very thankful to be once more well, and I freely make this statement for the sake of others who may suffer as I did. To them, I say try "Fruit-a-tives," as they are a grand kidney medicine.

CLARENCE J. PLACEY.

50c a box, 6 for $2.50, or trial size 25c. At dealers or from Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

TIRED OF DOGS, WANT WEE GIRL

Wealthy Woman Tries in Vain to Find One for Adoption in Detroit

Detroit, Aug. 13.—Tired of pouring a wealth of affection on a large family of aristocratic dogs and anxious to take to her heart a bit of feminine babyhood, nomatter how obscure, Mrs. F. M. Warnock of Pittsburg, who is visiting her mother, the well-known clubwoman, Mrs. Sara J. La Tour, has so far encountered only disappointment in Detroit.

"My daughter came to visit me, and while here had her heart set on adopting a baby girl," said Mrs. La Tour yesterday at her home at 1183 Fourth avenue. "We called up the orphan asylums, the new Providence hospital, but everywhere the answer was the same. They had lots of children but a little girl from two to three years of age seemed impossible to find. We advertised in the papers —but there was no response.

"It seems too bad that in a big world so full of children needing a home, we can't find one for a home that is waiting. Just a little while ago my daughter and her husband moved from Pittsburg to California, Pa., which is a suburb of Pittsburg.

"It's a coal region with a foreign population mostly, and they wanted an American child. Moreover, they wanted one from a distance—so that when she grows up she need not know she was adopted or anything but herself. They would give a child a splendid home and shower her with affection. They have nine beautiful dogs that they think the world of—but I guess they would part with all the dogs for a pretty little waif of a girl."

The staff of the Lindsay Warder were pleased to receive a donation of gooseberries. We always thought it was lemons that were handed to the newspaper men in that town.

WAS DROWNED AT HASTINGS

Twelve Year-old Boy Fell off Dam into Trent River To-day— Body Soon Found

Hastings, Aug. 14.—John Murray, a twelve-year-old Hastings boy, was drowned in the Trent river here this morning while fishing from the dam. The little fellow was standing at the edge of the dam and in some manner lost his balance and fell into the river. Russell Warner, a farmer, was driving across the bridge at the time and saw the accident, giving the alarm at once. He was unable to definitely locate the spot where the boy had fallen in. Some delay ensued and it was twenty-five minutes after when the body was recovered. The doctors worked over the body for a long time, but could not resuscitate him.

FALL BROKE BOTH WRISTS

Mr Arthur Longland Fell From Ladder and Sustained Painful Injuries

A somewhat serious accident occurred yesterday morning at Bailieboro. Mr. Arthur Longland, of Harvey street, was engaged in placing an eavetrough on a house of that village when suddenly the ladder on which he was standing slipped and hurled him to the ground. He would most assuredly have broken his neck had he not had the presence of mind to protect his head with his arms. As it was he landed with terrific force on his hands, with the result that both wrists were broken.

The bones were set for the time being by Dr. Russell of Bailieboro, and the man was brought to this city this morning on the C.P.R., where Dr. McKinnon attended to his injuries.

SEARCH LIGHTS ON THE RIVER

Best Stove Co. to Give Exhibition This Evening

Attention of launch owners is directed to the advertisement in another column of a very excellent form of search light, put on the market by the Hiram L. The illuminant used is acetylene gas, made in a small generator. This is a modification of the well known kind, but has been constructed in a simple and very durable manner. Those who are using the lights are well pleased, both at the performance and the price. No doubt the call of the boating public that all launches should carry lights sufficiently brilliant to enable the power boat to be easily distinguished, has to be met, sooner or later. The Best Stove Co. of Hunter street, have taken the agency for the Piper lights, and have several on exhibition. To-night (Saturday) they will have several on exhibition, and the effect can be viewed by those who call. The lights are in two or more grades and prices, and in any grade the price is moderate. They are supplied for both deck and canoe use and fitted for either position on the boat.

THE NEW LOCK CO.

The company which the Review has been referring to as anxious to establish a branch in Canada is one of the largest and best lock companies in the world. It wants and needs no bonus. Since the Review's reference to the subject the Review has been able to give the city the company's address and the city has written regarding the proposition. The company, as we said, is desirous of having the Canadian tariff slightly altered and properly classified. With a little care the City Council can land this very large and most desirable industry. It is satisfactory to know that negotiations are now under weigh.

Commercial Man Extols the Advantages of This City to Brother Drummer

A couple of travelling men were sitting in the lobby of the Benson House at Lindsay, on Friday last, waiting for the train going east. They discussed matters after the manner of their craft, and made keen, clean-cut observations on the characteristics of several localities. Said one;

"I like Peterborough. It's up to date. What? Sure thing. They've a tidy building of a fireball, and as far as I could see something of an equipment. That man Howard is a good fire fighter. I knew him in London, and he wasn't afraid to be first in a dangerous spot. The force too, at Peterborough looks as if competent."

Then the narrative shifted to Cobalt and silver strikes, and Jeffries' chances and the rebuilding of Hanlan's Point, until the buss man bellowed, "A-L-L-G-O-I-N E-A-S-T."

Lottie Gillson was drowned in Campbell's Mill Pond, Ridgetown.

J. L. Corcoran's block in Stratford was damaged by fire and much tea destroyed.

Last Meeting To-night

The series of tent meetings which have been held in the lot next the Custom House will conclude to-night. There was a large attendance last night when Mr. Whelan was the speaker. His subject was the "Christian Race and its Equipment." To-night's meeting is for both men and women.

FANCY FOR SILVER JEWELRY IS SAID TO BE REVIVING

After lying dormant for more than half a century the fancy for silver jewellery is reviving. The metal has had a classic association ever since the ancients consecrated it to Diana.

A custom prevailing even to this day in some provinces of France permits maidens only to adorn themselves with silver jewellery, but outside these provinces old and young, matron and maid, may wear the artistic ornaments that are being created. Designs and prices are alike inviting.

The latest idea in silver jewellery consists of the combination of gems with hand engraving in French gray finish. Amethysts are the stones par excellence. The blending of soft gray and liquid purple is delightful.

Other stones used are topaz, lapis lazuli, turquoise matrix, tourmalines—especially pink—and pearls. Enamel is also used to advantage.

Gray jewellery has been developed in Paris to wear with the prevailing gray fabrics. While it looks particularly chic with gray, says Harpers' Bazaar, this jewellery can be worn with any color. Care should then be taken to have stones and fabrics of like hue. The stones give color, but it is possible to be a study in gray even then. Gray agate cut en cabochon or moss agate of a grayish cast should be selected.

Such subdued effects are refreshing after the brilliancy and imposing nature of many recent ornaments. Necklaces are none the less handsome because inconspicuous. The stones are lapis lazuli, while the enamel are of the same shade, making a pleasing harmony.

Buckles with delicate traceries of handwork are in general accord with the frock. An engraved monogram is the only decoration on these buckles. There is a Directoire element about most brooches in their several dangling pendants. Some are quite four inches long; others have little blinking drops that nod with the slightest movement. Oval and button shaped brooches and other conventional forms will be worn.

Shirt waist finger rings are invariably brought out in dull silver. The settings, their oxidised or grayed over are hand wrought and are skilful in conception and workmanship. Blister and button pearls and various semi-precious stones are mounted in this way.

There is a difference between the French gray and the oxidized silver. The latter is dull with dark mottlings. French gray is an even shimmering gray color with neither high lights nor dark shadows—a sort of silver satin.

Filigree work is again appearing. The wonderful Parisian lace jewellery is finding its counterpart in rhinestones and silver. The turnover lace collar gives an idea of the filmy nature of these laces for the neck. It is riveted to a wide black velvet ribbon. Touches of black are much used by means of ribbon or net.

Silver and steel jewellery is a novelty. This fad dates back to the eighteenth century fashions, whose earmarks are seen in many present styles. Buckles for belts, slippers or garters look extremely well in this combination. When set with stones the tiny points of steel closely resemble rhinestones. Without discounting the beauty of the new silver jewellery it can be affirmed that all silver ornaments are in good form even though they be heirlooms.

SOME TRICKS IN THE ART OF MIND READING

The recent hoax put up in Hamilton whereby the "mind reader," Anna Eva Fay, having prophesied that the revolver used in the Kinrade shooting would be found in a certain place (it was found there) draws attention to the manner in which these mystifying people work. "Mind reading" of this class is one of the most profitable businesses in the world, although the expense involved is almost as great as that of taking a theatrical troupe about the country. Success in fooling the public is achieved by clever advance work as a rule. A retinue travels weeks in advance from town to town that the seer or seeress is to visit, engaged in the task of picking up information. They generally travel as book agents and sewing machine agents and are glib hands at getting into conversation with housewives about dead children and absent husbands.

All this is recorded for future reference and furnishes the data for the "mind reader" when the show comes off. Occasionally a bolder coup is attempted, like that pulled off in Hamilton, and if they had only taken the precaution to put an old rusty revolver, such as could be obtained in any pawn shop, under the walk, instead of the bright new weapon that was found, 70 per cent. of the community would have been convinced that Anna Eva Fay had supernatural powers.

Probably the boldest thing of the kind ever attempted in Toronto occurred about ten years ago. A man down in the east end of the city had a horse stolen from him and reported he affair to the police. Search for the beast proved unavailing. About a month later a "mind reader" came to town and gave an exhibition in the Grand opera house. By covert means the owner of the missing horse had two tickets given to him in a friendly way.

During the evening the blindfolded seeress had a vision of a man who had lost a horse, and asked if such a person were in the audience. The unsuspecting dupe immediately revealed himself.

"You will find your horse in the shed of such and such a hotel," she said, naming a cheap hostelry in the west end. A visit to the hotel revealed the animal as stated, the hotelkeeper claiming that it had been left there to board by a traveller, who said he was going out of town for a month. The inference was obvious that the horse had been stolen by an advance emissary of the seress, and some squaring had to be done before the indignant owner was satisfied.

There used to be a team, not now in America, known as the Baldwins, who were "smooth workers" in this line of business. They came to Toronto just at the time when the mysterious Hendershot murders in Elgin county were agitating the community. On the opening night, when Mrs. Baldwin was supposed to be under "control," she suddenly commenced to shriek, apparently in a paroxsm of fear. Her husband in great agitation announced that he was afraid he would have to close the show and proceeded to de-hypnotize her. When she came out of her apparent trance she described in great detail a murder she had seen enacted in a winter wood. The husband then asked if there had been such an occurrence, and several in the audience told him of which he professed to be in ignorance. The show went on and the woman's vision passed with the audience for a marvel of clairvoyance. When the truth came out it appeared that her details were all wrong.

Magicians of the type of the late Monsieur Hermann also have their little tricks, although their cleverness in the art of legerdemain is undeniable. Some years ago Hermann was playing an engagement in Toronto. At the Wednesday matinee a local newspaper man dropped in and found the house half empty. Presently he espied two young women from out of town whom he knew. There was a vacant seat alongside them, and he went over and sat down to talk to them. He had not been there very long when a young man came down the aisle with an usher having a check for the seat in question. The newspaper man, who was somewhat of a privileged character, suggested that the young man be placed in one of the hundreds of empty seats that were better than the one he was occupying. The usher acquiesced, but the man in deep embarrassment insisted on having that seat and the one only. Finally, the newspaper man withdrew, leaving the youth to suffer the dagger-like glances of the young ladies. The scribe left the house in a temper and not for two years did he learn the explanation. One day he was introduced to the youth in question, who he had absolutely forgotten. The latter said he had been waiting for two years to make an apology for the episode in the theatre.

"I couldn't help myself," he said. "You see Hermann was to find a red silk handkerchief in my inside pocket, and as he was to identify me by the number of the seat, I had to insist on that seat and no other."

TIDES AND FISHING.

Fish Are More Active in Search For Food on the Flood Tide.

The most essential thing in sea fishing, next to tackle and bait, is a tide table, because all marine fishes except the flatfish—flounder and fluke—are captured more readily at a certain tide. The main cause for such is that fish are more active in their search for food generally on the flood tide.

Vast schools of little fishes move close into shore on the incoming tide, working their way into the smaller bays and inlets, especially near the edge of banks, where they feed on the small crustaceans, shrimps and little minnows that can effectually hide from their larger enemies when the tide is low and the large fish are unable to get at them in very shoal waters.

It is a common and interesting sight to see a school of weakfish slowly moving in near the surface with the early tide. Suddenly one sees the smooth surface all in commotion. Silvery minnows leap frantically in all directions, looking like flashes of diamonds, then instantly disappear to certain death. At such times anglers should be ready with their boat trimmed snug, lines out floating forty feet away, baited with live shrimps.

Tide affects bottom feeders, though not to such a large extent. Fishing from piers and docks an hour before and after flood is most likely to give good results. On wrecks much depends on the kind of fish. The last of the ebb and at low tide is considered the worst condition for general fishing. In the open sea, on the banks, tidal influence counts for little or nothing. Any tide is as good as another.—Outing Magazine.

TO THE MOTHERS OF PALE GIRLS

A Case Showing How the Tonic Treatment Restores Lost Health

Anaemia is simply lack of blood. It is one of the most common and at the same time most dangerous diseases with which growing girls suffer. It is common because the blood so often becomes impoverished during development, when girls often overstudy, over-work and suffer from lack of exercise. It is dangerous because of the stealthiness of its approach and because of its tendency to grow so steadily worse, if not promptly checked, that it may run into consumption. Every growing girl should take an occasional tonic to ward off the insidious trouble; and in all the world there is no tonic that can equal Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Every dose of this medicine helps to make new, rich blood, which promptly makes weak, pale, listless girls bright, rosy and strong. Miss A. M. Dugay, Lower Cove, N.S., says —"I believe I owe my life to Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. My blood seemed to have turned to water. I was pale as a sheet; I suffered from headaches, and floating specks seemed to be constantly before my eyes. As the trouble progressed my limbs began to swell, and it was feared that dropsy had set in, and that my case was hopeless. Up to this time two doctors had attended me, but notwithstanding I kept growing worse. It was at this juncture I began using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills, and after taking a few boxes I was much improved. I kept on using the Pills until I had taken eight boxes, when my health was completely restored."

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills cure cases like this because they go to the root of the trouble in the blood. That is why they cure rheumatism and indigestion, nervous headaches and racking neuralgia, and all those troubles from which growing girls and women of mature years so often suffer in hopeless silence. If Dr. Williams' Pink Pills are given a fair trial they will not disappoint you. Sold by all medicine dealers or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

LABOR CONDITIONS IN THE FRENCH CAPITAL SEEN BY MR. GOMPERS

In his interesting comments, the famous labor leader tells of further experiences:

The morning I reached Paris, "Le Matin" contained a letter from L. Niel, who had just resigned as secretary of the "C. G. T." in consequence of a decision by its delegates contrary to his convictions, and because of which he deemed it obligatory upon himself to resign his office. M. Niel described the "C. G. T." in his letter as ruled by politics. While admitting that he was a socialist, he denied that he ever permitted his political opinions to influence his trade unionism. The Anarchists, now in full power in the central organisation, asserted that "their unionism was but anarchism under another name." "Politics," wrote M. Niel, "has always been a poison to trade unionism." "Never was trade unionism (in France) so invested with politics as to-day." "In 1906 the C. G. T., at the Congress of Amiens, had solemnly interdicted all unionists from introducing in the organization politics of any kind whatever." But while this interdiction still remained in the text of the rules, the fact in practice was otherwise. "Unionism has closed the front door to the socialistic virus, to open the back door to the anarchistic poison." And now, the more solid unions were about to try to regenerate the labor movement. The miners, railroad men, printers, textile workers, commercial employees and others were about to organize a central union committee to promote trade unionism without party politics.

M. Niel, who is a union printer and a socialist, had written a letter published in M. Jean Jaures' paper, "L'Humanite," on July 6, in which he spoke of my coming visit and described the work of American trade unionism. He said it was more practical than ideal; more conservative than revolutionary. He expressed a welcome to me to France as the representative of the American Federation of Labor. Now, it is quite significant both of the French spirit of hospitality toward America and of the intention of the leaders and followers of the various groups in the C. G. T. to show that they were willing to hear me explain my mission, that in "La Voix du Peuple," of about the same date, M. Georges Yvetot, another union printer, who is an anarchist, and M. Niel's antagonist, also welcomed me warmly and in his letter said that the occasion of my address before the C. G. T. would be "salutary instruction for all various reasons." I may add that during my stay in Paris, M. Niel and M. Yvetot were amongst those who were indefatigable in showing me and my friends all possible hospitality. And when they met in the presence of us Americans they were not only respectful to us but also to each other

The meeting of the C. G. T., to which I had been invited, I found, from the newspapers and otherwise, was attracting general attention from all that part of Paris which has an interest in social problems. What was going to take place? What would the radicals present say or do? Friday, the evening set for the occasion, I went to the hall of l'Egalitaire, Rue Sambre-et-Meuse, accompanied by half a dozen American friends and also by committees representing various shades of French working class opinion. When the meeting was opened about 500 persons were present, the hall being packed, with many standing. I was afterwards told that most of the trade union and many Socialists and Anarchist leaders of Paris were present. M. Thuiller, secretary of the Paris Central Labor Union—Union De Syndicats—presided, with M. Jouhaux, M. Niel's successor, to the secretaryship of the C.G.T. was vice president. M. Yvetot introduced me, his address being cordial and well advised in every sentence. He asked and declared for a fair hearing for me, and earnestly said that all, no doubt, had something to learn from the great and successful American labor movement. No applause whatever greeted me as I arose to address the meeting. But during more than an hour, with perhaps not a score of persons in the audience, who understood me, a respectful and patient attitude was maintained, evidently the audience knew, or imagined, that I had something to say and was saying it to its members, and that they wanted to hear. When I had finished a former member of the American Ladies' Garment Workers' Union, Mr. D. Mikol, of Boston, who had taken longhand notes, rapidly translated my entire address into French. Several persons present, who understood both languages, say that the performance of his task was remarkably well done—though, as it turned out, he made one or two slips that were instantly pounced upon by critics among the so-called "intellectuals," on hand with pencils and note books. As Mr. Mikol proceeded in an animated manner applause became frequent. I could perceive that while certain groups were approving those expressions which were broad enough to gratify all whose hopes in mankind contemplate a higher and higher plan for labor, other groups were reserving manifestations of sympathy for the passages in which I stood up for true trade unionism. Very hearty applause came with the close of Mr. Mikol's translation. When his critics got from him his explanation that in his almost instantaneous interpretation of sentence by sentence he had, as they pointed out, employed a phase or two not wholly warranted by a letter perfect adherence to the original, they trained their guns upon me, abetted with the stale shibboleths and theories of an exploded socialism. What do I say about the "suppression" (abolition) of the employing class and the abolition of the wage system? What about the general strike? How as to antimilitarism and anti-patriotism? Did not the trusts in America simply raise prices when the union raised wages? etc. In brief I replied that I was not sure I wanted the wage system abolished; I should like first to see closer some of the possible results of the project of abolishing the undertakings, enterprise and management of a higher developed industrial system of our time. As to the general strike its utility was questionable, but in any event, in the present state of labor organization in France, the comparatively few organised working people of France were doing little or nothing but talk about it. As a matter of fact the continual talk of a general strike had the tendency to keep workmen away from instead of being attracted to the unions in any event it would be necessary to organize first for material improvement and to be enabled to conduct lesser strikes to a successful result before making the subject of a general strike the chief issue of labor. The questions of anti-militarism, anti-patriotism and the like were not questions in which the American Working men had been interested, but I was certain that if I were a Frenchman I would uphold my country and not have it placed at the mercy of others. I would not insist that my country should disarm while other countries were arming to the teeth, but I would ever earnestly strive for general disarmament and international peace. I showed that though misery obtain in all countries; that the organisation of our Trade Unions and our Federations are a standing protest against these great human wrongs; yet it is a fact incontrovertible, that misery is less and the conditions of the workers best in those countries where wages are highest and hours of labor least—that is where a normal work-day obtains. I closed my part in the evening proceedings by urging all to cease their cross purposes, to leave partisan politics to its field outside the labor organizations and to come together for the clearly defined purpose of trade Unionism; for the material, social and moral uplift of all the workers—of all the people.

When the meeting broke up none of the leaders among my hearers seemed disposed to quarrel with me, nearly all expressed pleasure, congratulated me, and shook hands with me. M. August Keufer, for a quarter of a century the most prominent man in the Typographical Union of France, was delighted Pataud, of the Electrical Workers, wanted the address which had been taken down stenographically, to be printed in full to study its points. Niel and his adherents saw much to learn from American Trade Unionism. Yvetot, the ruling spirit of the C.G.T., became even more cordial in his friendly attentions. Thuiller and others accompanied our little American group homeward.

The accounts of the meeting which (following the usual practice of the French Press, were published in the various newspapers in a straggling way in the course of several days) where so far as I saw them sympathetic; the writers recognized that I had endeavored to state facts and lay them before the French workman in the light of experience and for the lessons they might teach. They saw that America really has something great to show France and other countries in trade unionism.

Such conservative papers as the Le Temps besides describing the meeting in several columns gave it leading and sober editorials. Le Temps in summing up its conclusions said: "Will the French Trade Unionists some day understand the beneficient role the unions can play in the economic and social organizations? The Trade Union ought to be a part in the organism of society, not a war machine directed against it. It ought to help in regulating the relations between between the categorie of production, the employers and the employed. It could be the agent of a beneficient collaboration, a source of common prosperity, instead of a cause of division between men and of a industrial paralysis.

Revolutionary, liberal and conservative sheets alike, cited the principal points of my theme. The failures in the rarely attempts to mingle party political creeds with trade unionism; the simplicity and unlimited scope of our organizations and federation; its plain and practical objects; its greatness and development; its achievements in advancing wages, reducing the hours of the work day, protecting women and children, obtaining the co-operation of the National and State Labor Departments, improving conditions in the workshop, factory and mine, and performing the duties of great benefit societies.

In bidding au revoir to Paris—for I expect to be there again at the end of August to attend the International Trade Union Congress—I look back over my brief visit to the beautiful city with genuine satisfaction, in spite of hard work which occupied nearly my entire time. Aside from the exceptions partly to be expected in certain forms of business devoted to cornering or getting at any cost, the cash of tourists, the people of Paris seem to me to be good natured, obliging, sincerely polite, of a fine intelligence, ever ready with a sympathetic word and smile. The committeemen, who acted as my hosts anticipated every wish of the little party with which I travel. My short visit has shown me a wonderful city—a hard working city! as a back ground to the city of pleasure seen by the stranger who looks no deeper than the surface; a city in the main of earnest people, characterised by a commendable pride in their personal appearance, by the expressions of many sentiments that add happiness to life and in general by a charm of manner that must at bottom spring from a goodness of heart and kindly intentions towards their neighbor whoever for the passing hour may be that neighbor.

NOVEL SCHOOL CLOSING

A SPANISH DANCE ON THE CAMPUS

A PATRIOTIC EXERCISE AND DRILL

PLAYING FOR HOCKEY HONORS

THERE is no time in the school and college career of a young girl fraught with a greater degree of interest and enthusiasm than those gala days which mark the closing of the year. To some it means the ending of school days altogether, and their enthusiasm is not unmixed with regret at the thought of giving up associations, as well as leaving all the fun of taking part in the year's festivities. But to the others it is only a time of merrymaking, the fun ranging from a quiet little farewell spread for a small clique of girls to the formal and impressive outdoor ceremonies which are a part of college tradition and always attract a large gathering of spectators.

Weather permitting, nearly all the closing exercises are held in the open air, a part of the college campus being set aside for exhibitions in physical skill and grace, for oddly enough college classes prefer to entertain their friends after the school year of hard mental work with athletic games and amusements rather than with mental gymnastics. There is a special day set aside for the profound and formal closing event, but this is usually the only quiet and impressive ceremony, the remainder of the week being given up to fun pure and simple.

While college fields are all more or less alike in their general plan they differ in size and equipment according to the importance of the college. Rarely are the open fields situated far from the halls and buildings, while the gymnasium, which supplies the stage setting in case of stormy weather, is usually in close touch with the outdoor set for these gay performances. Girls' schools have followed the lead of boys' colleges in arranging for the comfort of their guests on these important days when girls and their alma mater put on their best attire and wear their friendliest smile. No matter how small the student attendance of the school may be visitors who are interested enough to watch the sports are provided with good seats along the side lines or in the bleachers, where they can look on at the latest college novelty and enjoy the day comfortably.

They Love Novelty.

The audience is by no means the least interested and least interesting feature of the day. Whether the programme be dull or stupid cheers and applause are never stinted. It is the great time and event of the year, and therefore wins praise. But any one who knows the least bit about college girls and their entertainments can vouch for their love of novelty and fun. There is no gathering of young persons so full of ideas and plans for new and original amusements as school girls.

Their ingenuity is equalled only by their cleverness and inventiveness in carrying out their ideas. Each year brings something novel in their entertainments, and it is noticed that there is an evident tendency toward giving more picturesque and less strenuous forms of closing day exercises than in former years. The athletic wave has not disappeared entirely; it has only receded a little, and a newer form of amusement, more feminine, and therefore more attractive, has swept over the athletic wave. Sports have their admirers, but the general opinion of visitors is that the new exercises are more attractive to spectators.

Outdoor Fancy Dancing.

This year dancing is the keynote of the outdoor college exercises. Schoolgirls have fallen under the terpsichorean spell just as society women have, and running broad jumps, hurdle racing and fifty yard dashes have given way to charming fancy dances. As city fêtes have shown, there is no setting quite so delightful for the swing and poetry of motion as embodied in the various national dances as the cool greensward, with no roof but that of the blue sky and with slender feet clicking the time on the velvety turf instead of on a polished floor. College girls have been learning the gentle art of ballroom dancing as well as the more vigorous form of exercise which the folk dancing offers, but this formal dancing has no part in the outdoor festivities. The season has been one devoted to this particular muse, and every one who has participated in the present dances grows more and more interested in the idea and its beneficial physical effects.

At one of the colleges a hundred girls gave an exhibition and drill in folk dancing on the athletic field. They wore peasant costumes and pirouetted with a grace and abandon that showed their months of training. It was a sight to win enthusiasm and praise from all who witnessed it, and the chances are in favor of including this feature in the regular outdoor exercises whether the athletic sports are cut down or not. First, the group of girls appeared dressed in Russian costume and went through a pleasing Russian dance with music. Then they were given time to change, while a different number was offered on the afternoon's programme, and the same class appeared once more in bright Spanish attire. The Spanish dance is a great favorite with those dancing teachers who endeavor to bring out the natural grace of the pupil and to cultivate grace of movement where there is none. One foreign instructor who goes from college to college during the winter term dwelt particularly on this dance. All her girls learned its rhythmic movements, and during the winter they performed its graceful evolutions in the gymnasium. As soon as the weather permitted they held their dances out doors. The real test of grace, so this teacher affirms, is not in being able to glide and circle gracefully in a drawing room, where the floor is perfectly smooth and level and the dancer is sure of her footing, but it lies in being able to dance in true peasant fashion on the village green or on the grass, which is sure to be uneven.

There is far more real exercise in this kind of dancing than in any other, so it is beneficial as well as attractive. Dancing is as old as the hills and it has been featured in schools for some time, but only recently has it gained such a hold on teachers and students that it has been given a prominent place among the regular annual college exercises.

The college march is a part of the closing day traditions and the most fascinating dance could not oust it from its place on the week's programme. It is one of the prettiest features of the whole entertainment. The girls are drilled from season to season, their evolutions varying slightly year by year, if at all. The only difference is in the costuming, and this seldom changes after a certain fashion of dress has once been established in a school. Perhaps one college will choose white dresses and no hats, while another will have its columns of marchers gowned in white covered with long black robes—not necessarily college gowns, and still another may array its files in fancy costume—anything to make a good effect and provide a picturesque sight for the onlookers. Girls dearly love dressing up and this is one of the most attractive parts of the gala week. College banners figure prominently in the march of girls and pennants are almost as much in evidence as on a football day. No chance is missed to flaunt the emblem that has been loved and revered through the whole college career.

It must not be thought that field day has faded completely from the programme of events. That could not happen in any good college, because athletics are still encouraged and practised. After the splendid records established by some of the college girls it would be a pity to let this development and cleverness count for nothing now. Indeed, the Vassar girl who won glory from her wonderful agility in jumping has many followers who strive to beat her record, and there are other athletic feats that have spurred later classes to do their best on this great day for them. An athletic field day has its charms, there is no denying the fact, and there are some who wonder if it is not a more pleasing sight to watch the modern Atalantas than the quaintly costumed dancers. There is an attractiveness about the figure of a young girl who is pitting her strength and cleverness against others, and we feel a thrill of genuine admiration at her suppleness, her grace and her quickness. The sports mean more to many of us than the other exercises do, and that is why field day is never a great success unless it has a series of contests. Sometimes these take the form of games, a hockey or tennis match, one of basketball, or any other game chosen by the girls.

Picturesque Costumes.

Of course, field day contestants in athletic sports wear bloomers or regulation gymnasium suits. In these trim costumes the girls may not look quite so picturesque as they do in bright colored peasant dress, but they do look lithe of limb and full of life and energy. Even a homely girl, if she be well built, makes an attractive picture when clad in a plain gymnasium suit. She looks jaunty, fresh and graceful and she seems to be herself. There are no affectations to mar her charm, for affectations do not go well with a sailor blouse and bloomers.

The senior is sure to have a host of friends as well as her family and relatives to watch the various exercises as the week of festivities progresses. And the underclass girl, too, can count on a goodly number of representatives from her family and close circle of friends who are interested in seeing her and her college associates taking part in their games and entertainments. In fact, invitations to a class celebration at the close of the year are highly prized and much sought after. They give you an insight into college life and college play that cannot possibly be gained in any other way than by being either a participant or a spectator on this eventful occasion.

ANOTHER FALL.

She (haughtily)—Yes; my great-great grandfather fell at Bunker Hill.

He—Ice or banana skin?

GOOD REASON.

Maud—Young Dr. Klinique calls on Mrs. Smith quite often. Is she very ill?

Mabel—No; she is very pretty.

Sleeveless Princess Aprons.

EVERY girl who likes to experiment with chafing dish and confectionery recipes should protect her frocks with a sleeveless princess apron. A pretty model which may be put together in two hours' time is made of pale pink, blue or green checked gingham, of delicately tinted madras, of light colored denim, percale or galatea. This garment covers the entire front of the bodice, the whole of the skirt, is finished around the bottom with a narrow ruffle and has two hip pockets.

The girl who prefers to dust her own bric-à-brac should have a fine lawn knee length apron, with a six inch hemstitched bib and shoulder straps of hemstitched tucks, or with a Gibson bretelle trimmed with embroidery insertion.

Tea aprons are of India linon, cotton, voile, batiste or dotted Swiss. They are small oval or diamond shaped affairs, bordered with wide ruffles, finished with a one inch hemstitched hem and provided with pockets and strings to match. Of similar shapes, but rather more dainty, are the aprons of all over muslin embroidery trimmed with sheer plain muslin ruffling and provided with ribbon strings, or of sheer plain muslin edged with lace frillings and decorated with satin ribbon ties and pocket bows.

New Shirt Waists.

IN order to have the smart touch required in dress this season all must be of one color, and sometimes even all of a piece, in regard to shirt waist and its accessories. If the shirt is of the popular crêpe, tie and belt must be crêpe also. If the shirt is blue, tie, belt, handkerchief and stockings must be blue, the accessories in a slightly contrasting shade of the color of the shirt. If the shirt is a stripe or plaid you must precisely match the predominating color in it for the accessories, and with a white shirt everything must be white.

Dressing Sacques and Hosiery for Summer Wear

GIRLS who always have on hand an assortment of dainty sacques for morning and negligee use during the summer months are scanning the bargain counters in search of five to seven yard lengths of suitable materials. A practical plain and pretty morning jacket, with loose fronts, semi-fitting back, turned over collar, finished neck, long sleeves and a hip handkerchief pocket, may be made from five yards of white or colored albatross, or of French challie in flower design, of cotton crêpe, of white half linen suiting or flowered lawn. The same model is excellent for a matinee of China, pongee or foulard silk; of color-striped batiste, dotted, or satin striped mull or pineapple cloth lined with colored silk.

Summer dressing sacques are made on exceedingly simple lines. Even a beginner in the dressmaker's art may safely undertake a model having straight back and front, six plaits crossing the shoulders and kimono sleeves, which calls for about six yards of striped dimity, sprigged Swiss, all over muslin embroidery, cross barred batiste, nainsook or lawn, and may be trimmed with whatever Valenciennes, Cluny, embroidery or narrow ribbon happens to be in the "scrap trunk."

Camilles, or combing jackets, are made of three yards of lawn, madras or dimity, or of four large handkerchiefs. They may be put together after the short sleeved kimono sacque design, joined at the throat and waist with narrow ribbons, or made without any opening at the front but wide enough at the top to be drawn over the head and then adjusted to the shoulders.

IN order to get the best value for her money when buying summer hosiery a girl should know that the term "lisle thread" means a long, staple cotton, combed and hand twisted, and that while "double sole, heel and toe" indicates an extra thread added at those points "double" applies only to single thread goods.

"Guaranteed pure silk" is the term employed to distinguish a high class of hosiery from a low grade of silk stockings made from injured cocoons, husks and reeling waste.

"French foot" stockings differ from those having the "English foot" because their only seam is in the centre of the sole.

"Seamless" applies to stockings knitted in one piece on a circular machine, leaving an opening at the toe to be looped together and "full fashioned" to hosiery finished with flat seams having selvage edges throughout and knit upon machines which automatically drop the requisite number of stitches at various points to make the garment conform to the natural shape of the leg and foot.

"Richelieu rib" means that a single stitch is dropped at three-quarter inch intervals running the full length of the stocking, and "Rembrandt rib" that groups of five drop stitches are separated by one inch of plain knitting running the full length.

"Extracted" applies to hosiery on which wax is applied before dyeing, to form the fancy pattern, and afterward removed.

LATEST FASHIONS IN PARASOLS.

FOR everyday use in the country chintz parasols are excellent—a perfect protection from the freckle and tan bringing rays of the sun. Cretonne is more durable than silk, and can be washed off whenever desired. In bright flowered designs many of the cretonne sun shades are extremely pretty, and are especially smart with a somewhat severe style of dress in lawn or linen, suitable for morning wear.

For afternoon embroidered linen or batiste covers are still smart with the silk and satin parasols, and while there are many to be seen of extremely elaborate design the simpler patterns, easily embroidered if a girl knows anything of this sort of work, are also decidedly smart.

To make the embroidered white parasols stamped pieces of linen and batiste can be bought, or if no attractive design can be found it is a simple task to make a piece. One girl who had accumulated as cotillion favors several parasols of not very heavy or good silk embroidered for herself one extremely pretty cover, which can be slipped at will over whatever shade of parasol she desires. A net or lace cover is a good solution for a flowered silk parasol that has become slightly soiled or faded.

Hand painted parasols are always much to be desired, and the girl who has any talent in this direction can make herself any number of really beautiful sunshades at the cost of the simplest plain silk parasols.

Long sticks are fashionable again for all parasols, so that it is necessary to have at least one parasol with a folding handle to take away on short visits when only a small trunk is required.

Folding umbrellas are once more to be had, and for travelling this style of umbrella is almost obligatory. It is most inconvenient to always carry an umbrella, yet in this zone it is surely never safe to go away even for over night without an umbrella, and as exaggeratedly long handles are in vogue at the moment it is necessary that the umbrella, or rather the stick, should be able to be doubled over.

Colored umbrellas are fashionable again, matching the shade of the rain coat or ulster. Red, dark green, navy blue and brown are all seen among the most recently imported umbrellas.

The smartest handle for an umbrella is the long stick ornamented only with a flat or round silver, gold or colored stone knob. On the silver and gold knobs the monogram and address are marked on the flat top, while if there is only a jade matrix or stone at the top the marking is placed on the silver or gold band at the base of the stone. The initials or monogram of the owner should without fail be placed on an umbrella. Without this means of identification there is no possible hope of its being returned if taken by mistake, while one actually hears occasionally of a marked umbrella finding its way back to its original owner, difficult to believe as this statement may be.

Incense Fad Increasing.

THERE is a craze for incense, and the Japanese have sent it over to us in a bewildering number of forms, all of which are diminutive, as is to be expected from that land of little men and little things. Animals are the popular incense bearers, and you may have a stork to breathe forth the fumes for you, or a fierce looking dragon, or a wise old owl, or even a curious, hideous reptile if your taste runs that way. There is as much variety in the kind of incense as there is in the animal holders of it, and it is most fascinating to try the various kinds summer homes and verandas are likely to take on a decidedly Oriental atmosphere.

THEIR NEW JUNE.

It Came With the Reunion After Both Had Suffered.

By MARIE SYLVESTRE.

[Copyright, 1909, by Associated Literary Press.]

Katherine Denton was a not unusual product of a workaday great city, yet was she an exception to her sisters. In years she was twenty-two when Dwight Sanborn first knew her, and, added to physical attractiveness, was an indefinable something that reminded you of Dresden china or dainty, delicate silks—something alien to a strident, jostling world of dollars and duns.

Miss Denton was a stenographer in the law office where young Sanborn worked after graduation from the law school and where he subsequently earned a junior partnership. In the first days of apprenticeship to the law he remembered more of Browning than of Blackstone and quoted the philosopher Kant to the neglect of the legal Kent.

It was similarity in tastes that first brought the young people closer than stenographer and employer. Sanborn was dictating a petition to be filed in an action for breach of promise, and his levity evidenced his distaste of the task.

Flippantly he quoted from Mrs Browning's immortal sonnet, which the incautious defendant had incorporated in a letter destined to be an exhibit in the case:

"I love thee with a love I seemed to lose
With my lost saints. I love thee with the breath. Smiles"—

The rest escaped him.

"Smiles!" he repeated, in an effort to remember, when Miss Denton interrupted:

"Smiles, tears of all my life, and if God choose
I shal but love thee better after death."

The repetition was impersonal, of course, and the young lawyer let escape him the repressed tenderness of the tones which told of sympathy with the heart that gave the sentiment of the world and more than that for a man who could inspire it.

Sanborn laughed, thanked her for completing the quotation and finished outlining the petition. Afterward he remembered, and a day or two later a daintily bound volume of the Portuguese sonnets reached Miss Denton's desk with Sanborn's card. That was the beginning.

Love came quickly to both of them, and scarcely a year elapsed until Katherine Denton was Katherine Sanborn. Courtship days were dreams of accomplishment and development of higher ideals they believed they wanted to realize.

But, while the woman loved and lived and dreamed, the man deteriorated to the typically masculine. He became brilliant in manipulation of the law's intricacies and was made a regularly retained counsel to a number of immense and important corporations. His days at the office were filled with the law, and the evenings at home felt the dominating influence of ambition's passion.

Instead of the dreams of sweetheart days everything was subordinated to the quest for legal success. And to Katherine came the thought that even in his profession ideals had been dethroned and new gods set up for adoration and devotion, for Sanborn was at his best when piloting a corporation craft through mazes that baffled the intent of the statutes.

"I'm losing the man I married," she cried to herself in the solitude of neglected wifehood. "He's slipping, slipping, and I cannot prevent it, cannot hold him."

With disillusionment came unrest, with unrest rebellion. To the woman it seemed that all that life held worth while was being taken from her. She was envied as the wife of a brilliant man, one destined to acquire great wealth, but these were not desirable to her.

"Sometimes—I'm not quite happy," she told him falteringly one night when he remarked her apparent illness.

"Nonsense, little girl! We're getting along famously," he told her.

"You are," she answered dully.

"Well, it's for us both," was his reply, but it did not satisfy.

For three years she endured it, and because there were only the two of them life grew lonelier and lonelier until in a moment of desperate aberration she fled his house and left a note bidding him not to seek her.

At first she was in doubt where to turn. She had a little money and felt sure she could secure a position as stenographer and that a few weeks would enable her to regain her old time cleverness in the calling. Then she reflected that Sanborn would naturally seek her in the field of her former employment.

She thought of nursing, and it seemed a haven. To forget one's own griefs in comforting others in distress appealed to her. A fortnight after her flight she was a student nurse in a private sanitarium under the direction of a kindly old physician who had known and loved the girl since her earliest days in New York. Wisdom had come to him with years, and he knew that a few months of the seclusion she sought would bring clearer vision.

At the first shock Sanborn was nigh to insanity. That his Katherine was discontented he had not believed. Yet in her note he saw what they had missed because of his money madness. Right—she was a million times right, he told himself bitterly, and could he find her again they would begin together at the start and, please God, go this time aright. But search was unavailing.

Then came the breakdown, complete, miserable, and the physician prescribed the sanitarium where his wife was learning the rudiments of nursing. Sanborn was put in a room in a part of the building where only the graduate nurses were usually allowed; consequently it was some days before Katherine knew the roof that sheltered her housed Dwight.

The physician installed her in a room adjoining Sanborn's and explained enough of the situation to the nurse in charge to secure her as ally in what he hoped to accomplish.

"Hang your medicines! I want Katherine. Do you hear? Get her!" she heard one morning in commanding tones. She started, listened again to his voice in delirium, then peeked cautiously through a half opened door.

He was hardly recognizable, this sallow faced patient with sunken cheeks and bulging eyes. With a quick little cry of pity and love she ran to him.

"Dwight, Dwight," she sobbed, "here is Katherine! Here, dear! Don't you know me?"

"Go away! You're not Katherine. She left me. I've lost her, and I want her. God, I want her!" And tears came to his eyes, as they did to hers.

The wise old doctor permitted her to assist in the nursing, but there were times when she was rigidly excluded. The exclusion hurt her, but the doctor was inexorable, and obedience is the first requirement in a resort of the kind, so she had to obey.

It was the morning of the 1st of June. Katherine was in the room adjoining her husband when she heard him call:

"Oh, Katherine!" And there was a naturalness in the tones that indicated returned reason. She dropped the book she had to rush to him, and in his eyes were remembrance and clear understanding.

"Katherine, it was you, then. I—I thought I dreamed it."

"I'm sorry, Dwight, sorrier than I can tell you. It was all wrong, my going away. I—I want forgiveness," she whispered.

"Forgiveness? You? Rather I should ask it. It has been hard. It seemed cruel, but perhaps it was for our good, sweetheart. The boy you used to love is coming back—coming back—coming back, sweetheart."

For a moment he lay silent, his eyes closed. Then he started.

"The birds, dearest, the birds?" he asked.

"It's the first day of June," she whispered.

"June, Katherine, June for us for always," he murmured sleepily as he lifted the hand that lay in his to his lips and kissed it. And like a tired child he slipped into sleep, sweet sleep, with an awakening to happiness and love.

The Reason.

The prisoner was in a woefully dejected mood when he appeared in court the morning after.

"You are charged with being drunk and disorderly!" thundered the judge.

"Your honor," he explained, "my only excuse is that my wife is in one of her annual throes of spring housecleaning at home. Can't you send me up for about ten days?"

Being a kindly man in spite of his veneer of sternness, the judge's heart was touched with pity, and there were tears of sympathy in his eyes as he pronounced the sentence.—New York Times.

Occasions of Real Sport.

"I don't seem to be getting my money's worth out of my motor car," said Mr. Chuggins. "I wonder what I can do to get a little more real sport out of it."

"My suggestion," replied Miss Cayenne, "would be to persuade your chauffeur to take you along on a joy ride."—Washington Star.

Consistent Self Interest.

"So you saved Mr. Kermudge from drowning?"

"Yes."

"Was he grateful?"

"Not at all. He claimed a half interest in the hero medal because of his presence of mind in hollering for help."—Houston Post.

The Reason.

Teacher—I wonder what your mother would say if she knew how backward you are in geography?

Girl—Oh, my mother says she never learned jogfry and she's married, and Aunt Sally says she never learned jogfry and she's married, and you did and you ain't.—Punch.

PROTECTION FOR SQUASH.

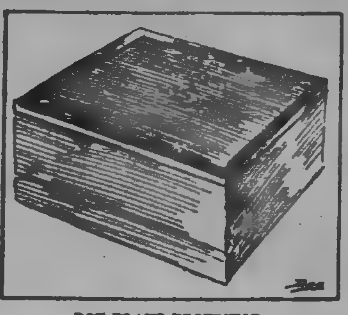
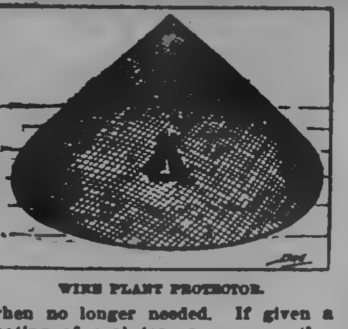
Two Practical and Inexpensive Plans to Prevent Ravages of Borers.

The most difficult matter about growing squashes is to protect the vines from the various insects that prey upon them. This is especially true in the home garden and small plots near buildings or near where squashes or other vine crops were grown the previous year, because the insects hibernate in the buildings and in the ground near the vines they fed upon for the winter. For the striped cucumber beetle there is no poison or repellent that will prove effective and satisfactory at all times. The box plant protector shown in the cut is 12 by 12 inches and six inches high, covered with wire screen, which is set over the hill when the seeds are planted and left on until the plants get too large. Protectors of this type may be made of old pine boxes or other odds and ends, and they need not cost over 5 cents apiece, even if the lumber must be purchased. Another style, in the second cut, is made entirely of wire screen. The one shown was made by cutting a circular piece of wire screen twenty-four inches in diameter and then folding over a section, amounting to one-fourth to one-third of the circumference, and fastening with short pieces of small wire pushed through the meshes and the ends twisted together. It gives a good idea as to how these protectors are made. At retail prices the protectors made this way will cost 8 cents each, but they have this advantage over the box style—the light and air have full access to the plants, as a glance at the ink bottle in the wire plant protector will prove, the bottle being placed in the center of the protector. These pictures were taken early in April, and the ink bottle had to do duty in place of the plants. Another advantage of this style is that the protectors may be nested together and stored easily when no longer needed. If given a coating of coal tar or some weather proof paint occasionally these protectors should last for years. Some of the smallest beetles can crawl through the meshes of wire screen, but one can easily kill the very few that get inside.



BOX PLANT PROTECTOR.



WIRE PLANT PROTECTOR.

The bush or summer squashes if taken when tender and cooked like eggplant are much superior to that well known vegetable. Of course where the bush squashes are about mature and before the borers leave the stem to hibernate in the soil the vines should be pulled and destroyed to kill the borer. This should be done about Aug. 1; the time varies with the latitude. Spraying the first four or five joints of the squash vine (not the leaves) with kerosene emulsion is a good plan, as also are catching and killing the adult moth, which is very conspicuous and easily found when once known. However, the trap crop plan will be found to be the most practical and satisfactory method of dealing with the squash borer. In using the above described screen protectors it is well to remember that the soil should be drawn up about the edges of the box or wire screen and firmed down so as to be sure that none of the bugs can crawl under the sides.

More Apples Needed.

Radical changes are necessary in the culture of apples on this continent or the United States, and Canada will be forced in a few years to import apples instead of exporting them. If it had not been for the enormous crops in the orchards of the Pacific and northwestern states and provinces last year an apple famine would have resulted.

Many of the middle western and eastern states reported small yields in 1908 due to failures in numerous instances, but generally because of pests. Many orchards were neglected, and in scores of places the trees were permitted to die because of inattention.

In 1896 the total product of the crop of the country was 69,070,000 barrels, or 177,675,000 bushels. Since then hundreds of thousands of acres have been added, and methods of fruit growing have improved, yet the government reports show that the aggregate crop in all the states in the Union was not more than 25,000,000 barrels, or 62,500,000 bushels, in 1908.

New Brunswick's Board of Education will introduce military training in the schools.

FEET OF SHEEP.

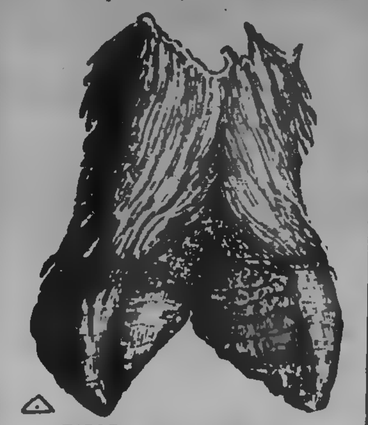
Some Points by a Breeder on Preventing Diseases of the Hoof.

A sheep with defective feet absolutely gives up, for he will not stand pain. They are unable to exercise and also unable to rustle after a living in this world of strife. It is a very easy matter to keep the sheep's feet in perfect condition by a little attention from the shepherd at the proper time, yet it is very difficult to cure the disease after too long neglected. Every shepherd should own a good set of toe clippers or sharp nippers and use them when needed, writes a sheepman in the Breeder's Gazette, Chicago.

The original wild sheep, almost without exception, occupied mountainous districts for their abode, and nature provided them with fast growing hoofs to resist the wear and tear of rock climbing. Since they have been domesticated we are keeping them on soft turf pastures, and therefore the hoofs become overgrown. The outside shell turns under the sole of the foot unless they are properly trimmed back into shape. Where the outside shell is allowed to turn under in this manner it forms a pocket in which dirt, small stones and vegetable matter collect. These soon cause irritation and soreness, and in case this soreness is not promptly attended to it is very liable to develop into true foot rot, a germ disease and very contagious.



EARLY STAGE OF FOOT ROT.

Situated within the cleft of the hoof, between the toes, will be found a large gland. This is an oil duct, not a "worm hole," as many call it. Its use is to lubricate the hoof and prevent its becoming dry and brittle. Should this duct become clogged inflammation will set in, and in such a case the shepherd should gently press out the obstruction and apply a trifle of sweet oil to renew the secretion.

Pasturing the flock on swamp land or in seasons of excessive rain while on even high pasture will often cause foot scald or soreness. Keep a watchful eye for all these slight ailments, and in case you see a sheep limping about or crawling around on its knees get busy and remedy the trifle. It will take but very little effort and time to keep your flock on sound foundations, and by so doing you will ward off greater complications. A good remedy for any form of sore foot in sheep is composed as follows:

Coal tar dip (full strength), one ounce; pure pine tar, one ounce; flowers of sulphur, one ounce; castor oil (raw), one ounce. Thoroughly mix and apply with a feather or soft brush. This is both antiseptic and healing, and two or three applications should effect a cure. The patients should be kept upon dry footing while being treated. Provided these rules are carefully observed it is not necessary for foot rot to break out in any flock.

The Mired Cow.

In the spring of the year, especially where creeks run through farms, cattle often get mired in the cold mud. If left for a time they refuse to get up, as their limbs are numb, and they eventually die. Sometimes cattle lie on the frozen ground or ice with the same result.

Using a derrick is unhandy and unsatisfactory, as the animal must be placed on its feet gradually and when it is in the notion. An Iowa breeder says the best method one can use is to dig two holes, one for the fore legs and the other for the hind legs. Make the holes according to the size of the animal, so it can stand if it wishes to. Place the animal in the holes and let it be, feeding it and taking care of it. When it gets ready it will get out of the hole without help. It may be a week and it may perhaps be a month, but patience will save the lives of many animals which otherwise would be lost.

Dairy Notes.

To maintain the flow of milk long, milk clean.

Cows should never be overheated, excited or worried.

In a cow, generally, good treatment insures good behavior.

Never allow the cows to shrink in milk because of insufficient food.

The market calls for fresh made sweet flavored butter and will have it.

Brine makes a more even distribution of the saline flavor than dry salt can do.

The future usefulness of a cow depends greatly upon her treatment with her first calf.

Thoroughbred Dairy Cows.

Not every farmer is calculated by nature to make a successful breeder, but any farmer who keeps cows can grade up and improve his herd by carefully selecting a good bull that has been thoroughly well bred along dairy lines. Grade stock requires a little more care than scrub stock. The education secured as each improvement takes place gradually fits the man to look after thoroughbreds.

WHAT THEY THINK AT NARRAGANSETT

Narragansett Pier, Aug. 12.—Narragansett Pier is trying to solve the problem of just how immoral it ought to be to retain its popularity as a rich man's summer resort and still give morals something of a run for their money.

The advocate of the liberal policy, which recognizes regulated gambling as a necessity of the place and calls for an increase in the number of saloons is Mrs. John Henry Hanan, the wife of a New York millionaire and recognized here as one of the Pier's leaders of society.

On the other hand is Wm. M. Ivins, of New York, who is afraid that gambling is going to ruin the place and who has declared he will, if necessary, hire fifty men to abolish what he calls the "Gilded Palace of Sin" in Beach street. Mrs. Hanan says:—

"I don't see how any one could desire to hurt this beautiful place. It's nothing more than an ocean grove—the back door to society. Newport, you know, is the front door. As far as gambling is concerned, it's something that's got to exist. My idea of this question is that it ought to be regulated. I believe that this form of amusement is the rich man's pastime, and it's nobody's business how he spends his money as long as it doesn't injure anybody else."

In an address delivered at the close of the parade, Commander-in-Chief Nevius said that on December 31, 1907, the members in good standing of the Grand Army of the Republic numbered 225,157, with 13,480 on the suspended list. There were remaining in good standing on December 31, 1908, 220,616, and 8,539 remaining suspended. The number of comrades reported as having died between December 31, 1907, and December 31, 1908, was 10,134. The gains during the fiscal year by muster and transfer, reinstatement, and by gain from delinquent reports total 21,154.

$100 REWARD $100

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

This is the Coupon—It is Worth 10 cents to You

Only One Cake Free to a Family

Cut It Out Now

Take this Coupon with 5 cents to your Dealer and get a cake of Taylor's Borax Soap and a cake of Infants' Delight.

Taylor's Infants' Delight

Toilet soap should do just two things—remove the dirt and nourish the skin. Let us then show you how we have blended both qualities into a single cake.

For in 43 years we have learned the secret of perfect soap—one that leaves the skin as soft and pink as an infant's. So we call it Infants' Delight.

The olive oil in this soap comes from the gardens of France. There we pay the highest prices—often double what we might pay. But our oil is pure enough to use on your table.

Then we bring cocoanut oil over 12,000 miles from the isle of Ceylon. This oil has for centuries kept the Egyptian's skin soft and beautiful in spite of the tropical sun.

Please use a single cake—then let the results decide for the future.

See for yourself how it lathers into a rich, creamy foam. Note how it wears as thin as a wafer—how it leaves the skin as soft as velvet and as smooth as silk.

Besides this it is the loveliest soap for the baby's skin. And if it is best for the sensitive, pink skin of an infant, it surely is best for your own.

You will like the dainty perfume, too. We pay over $100 a pound for pure Otto of Roses, but it requires 3,000 pounds of rose leaves to make a single ounce. The fragrance is simply exquisite, for it is only the scent of roses—the breath of a million flowers.

Taylor's Borax Soap

Here again is a soap different in every way from the ordinary—it contains borax. Where other soaps merely cleanse, this goes further—it whitens and purifies. The effect of the borax is almost magical—it is the most wonderful soap ever made for the laundry.

In this soap we use only the finest grade of cocoanut oil, for it lathers with greatest abundance. Then we mix in the borax which softens the water and also softens the hands.

Soft water is pure, but hard water contains mineral matters which prevent the soap from lathering. Borax makes the hardest water as soft as rain water, so you require only half the amount of soap.

It cleans the daintiest of laces as well as the heaviest of woolens—and it prevents shrinkage of both. Every odor is removed and the cloth is pure and sweet. This soap also prevents starch from sticking, and adds greatly to the stiffness.

It sterilizes and destroys every germ, so as to avoid any possibility of contagion. Send a bar to the laundry and protect the health of your family.

This powerful cleanser is utterly harmless to the hands—it leaves them whiter and softer than before.

It requires twenty-one days to make a single cake. The labor of more than 200 persons is needed. Yet this wonderful soap costs no more than the ordinary. Simply because we make every year millions of cakes—we can buy at the lowest prices and give you the highest quality.

Don't Wait—
Cut Out the Coupon This Minute

We ask you to do us a favor—we want you to learn for your own interests the difference between these soaps and the ordinary. You have been using some soaps in the past and you naturally consider them good.

But now we ask that you compare them with these—try them both and note how vastly they differ. We gladly invite the comparison because we have made it ourselves and we know just what must be the result.

But it would be unfair to ask you to bear the expense of the test so we have made you this generous offer. We only ask that you buy one soap and we'll buy the other. Cut out the coupon on this page and take it to your dealer this week. Pay him only 5 cents and you will then receive both cakes worth 15 cents.

IMMIGRANTS ARE HONORED SPLENDID CROSS UNVEILED

Memorial Erected to Prospective Irish Settlers Who Died in 1847 is Dedicated at Important Function in Which Many Notables Assist.

Quebec, Aug. 16.—A monument to the Irish immigrants who died in 1847 was unveiled at Grosse Isle, 27 miles below Quebec, yesterday. It takes the shape of a handsome Celtic cross, erected by the Ancient Order of Hibernians. Perfect weather attended the unveiling ceremonies on Grosse Isle. A fleet of six large steamers carried the crowd down the river. There were visitors from Washington, New York, Boston, Toronto, Ottawa, Kingston, Montreal, and other places.

The Canadian Government steamer Druid was at the disposal of the committee in charge, and the steamer Alice had on board the Lieutenant-Governor, Chief Justice Fitzpatrick, and Hon. Charles Murphy, Secretary of State, with whom were Mgr. Sbarretti and Archbishop Begin. The scenes on the island were impressive. A small temporary altar had been erected on the flat ground back of Telegraph Hill, near the cemetery, and there a low Mass was said by Rev. Father Hanley, Redemptorist, rector of St. Patrick's Church, Quebec. Mgr. Sbarretti and the archbishop in their robes attended, and after the Mass the archbishop sang the Libera, or prayer for the dead, assisted by a fine choir from St. Patrick's, Quebec. Under the blazing sun, in the swampy flat and up on the hillside, the congregation knelt in wrapt devotion. They listened to a sermon by Rev. A. [illegible] Maguire, chaplain of the Hibernians, who, making no effort at all at eloquence, told the story of the famine, but dwelt with reiterated detail upon the performance of the forty-two priests, most of them of French extraction, who during the prevalence of the disease, went fearlessly among the dead and dying. Father Taschereau, afterwards cardinal, was one of that band. Father Hugh McQuirk of New Brunswick was another of those priests. The spirit of the French clergy also animated the French-Canadian people, who took into their families and reared as their own children six hundred of the orphans of Grosse Isle.

Mgr. Sbarretti [illegible] imparted the Apostolic benediction to the vast congregation, Archbishop Begin delivered a short address in English. He drew an affecting parallel between the French and Irish Catholics in Canada, who had both learned upon that spot the lesson of bitter hardship, and for whom the symbolism of the Cross had the same meaning.

The unveiling of the monument was then performed on top of the hill. The majestic Celtic cross of Canadian granite occupies a most commanding position, and can be seen at a distance of ten miles from the river. It was flanked yesterday by the banners of Ireland and Quebec, these being the only flags in the immediate vicinity, although Canadian and American flags were elsewhere abundantly in evidence. On the three sides of the stone bears the following inscription in English, French, and Irish: "Sacred to the memory of thousands of Irish emigrants, who, to preserve the faith, suffered hunger and exile in 1847-48, and, stricken by fever, ended here their sorrowful pilgrimage. Erected by the Ancient Order of Hibernians in America, and dedicated at the Feast of the Assumption, 1909."

Present with Mr. Charles J. Foy of Perth, Ont., national president of the A.O.H., were the Lieutenant-Governor of Quebec, Sir Charles Fitzpatrick, Hon. Charles Murphy. Hon. L. A. Taschereau, William Power, M.P., C. J. Doherty, M.P., Montreal; Hon. Charles Devlin, E. Devlin, M.P., M. Turcotte, M.P., Dr. Guerin, Montreal, Matthew Cummings, and E. McCrystal, representing the national board of the Hibernians.

Mr. Foy's opening speech was a masterpiece, and when he called upon Mgr. Sharretti to draw aside the veil from the front of the stone, the apostolic delegate spoke a few sentences praising the popes for their love of Ireland.

The fourth inscription on the stone read: "Memorial tablet to the priests who voluntarily ministered to the typhus-stricken emigrants."

After Mr. Matthew Cummings had spoken, Hon. Charles Murphy made a fine plea for the erection of a tablet to the Canadian clergy, both Protestant and Catholic, who had died in 1847 by the contraction of typhus.

DROWNING FATALITIES AT SUMMER RESORTS

Young Bank Clerk Loses His Life in Surf at Centre Island —Boy Drowns at Woodbine Beach Despite Heroic Efforts of Young Man to Save Him.

Toronto, Aug. 16.—R. G. H. Evans, clerk in the Eglington branch of the Bank of Montreal, was drowned in the lake off Centre Island at the foot of Manitou road at 4.30 yesterday afternoon.

He was bathing with a number of friends at the time, but on account of the rapidly rising sea, his companions had all come ashore, and he was attempting to follow when the undertow dragged him down. At the time he was within 50 feet of the shore.

Fraser Bryce, Edward Marriott and Geoffrey Hill were in the party. They had decided that the surf was getting too strong, and started ashore together. As the three named reached the beach, they turned and saw Evans being carried out by the current. A plank was thrown to him, but he went under just before it reached him.

Evans was 22 years old. His relations live in Sudbury. He had been for some time in the Yonge and Richmond streets branch of the Bank of Montreal, but about six weeks ago was removed to the Eglinton branch.

Victor Miville, aged 11, son of Hospice A. Miville, a painter, living at 102 Carlaw avenue, was drowned and three other boys had a narrow escape while swimming in the lake at Woodbine Beach Saturday afternoon.

When the sea came up the four boys did not think it was dangerous and did not go ashore. At 3.45, while wading through the billows, they all stepped into a hole and the waves threw them off their feet. Russel Oak and Matthew Stone, aged about 14, succeeded in regaining their feet after a struggle and getting to safety. Alfred and Victor Miville, brothers, disappeared from view.

Their cries alarmed several men who were sitting on the verandahs of their homes, some distance away. Fred Bragg and Albert Quinlan, both of Woodbine Beach, went, without disrobing, to the rescue.

After a hard struggle Bragg brought Alfred ashore; but the brother went down despite Quinlan's efforts and his body was washed ashore 20 minutes later.

Boy Drowns While Fishing.

Hastings, Aug. 16.—John Murray, the 10-year-old son of Mrs. John Murray, was drowned in the Trent Saturday morning. He was fishing off the cribwork of the dam and slipped in.

Drowned In the Niagara.

Niagara Falls, N.Y., Aug. 16.—The body of a man, 45 years old, five feet ten inches in height, and weighing 150 pounds, was taken from the Whirlpool yesterday. The little hair on his head was light-colored. Identification may be established by a clover-leaf pin set with a brilliant. The body had been in the water only a short time.

DOCK LABORERS' TROUBLE AT FORT WILLIAM AT AN END

Afte One Week of Hostilities Men Hold a Meeting and Are Persuaded by Mayor Pelletier to Have Dispute Settled by Arbitration.

Fort William, Aug. 16.—The striking C.P.R. freight handlers returned to work to-day.

A mass meeting of 5,000 strikers and friends was held yesterday afternoon, and was addressed by Mayor Pelletier, who urged the men to resume employment and submit their grievance to a board of arbitration under the Lemieux Disputes Act. General Manager Bury of the Canadian Pacific had previously given his consent to the mayor to take the men back if they agreed to arbitration.

The strikers were inclined to demand the release of 15 companions sent to jail for riotous conduct, and they also wanted the withdrawal of the troops, but Mayor Pelletier replied that the law must take its course.

Finally, the strikers accepted the mayor's proposal, and were given 36 hours within which to return to employment with the company. Nearly 150 strike-breakers arrived yesterday morning, making 400 working to-day, enabling the steamer Manitoba to unload and get away.

Of all the foreign strikers, the Greeks are declared to be the most dangerous. While only one striker was actually found with a revolver and locked up, several revolvers were found on the ground apparently dropped by strikers on seeing they were going to be searched. Another feature was that of the many weapons seized, only two showed signs of recent use, confirming the opinion that the weapons used in Thursday's fight had safely been hidden away, probably in the bush.

Acland Will Go.

Ottawa, Aug. 16.—Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King, Minister of Labor, received yesterday a telegram from the strike committee of the freight handlers at Fort William, Ont., requesting the intervention of the Department, and F. A. Acland, the Deputy Minister, who was so successful in bringing to a conclusion the longshoremen's strike at Montreal two years ago, leaves for Fort William to-day.

CANADIAN VESSEL IS DESTROYED

St. John, N.B., Aug. 16.—A despatch from Yokohama to Troop & Sons, shipowners here, tells of the loss of the British bark Howard D. Troop, at Yokohama. She is afire and has been scuttled. Capt. Durkee of Yarmouth was her commander. It is believed the officers and crew are safe. The bark was owned by Troop & Sons and others here. She was a four-masted steel vessels, built at Glasgow in 1892, of 2,080 tons. She sailed from New York in March for Yokohama, and was to go thence to Portland, Oregon, and the United Kingdom.

MANY CHINESE ARE DROWNED

Victoria, B.C., Aug. 16.—According to advices brought by the Empress of India, there were recently disastrous floods in Manchuria and Korea. At Kibin 7,000 houses were washed away and over a thousand Chinese drowner. Ping Yang and Antung, in Korea, were also submerged, the latter place being flooded by a sudden rise of the Yalu. Many lives were lost.

Many soldiers and workmen at Niiona Village, in Okayama, narrowly escaped being killed, when a coolie made three ineffective attempts to dynamite the barracks, in revenge for non-payment of wages by the contractor. He secreted some dynamite in the barracks and laid a train which he fired, 15 workmen being hurt by the explosion. The soldiers were absent when the dynamite was exploded.

TRAINS COLLIDE EIGHT KILLED

Colorado Springs, Aug. 16.—Eight are dead and fifty injured, some fatally, as a result of a head-on collision between train No. 8, northbound, and train No. 1, southbound, on the Denver & Rio Grande and Husted, 13 miles north of Colorado Springs, Saturday morning. The trains, both running at terrific speed, met on a curve. No. 8, drawn by two engines, telescoped the baggage car and smoker of No. 1, and all three engines, were thrown into the ditch.

With more than 400 passengers on the two trains, the excitement following the accident was indescribable.

Found Murdered.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 16.—News has reached here from Muddy Branch, Md., of the discovery there of a murder that had apparently been committed more than a week ago. The victim was Henson Poole, aged 23 years, and an autopsy showed death to have followed three bullet wounds in the head and a blow on the right side that fractured the skull. A considerable sum of money together with his watch and diamond ring, are missing.

STEAMER LUSITANIA IS GUTTED

Liverpool, Aug. 16.—The Cunard liner Lucania lies submerged at the Huskisson dock, seriously damaged, having been almost gutted from her funnels forward by fire, which broke out on board the liner at 7 o'clock Saturday evening.

The flames are supposed to have originated in the saloon kitchen. The fire brigade of the vessel, with two powerful motor engines, turned out immediately at the first alarm and found the first saloon burning fiercely from end to end. Despite all efforts the flames gradually worked forward, until they reached the steerage, consumed all the woodwork there and then played havoc with the forehold.

At 5 o'clock yesterday morning it was decided to flood the vessel by admitting water into her from the dock. A half-dozen firemen who were on the gangway were thrown into the water, but all were rescued. It was 10 o'clock yesterday morning before the fire was under control.

NUREMBERG FORBIDS WOMEN'S TRAINS

Berlin, Aug. 16.—Following the example of other municipalities which have recently passed edicts against the wearing of long hatpins the police authorities of Nuremberg also are starting in to regulate the question of woman's dress. They have issued a regulation forbidding any woman to wear upon the public streets a dress which is provided with a train. Violations of the rule, which, it is said, has been passed in the interests of the public health, will be punished either by a fine or imprisonment up to two weeks.

The idea of the authorities is that trains not only stir up but collect microbes, and thus subject their wearers to risk of infection.

AN EARTHQUAKE SHAKES JAPAN

Tokio, Aug. 16.—A severe earthquake occurred in Central Japan Saturday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock. The shock was particularly hard around Kyoto, Osake, Lake Biwa and Nagoya. All railroad communication with these districts has been interrupted.

Many houses collapsed and it is feared that many people were killed or injured.

Nagoya, with a population of more than 250,000, and one of the principal cities in Japan, located 170 miles west of Tokio, was badly damaged.

Details are meagre because of the interruption of telegraphic communication with the cities most affected. Twenty-one deaths and seventy people injured have thus far been reported.

One-fourth of the Shiga prefecture sustained considerable damage. Mount Misaki at the northern end of Lake Biwa, an extinct volcano, is reported to have collapsed near the top.

LAST THOUGHT WAS THE RECORD

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 16.—Passengers who were on the Southern train, wrecked near Bristol, Va., bring details of the bravery of Samuel Bush, engine driver, of Knoxville, Tenn., who died as a result of his injuries.

Bush asked for a last look at his old engine, as hopeless a wreck as was its driver. When the passengers came to him with whisky he begged them to look after the comfort of the passengers. Told that no passengers had been injured, he said: "That's good; but before I take this whisky, I want you men to smell my breath and testify, if need be, that I had not been drinking when this happened. All an engineer has is his record," he said feebly, "and he cannot afford to have anything against that."

He worked for the Southern for 30 years.

PROBABILITIES.

Tuesday, northerly winds, fine and a little cooler.

COBOURG VISITED BY A BAD FIRE

Cobourg, Aug. 16.—Fire early yesterday morning did damage estimated at about $45,000, and residents are congratulating Chief Rouse that he prevented its being a much higher loss. The heaviest loser, is George Thompson, of Thompson & Macdonald, whose implement storehouse and offices with six horses were destroyed. The loss is placed at $40,000, about one-quarter insurance. The fire started in the stable at 12.45 a.m. and fanned by a strong east wind, spread to the stables of the Durham House. The firemen's prompt work at this spot undoubtedly saved the hotel. John Vonburg's stable and Davidson's livery stable were burned and the Division street Methodist Church were scorched.

The Port Hope firemen responded to a call, arriving an hour after the fire broke out. Residents whose homes were in danger also profited by their own labors with small hose. The water pressure was good.

AN INTERNATIONAL RAID ON SALOON

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Aug. 16.—Acting in concert by pre-arrangement, American and Canadian excise officers, in automobiles, swooped down Saturday, from opposite sides of the border, on John Overton, who for years has straddled the line near Rouse's Point, with a saloon that has long been an annoyance to officers of both countries.

Overton and his wife were arrested, after a stiff fight, in the Canadian wing of their house, and nearly a wagon-load of whisky was confiscated.

In two other raids on line saloons, much liquor was seized, but no arrests were made.

PRINCE CHING.
PRINCE CHUN.
LIANG TUN YEN.

Pekin, Aug. 16.—Japan has broken off her railway negotiations with China in an ultimatum issued here, and is to begin at once to reconstruct the Antung Muckden line. The ultimatum comes without warning, just notifying the Wai Wu Pu.

Preparations were rushed secretly during the last week for work on the line, and the Commander of the Japanese Manchurian forces forbade mention of what was going on. The outlook becomes sinister, and the last step has caused a grave situation.

POWERS MAY INTERVENE

Greece is Ordered to Lower Her Flag in Crete—Powers Send a Joint Note

London, Aug. 16.—Unless Greece complies with the demand of Turkey and forces the people of Crete to haul down the Greek flag which they have hoisted, the four protecting powers of Crete—Great Britain, Russia, Italy and France—will perform this act, using force if necessary.

This is the substance of a joint note signed by the four powers and presented to the Turkish Government Saturday. In order to carry out the policy and to be prepared to use force if necessary to oblige the Cretans to haul down the objectionable flag, each of the four protecting powers decided to send an additional warship to Canea, the capital of the island of Crete, and at the same time expressed the hope to the Turkish Government that in view of the steps they had taken that Turkey will not think it necessary to order her fleet to Cretan waters.

The joint note of the powers to Turkey is the direct result of a communication from the Cretan Government declaring that it was unable to force the hauling down of the Greek flag. This action of the powers followed sharply upon Turkey's note to Greece Friday, demanding a formal declaration respecting her intention as to Crete, and thus creating a situation grave enough to move the powers to action.

Workmen Leave Gary.

Chicago, Ill., Aug. 16.—Laborers are deserting Gary, Ind., the "marvelous steel city," in such numbers as to threaten embarrassment to the United States Steel Corporation in the operation of its big plant. Unofficial reports are that more than five hundred unskilled men have left the town and that more are preparing to go because the "lid" is on tight and it is virtually impossible to buy a glass of beer or a drink of any kind in the town.

First Samples Arrive.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 16.—The Ogilvie Flour Mills Co., received on Saturday the first samples of new wheat. They consisted of about ten pounds each and came from Rosenfeld and Rathwell. The Rosenfeld sample was a beautiful one of pure red fyfe wheat of a deep amber shade and would grade extra No. 1 hard, and will make a very strong flour. This farmer will have a yield of 26 bushel to the acre. The sample from Rathwell is fine plump wheat and will grade No. 1 northern. Both farmers cut this wheat last Monday.

THE NEWS AS TOLD IN DESPATCHES

Robbery In Owen Sound.

Owen Sound, Aug. 16.—The robbery of a residence was reported to the police at five o'clock yesterday morning when headquarters was called up by James McLaughlan, a well-known manufacturer, and was informed that some time during the night his room had been entered, and a gold watch and over $50 had been abstracted from the pockets of the vest and pants. These articles of clothing were found at the foot of the stairway. The police have no clue.

Killed on the Railway.

Oakville, Aug. 16.—The mangled remains of George Tomlinson, a farm hand, were found lying beside the Grand Trunk tracks a short distance east of Oakville Station by sectionmen. He had been seen in town under the influence of liquor and it is supposed that while going to his boarding-house he stumbled over the tracks, was unable to move and was run over.

1,069 Auto Victims In Chicago.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Automobiles have killed 51 persons and injured 1,018 within the limits of Chicago during the first seven months of this year.

French Money For the West.

Montreal, Aug. 16.—Hon. Philippe Roy of Edmonton, who has just returned from Paris, announced yesterday that the new trust company to be known as the Canadian Mortgage Association, which he has been promoting in France for a year is now an accomplished fact, that the papers are all signed with a leading French bank, and that the concern will open its doors during the coming fall, doing the same kind of business west of the great lakes as the Credit Foncier Franco-Canadiene does in Eastern Canada.

The headquarters of the company will be Winnipeg.

"Kingston" Is Rammed.

Rochester, N.Y., Aug. 16.—The steamer "Turbinia" of Toronto rammed the steamer "Kingston" in the harbor of Charlotte at 9.30 last night, doing considerable damage to the latter and in her flounderings around the mouth of the river several other large boats were more or less damaged.

The Turbinia was about to leave for Toronto, but her lines were still fast to the dock when the engineer opened his throttle wide and she forged ahead at full speed, snapping her lines.

THE CONSUMER AND THE DUTY

Under the new U. S. tariff the Philippines as a U. S. possession is allowed to supply one hundred and fifty million cigars annually, duty free. This will help the Philippine market, but it will not give the U. S. smoker any cheaper cigars.—Caygeon Independent.

This accurate statement of Editor Smith of the Bobcaygeon Independent of the facts of the smoke business interferes with the Globe's published idea of what duties do. It has always maintained that the consumer pays the duty. It follows, therefore, that with no duty the article should be just so much the cheaper, otherwise it would show that it was the exporter who was paying it. The Philippine case, however, puts the condition as it really is.

THE "REBELLION" IN NEW ONTARIO

A portion of the much talked of New Ontario, is so real new and fresh that it is yelling its head off for separation or the cutting out of a new province. The trouble with a certain class of men who go to new districts, is that if they are checked in stealing everything in sight, they consider that they are shamelessly ill-treated. — Bobcaygeon Independent.

The same "rebellion" or spirit of it is going on amongst the grabbers everywhere. The financier is the most ruthless of men. He allows nothing to stand in his way. Theories of government, like culture or Christianity, are to him just so much "stuff." It is such men as these who rebel against the "policy for the public" of Sir James Whitney. It is they who as the Independent says, are doing the rebelling and Sir James is the best man we know for them to rebel against.

EDITORIAL NOTES

"Under the above heading our evening contemporary develops a half column of froth and slime."—The Examiner.

The strikes and encounters at Glace Bay, N.S., and Fort William would indicate that the Conciliation Act is an act in a play that has been hissed off the stage. We hear very little of Mr. Mackenzie King these days.

A notable feature in connection with the wheat crop of the west is that it has been much less boomed than usually. One report has actually admitted considerable damage in streaks through hail. Another goes so far as to admit that the crop does not promise more than an average. There will be more faith in the west, when the westerners are more addicted to the truth.—Bobcaygeon Independent.

The new Public school readers have appeared up to the 4th and are as good a production as could possibly be desired for the purpose. The marvel is that such results can possibly be obtained at the insignificant sum at which they must be sold. The workmanship is the best, the literary matter is excellent in all parts and altogether the Department of Education did a wise thing in breaking away from the past both for the public purse and for the pupils.—The Beaverton Express.

Midland papers are anxious about the Georgian Bay Canal scheme and in its last issue the Argus points to this proposal as ruin to the town of Midland. The Argus may be comforted at least as far as Ottawa is at present concerned. The railways have the Government by the ear and no canal scheme be it ever so economic will have the least chance of progress against those powerful monied interests. The transportation problem in Canada is one of railways only, just now.—Beaverton Express.

Denver, Col., Aug. 13.—Within a
This is what Ontario escaped;
month a hearing will begin in Seattle, Wash., that government officials here assert will disclose proof of gigantic frauds in connection with coal lands in Alaska.

The facts pointing to alleged frauds are known to Secretary Ballinger, of the United States department of interior, and Fred Dennett, commander of the general land office. That more than 200,000 acres of rich coal lands in Alaska, some of them having veins 65 feet in thickness, have been seized upon through dummy entries poured through agents of six large corporations, the land office has evidence to prove, according to information made public. The view of the general land office and Commissioner Dennett is that the entries found to be fraudulent should be cancelled at once.

One of the coal companies involved in the alleged fraud is located in Seattle, another in New York and still another in San Francisco, Omaha and Chicago. The so-called dummy entry men are recruited principally from the docks of Seattle, the mines of Butte and the laboring classes of Chicago.

Ottawa, Aug. 12.—When it was stated some days ago that the Executive of the Dominion Rifle Association had decided to disallow the rear sight on the Ross rifle at Bisley, denial was promptly forthcoming from the interested press. A member of the executive, however, said yesterday that the report was correct. He said that the sight in question was an auxiliary or peep sight fitted to the bolt of the rifle. "To allow this sight," he said, "would be to discriminate against many of the marksmen who will compete at this year's matches. Only a few of the competitors—those who have shot on the Bisley team and some in the city regiments—have the new sights. Others would be unable to obtain them, therefore it was decided, in order to have all marksmen compete on even terms, to prohibit the use of this particular sight."

In answer to a further question he intimated that in his opinion the new back sight is not adapted for active service.

"How did the sight come to be used at Bisley, then?"

"For the reason that at the recent Bisley meeting the N. R. A. Council decided to permit the use of almost any adjunct to shooting for the purpose of experiment. We have the benefit of that experiment now without handicapping the majority of our competitors by permitting the use of a sight that is not available to all marksmen alike."

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

TO KEEP DOWN USE OF PROFANITY

Perverted Habit is Attaining Shocking Proportions

The Halifax Herald says: "George Wright of Halifax has for many years been conducting a one-man campaign against profanity. He has not been heard from of late, but no doubt is still actively following up his work of reform. Many, reading Mr. Wright's outpourings of indignation against this misuse of English, may have felt that he takes too serious a view of the situation. But it must be confessed with regret that he is not greatly exaggerating the true conditions in anything he has said. Even in the past few years the increasing predisposition to profanity and obscenity has been painfully apparent. Right here in Halifax, and even among those who pride themselves on their conduct in all respects, the habit is growing, while among the other classes the extent to which the mother tongue is perverted is positively shocking.

"Are we to adopt, in the ordinary development of language, words and expressions which, to our fathers, were rightly regarded as vulgar and indecent?"

Sandy McAlli, the alleged murderer of Nicholas Lagoy, was arrested in an Italian camp near Bath, N.B.

THE LOST POEM OF KIPLING

(The hitherto lost poem.)

The gull shall whistle in his wake, the blind wave break in fire,
He shall fulfil God's utmost will unknowing His desire;
And he shall see old planets pass and alien stars arise,
And give the gale his reckless sail in shadow of new skies.
Strong lust of gear shall drive him out and hunger arm his hand
To ring his food from a desert nude, his foothold from the sand.
His neighbors' smoke shall vex his eyes, their voices break his rest,
He shall go forth till south is north, sullen and dispossessed;
And he shall desire loneliness, and his desire shall bring
Hard on his heels a thousand wheels a people and a king;
And he shall come back in his own track, and by his scarce, cool camp
There he shall meet the roaring street the derrick and the stamp,
For he must blaze a nation's ways with hatchet and with brand
Till on his last won wilderness an empire's bulwarks stand.

THE DOGS WILL TRAIL SLAYER

Hunt for Strange Man Who May be Concerned in Anna Schumaker's Death

Rochester, Aug. 14.—The hunt for the strange man who has been living in the woods near Holy Sepulchre, on the chance that he mya be the slayer of Anna Schumacher, the 17-year-old girl, whose body was found in a shallow grave on Monday is still in progress. This morning a sheriff's posse is working north of Barnard's Crossing in Greece, and beating the bush and swamps toward the lake.

The famous Doberman police dogs from Pittsford, N.Y., will be let loose on the murderer's trail this afternoon, when their breeder and trainer will bring in Bertel Von Hohenstein and Bertha VanKiel, the two best of his kennel. He will be met at Exchange street at 2 o'clock by Sheriff Gillete, who enlisted the dogs in his search, and will be taken to the swamps between the Ridge Road and Lake Ontario.

These Doberman police dogs are famous the world over for their keen scent and courageous hunting qualities. In a recent car burglary case near Buffalo, they were of great assistance in tracking down a gang of thieves.

There was a conference this morning between Chief of Police Quigley, Sheriff Gillette and Inspector of Detectives Whaley. The hunt for the slayer has narrowed down to one person, a young man known to be morally weak, who, it is said, has been in the habit of frequenting cemeteries and chasing women.

This man is missing, and it is not unlikely the police believe he may be the person the posse is now searching for, the description given by farmer who have seen the fugative tallying with that of the suspect.

REMARKABLE DREAM STORY

The following dream story is told in "The Story of My Life," by Augustus J. C. Hare. The story was told to Mr. Hare in Rome in 1870;

Lady Vernon dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, crossing the entrance hall, and she awoke with a great start. After a while she composed herself to sleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, on the middle of the staircase, and she awoke with a great shock. She got up. She thought she could not be quite well, and she took a little sal volatile. At last she fell asleep again, and she dreamed—she dreamed that she saw the butler with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other, standing at her bedroom door, and she awoke in a great terror, and she jumped out of bed, and she said, "I'll have an end of this; I'll have an end of these foolish imaginations." And she rushed to the door, and she threw the door wide open. And there at the door stood the butler, with a knife in one hand and a candle in the other. And when he suddenly saw Lady Vernon in her white nightdress, with her hair streaming down her back, he was so dreadfully frightened that he dropped the candle on the floor and rushed off down the staircase and off to the stables, where there was a horse ready saddled and bridled, on which he meant to have ridden away when he had murdered Lady Vernon. And he rode away, without having murdered her at all, and he was never heard of again.

LABOR CONDITION IN GERMANY AS VIEWED BY SAMUEL GOMPERS

Copyright, 1909, by P. S. Ridsdale, for Samuel Gompers.

Berlin, August 5, 1909

During the last eight days, besides making flying visits to The Hague and Bremen, I have stopped over either one day or two in Brussels, Antwerp, Amsterdam and Hamburg. In the latter cities the time at my disposal permitted me to attend labor meetings and to have interviews with local leaders in the movement, some of whom were old friends. I also obtained in each place a hasty glance at some of the harsher features of a society which compels victims to protest and at some of the results of the methods by which they protest.

Poverty, such as exists in Belgium and Holland can hardly be conceived by the average dweller in an American city. In our country, the able-bodied man may generally see some light of hope ahead. Work may for the present be toilsome, the quarters one lives in uninviting, the pay small and occasionally unemployment depressing. But on seeing how the very poor live and work in Brussels, Antwerp and Amsterdam, one obtains a view of the truth that poverty has indeed most striking differences of degree in its deprivations and its struggles. In New York, even dire poverty reckons its purchases in cents or nickles and it looks forward to earning dollars; in Amsterdam, coins circulate that equal in value a fifth of an American cent, and families subsist for a week on a budget that the smallest gold piece might cancel.

It is to be accepted as true that any observer who wishes to make a point of the existence of poverty anywhere can find the material for his thesis. Infirm old age, helpless infancy, the lame, the halt, the blind—physical human feebleness in various forms everywhere brings the duty of succor to the strong. But when one sees, not weakness, but strength, and not only individuals but masses habitually struggling for barest subsistence, he can but find himself asking why such a state of things should be so, and what could be done in the way of relief. In this spirit of inquiry I put on record some of the evidences of chronic misery among the masses I have witnessed during the last week.

Brussels has a rather large co-operative establishment organized by a number of working people. Its headquarters is the "Maison de People." While examining the details of this voluntary association of mutual assistance, mention was made to me that a district in which "home-industry" was carried on was close by. A co-operator who was acquainted in the neighborhood volunteered to show our party how the dwellers in the house lived and gained their living. We first went to a particular house with which our guide was best acquainted and found it to be an old one, but of substantial build. A faucet in the alley to the building was the only supply of water for all the occupants. The narrow steep stairway had just been washed and the walls recently calcimined. We mounted to the attic to find what we had come to see. It was two small attic rooms, the larger one about 10 by 8 feet, the smaller room about 8 by 6, the only daylight to each room being admitted by a scuttle formed of a single pane of glass. In the living-room were the wife, a bright young woman, and four small children, bread-pale and pasty faced. A bed, crib, a cooking stove, cupboard, and a few of other household effects left little space in which we could move. In the man's workroom, a tailor's table took up nearly half the space; beside it was a crib. The man, tall and well made, had an intelligent face. Directly under the scuttle of this small room stood an easel. On it was a painted flower piece, nearly finished and quite well done. His work was that of a tailor doing custom work and to order. His condition was, therefore, better, it was explained to me, than the tailors who work in their homes and who are employees working for others. Trade was dull for the moment, and our host had turned to painting, at which, our guide, his friend, said he had once had a fair success. The rental for this attic space was $2.50 per month, the property being owned by the city, which is soon to be torn down. Formerly the rental was $3.60. The clothing of the family, especially of the children, was scant and the least possible cost.

Those in a position to know and whose trustworthiness is unquestioned, declared that at least 17 per cent of the industries of Belgium was being carried on in the homes, in the bed-rooms of the workers of that country, and situated in much greater squalor than had been shown me.

To leave this scene for the moment and to take up others at Scheveningen, Holland's Atlantic City, a few miles from The Hague, our party, after purchasing postal cards, had some talk with the two young saleswomen who were in charge. As some of their statements were interesting, I took up the conversation, being acquainted with the Dutch language, it being the language of my ancestors. These girls worked for 4 Gulden a week ($1.60), out of which they paid for board 2 1-2 Gulden, or one dollar a week. Their working hours were from eight o'clock in the morning until ten o'clock at night, including Sundays. They were neat in appearance, as they were obliged to be. They ate their breakfast at home, and as they added, "we are not permitted to take time to eat anything from the moment we enter the store at eight o'clock in the morning until we reach home about 10.30 in the evening. Then we take supper and retire for the night. We take some bread with us from home, and as we get a chance we take a bite." They earned the current wages of sales-girls in such places. Respectable poverty at 25 cents a day.

The testimony of the dog with regard to poverty is emphatic. In the famous market place, before the old town hall in Brussels, the peddlers' carts have dogs hitched to them as a usual thing. This draft-dog, I am told, is especially bred for the purpose, being like the cart-horse, big-boned and heavy, whatever his breed. His life seems to make him ill-tempered; it renders him above "tough" among dogs, in appearance. Not infrequently he is hitched up as one of a pair in a team, his mate being a bent and wrinkled woman.

A great deal, not only of market produce, but goods to be delivered to the household, is hauled in Brussels and Antwerp by dogs and their human assistants. In Antwerp the market-place and its neighborhood on the morning I was there was a pandemonium with the barking of scores, aye, hundreds of dogs, weary of their burdens and evidently protesting against their lot. The Belgium law, in its benevolence, has taken recognition of the dog as a social factor. Before the dog is permitted to be hitched up in a cart he must have attained a certain height and weight. Of course, no such benevolent consideration protects the women. The dog, with his sad and surly looks seems not to be satisfied with the social palliatives for his protection. If he but knew the strength of his jaws he might do more than growl and bark, he might go on strike.

The delivery push-carts in Antwerp (one man furnishing the power) are in many cases as large as the two-horse team waggons in use by the department stores in New York and other large cities. Several circumstances contribute to this "motor" man's assistance. Many of the streets have a smooth pavement, the waggon has springs, the body being evenly balanced on two huge wheels. It is almost astonishing how much weight a draft-man can learn to push under these "favorable" conditions and the despair of poverty. One waggon passing through a neighborhood of fine houses was loaded with nearly five hundred Kilo loaves of bread, well upon a thousand pounds in total weight. Another hung with a score of empty peddlers' market-baskets, was being propelled by two boys of perhaps ten or twelve years, and a woman, apparently their mother. This party had improved on the old style of tie and ride; each took a turn at riding while the others pushed or pulled at a lively trot towards the market. I did not see them after their baskets were filled; no doubt they had studied out some little craft-tricks to call in the aid of gravity, or some other way to lighten the strain on them during the long trip to the quarter of the city, their cart-signs told from whence they came. Both dogs as well as their team-mates, men, women or children, are harnessed to the waggons. And yet a great English economist has said, "The poor will be as lazy as they can be."

NEW READERS HAVE REACHED THIS CITY AND ARE ON SALE

The long-looked-for new Public School readers have at last arrived in this city. Last Thursday Mr. R. J. Soden received his first consignment of the works, and they have been on sale at his store ever since.

In this connection it is rather interesting to note the views of two parties who are greatly interested in the inauguration. On the one hand, the teachers who use the readers will be glad of a change from the old stuff they have been using for the last twenty years, and on the other hand, those who have passed through the schools and who still have recollections of the "memorizin'" and "potry" it contained, will be sorry to see the old books go. It is often said that school day friendships are always deepest, and what could be deeper or more lasting than the memory of the old-time text book? Even now, as one thinks of the old yellow-covered and ink-stained treasure, visions of a drowsy school room and stern-faced oppressor rise up before him. Small, wavering voices are recalled, as they plod carefully through the version of,

"It was the schooner Hesperus
That sailed the wintry sea," and as he thinks of the awe and horror with which he used to read of the fate of the skipper and his daughter, he is indeed sorry to learn that it is to be discarded. Then there was the story of "The White Ship," with Fitz-Stephen always in the foreground, bawling at the top of his voice, "Give three casks of wine to the thirty sailors of renown." Another old favorite was the story of John Gilpin, with its sing-song meter and catchy humor:

"John Gilpin was a citizen
Of credit and renown,
A leader and a train band captain
Of famous London town."

And then there was a nice little poem which recounted at length a sad story of how a newly-married couple sat on a stile and made love to each other.

For extremes there were "The Abbot of Aberbrothock" and "You must Call me Early." Oh, how our blood did boil as we read of the murderous villainy of the Abbot. "Down sank the bell with a gurgling sound." There was richness of imagination for one. There was room for thought. Like "A Thing of Beauty," it was a great favorite with teachers in literature exams. Nobody understood either of them, but that did not make much difference. By superb guess work they generally managed to get a pass on the subject, and that ought to be enough for even the most exacting of parents. Everybody memorized "A Thing of Beauty" on coming into the school, and as promptly forgot it on leaving the place.

And then there was "The Vision of Mirza," and a sketch from "Ivanhoe," with friend Locksley in the latter continually bringing before the minds of the assembled audience the fact that nevertheless "his grandsire had drawn a good bow at Hastings."

Truly, the rising generation is missing some grand old stories and some rare old poems with the introduction of the new readers.

GASOLINE WAS AT A PREMIUM

Scarcity of Liquid Causes Autos to Remain Inactive

Peterborough almost had a famine in gasoline circles last week. As a matter of fact, on Saturday it was as scarce as liquor is supposed to be in a local option town. Several automobiles and gasoline launches were compelled to remain inactive throughout the day, owing to the fact that none of the liquid could be bought anywhere in town.

To-day, however, several barrels were received and the siege lifted.

YOUTH ARRESTED ON BURGLARY CHARGE

Accused of Burglarizing Collier-Cunningham Co.'s Premises Alleged to Have Tried to Pass Worthless Cheques Captured on Short Notice.

P.C. Meharry effected a quick capture this morning when he landed a youth giving the name of Edward Dey, in the cells a couple of hours after being notified by the Collier-Cunningham Company that a robbery had taken place at the company's premises at the foot of Simcoe street between Saturday night and Monday morning. As most of the stolen property was found on Dey, there seems little doubt that he is the man wanted. Mr. H. B. Collier notified P.C. Meharry of the burglary at 9.30 this morning, and by about half-past eleven the young fellow, who is suspected, was in custody. Besides stealing from the Collier-Cunningham Company, he also tried to pass worthless cheques, it is alleged, and Corey's grocery, at the corner of Aylmer and Hunter streets, was one of the places visited for the purpose of negotiating valueless paper.

The entrance to the office of the place, where a fair-sized haul was made, was obtained through a rear door. A small amount of money was taken from the cash box, $2.00 worth of stamps were stolen, four or five gold and silver premium watches were taken. About $50.00 worth of Roger Bros' valuable 1847 silverware, which was also for Canada Flakes premium purposes, was overlooked by the thief. Some cheques for substantial amounts that were in the cash box, together with the money and stamps, were also left behind.

Dey gives his age as fifteen years, although he looks older, and says he is from Parry Sound. Chief Rozel is communicating with the authorities of the above town to see if the prisoner has a record there.

DASTARDLY CRIME COMMITTED A FEW MILES FROM SIMCOE

Special to The Review.

Simcoe, Ont., Aug. 16.—A shocking crime was committed near the village of Walsh, ten miles west of Simcoe, in Charlottville township, yesterday afternoon. Michael Hall, eighty years of age and nearly blind, was returning to his house after assisting in the evening chores at the barn, when just as he was entering his door he was shot from behind and fell dead on the threshold. Two more shots were fired into the prostrate body by the murderer, who then fled. News of the affair being telephoned to the county police at Simcoe, Constable Austin was sent to the scene of the crime and arrested Emery Shelly, aged sixteen, who it is said had been quarrelling with the old man.

Mrs. Hall, according to report, was also shot. Four bullets, it is said, were fired into her body. She is still alive, however, and may recover.

OPTION ON BURLEIGH WILL EXPIRE AT CLOSE OF WEEK

On July 22nd, the City Council was given a month's option on Burleigh Falls by the Central Ontario Power Company. This option will expire at the close of the present week, and the council has scarcely made a move yet regarding the matter. If the city decides to submit a by-law to the people regarding the purchase of the Burleigh power, the option will be extended.

"What's doing about Burleigh power?" the Review asked an alderman this morning.

"Nothing, as far as I can learn," was the answer. "There appears to be a 'nigger in the fence' somewhere, but I don't know what it is."

A meeting of the Council may be held this week to go into the matter and decide what the city is going to do.

HOUSE AND BARN DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY NIGHT

The fire brigade received a call from box 50, at about 2.30 on Saturday night. Mr. John Kemp's house, just behind the Auburn mills, was on fire, and the brigade was called out to save it from being a total loss, if possible. By the time the firemen reached the spot not only Mr. Kemp's house, but his barn was burning briskly. The brigade made an effort to stop the flames, but owing to a lack of an adequate supply of water, the attempt was unsuccessful. The small supply of chemicals on hand, too, proved to be insufficient, and the men were obliged to stand aside and allow the buildings to burn themselves out. The buildings being constructed almost entirely of wood, burned very fiercely, and illuminated the heavens with a lurid pink light. The report quickly spread throughout the city that the Auburn Mills was on fire, and in a short time two or three thousand people were on hand watching the blaze.

Luckily the property was covered by insurance or the owner would have suffered a complete loss. The cause of the fire is unknown. Mrs. Kemp was in Toronto and Mr. Kemp was down town at the time, leaving only the children in the house. However, had there been plenty of water available or a chemical engine on hand, the brigade would most certainly have saved the property.

INTERESTING LETTER FROM FORMER BAND SERGEANT WHO IS NOW AT VERNON, B.C.

Mr. Walter Hughes, the former solo cornetist of the 57th band, has written from Vernon, B.C., where he is conductor of the city band there, to a member of the Review staff. Mr. Hughes has met many former Peterborough people out west.

He says in part "The country and climate are very fine out here; the trip through the mountains is an exceptionally fine sight.

"In spite of this being a great fruit growing centre, fruit is very expensive, and living is very high compared with the east.

"The band here is a very good one of 26 men, playing high class music. They expect a week's engagement at the Westminster Fair, some 40 miles away. Possibly a trip may be taken to Seattle, Victoria and Vancouver.

"Tell Mr. Edwards, of the Crystal, the moving picture business here does not amount to very much—one place only. They charge 10 and 20 cents per show. How would that take in Peterborough?

"I seem to be giving every satisfaction as bandmaster, but I do not care to say very much until I have had a good time. Of course one never knows. I may not care to stay out here, and possibly will drift back to good old Peterborough one of these days.

"With best wishes to yourself and my old friends of the 57th band.

"I remain,
'Yours truly,
"W. HUGHES"

SOME POINTERS ON HOW TO ADVERTISE PETERBOROUGH

Peterborough citizens are anxious that their city should be advertised as judicious publicity means success in the development of a city just the same as in the expansion of a private enterprise. From time to time the City Council and Board of Trade have devised schemes to give publicity to Peterborough, some of which have been carried out with good results. The ratepayers should give encouragement to efforts of this kind, when it is evident the money is being spent to good advantage.

Those who watch this sort of thing are frequently reminded of what other cities are doing, and sometimes are forced to the conclusion that Peterborough is backward in this regard; that it is inclined to rely too much upon the drawing powers of natural attractions, industrial and scenic. It is fortunate that Peterborough has these things, yet, perhaps greater returns might be realized from them if the world was let know more about them. Advertising is the spirit of the age. It is just as essential in the conduct of the business of a municipality as it is in the prosecution of the business of an individual. The enterprise that is liberally advertised is the one that pays—that outstrips competitors.

Here is a good idea in municipal advertising. Send out to the members of all organizations contemplating gatherings next year, pamphlets describing the advantages of the city and its many attractions. If the convention is to be in the nature of a fraternal gathering, send the pamphlets to all local organizations and request their distribution among members.

Omaha offers an illustration of this manner of effective advertising. The Fraternal Order of Eagles is to meet there in the fall, and every Eagle in the country to-day has in his possession a folder — "Pertinent Pointers About Omaha"—which is gotten up in the nature of answers to questions about the city, now one of the most progressive in the west. It contains a map of the town; street car and park directory; hotels, locations and rates, and other information of the like character calculated to assist the visitor in getting about and to make his visit more pleasant and profitable.

BRIGADE HAD A SRORT RUN

Elevator Was in Danger of Being Set on Fire

The fire-brigade had a short run at noon to-day, to the Peterborough Cereal Co's building on Simcoe street. A bag on the motor became over-heated, and for some time there was a danger of the elevator being set on fire. The brigade, however, used a few of the chemicals and soon had the fire under control.

WAGON WAS SHATTERED

And Driver Painfully Injured in Runaway on Charlotte Street on Saturday

A rather bad runaway took place on Saturday evening, about 7 o'clock, on Charlotte street, when Parker's Dye Works delivery horse ran away, upsetting the rig and throwing the driver out onto the road.

The delivery wagon was very badly broken up, and the driver, H. Dunsford, was painfully, though not seriously, injured.

JOINT MEETING OF THE LEAGUES

Will be Held at George Street Church This Evening

There will be a combined meeting of the four Epworth Leagues of the city at George street church to-night at eight o'clock. This will be the wind-up of the series of evangelistic meetings that have been held in the city during the past four weeks. Messrs. Wheler and Young will be the speakers to-night and the general public is cordially invited. The meeting will be a most interesting one.

SERVICES WERE HELD AT Y.M.C.A.

Owing to the steady downpour of rain yesterday afternoon and evening the evangelistic services were held in the Y.M.C.A. parlor. In the afternoon Mr. Alexander Haddow spoke, using as his subject the words "Does It Pay?" At the night meeting Rev. J. Cordoux, of Montreal, was the speaker, and delivered a strong address using as his text, "Many there be who shall seek to enter and shall not be able." Both meetings were well attended and greatly appreciated.

POOR FAMILY RECEIVES AID

Two or three nights ago there appeared in these columns a plea for help on behalf of an English family by the name of Lemon. It will be remembered that Mr. Lemon came to this country two or three years ago and worked hard to gain an honest living. Last month, however, he was compelled to give up his work and undergo an operation at the hospital, from the effects of which he died, leaving his family in destitute circumstances.

In response to the appeal, Mr. Finch Miller to-day informed the Review that he had received $16.25, and had forwarded it to Mrs. Lemon. Following is a list of those who have contributed to the fund:

DISEASE IS PREVALENT AT KINGSTON

Typhoid influenza has become very prevalent among horses in this district. Typhoid influenza is almost similar to typhoid fever which afflicts humans, and is very dangerous. Up to the present, however, there has been only a few fatalities in this district.

According to a local veterinary the disease is caused by impure water. It is quite noticeable that the disease is more prevalent with horses that are pasturing in marshy lands, where there are stagnant pools.

The disease first made its appearance seven years ago, when the death list was very large. Since then the disease has been gradually decreasing. At the present time, however, the disease is claiming many horses about Peterborough.—Kingston Standard.

THAT WATCH OF YOURS

Is in many respects similar to a railway engine. Let an engine be run without oil or cleaning and before long it will stop dead. Upon examination it will be found that the friction and wear and tear has ruined the machinery, and it is fit only for the scrap iron heap. Likewise your watch. You put it in your pocket, and while there is a kick in it, you, in your mistaken economy, do not consult the watchmaker, and consequently rob your watch of years of good service and also much of its former accuracy. The time-keeping qualities of a good watch are maintained and often improved by timely and skilful attention. If you have been one of the neglectful ones call around and see us.

THE NEW LOOK CO.

The American lock Co., which the Review has been urging upon the attention of the City Council, is sure to come to Canada if it can get a reasonable revision of the tariff, which at present is badly arranged, and improperly classified. We are in a position to say that the point of tariff and skilled labour is the deciding point in the matter. The Council is now in touch with the company, and if, as we confidently expect, something comes of it, the people of Peterborough will make every effort to impress upon the government the necessity of a reasonable revision of the tariff. The question of power is one that the city can satisfactorily deal with, and no obstacle seems in the way except the one of tariff above alluded to, and that must not be allowed to stand in the way. Tariff theories are all very well, but where they are obstacles to progress they cannot be allowed to interfere. There are other reasons that will make Peterborough a profitable and desirable place for this company to establish a branch in, but these are matters of business detail in no way opposed to the possibility referred to. It will be a fine thing for all concerned if this great company can be induced to come here.

REPORTER WAS UP AGAINST IT

Tried to Get Interview With Commercial Traveller and was Beaten Out

A Review reporter attempted to get an interview with a commercial traveller the other day, and the following conversation took place;—

"How do you like the Pittsburg?"

"It suits me."

"Do you think Toronto is a great city?"

"It has been."

"Is Kingston going ahead?"

"It ...... ...... ...... ...... ...... not."

"Is Napanee growing?"

"Yes—smaller."

"Does local option work in Orillia?"

"The moon still gets full."

"Did you find Belleville the place of sleep they say it is?"

"Not for me; everybody else snored so loud I couldn't."

"Is Ottawa a good place to live in?"

"Capital."

"How did you find Port Hope?"

"Didn't have to; it was there when I arrived."

"How were the mountains west of Calgary?"

"Rocky."

"How did they treat you in Lindsay?"

"All the time."

"Well, I'm glad to see you're back."

"How does it look?"

"How does what look?"

"My back; I've never seen it."

It was then that the assault took place.

BOBCAYGEON HOTEL IS NOW FOR SALE

Lindsay, Aug. 14.—The Royal Hotel, Bobcaygeon, in which the murder of Rose Hunter was committed on Saturday last, is for sale now. A prospective buyer went down to Bobcaygeon to-day and another is expected Monday.

"What interest has Hunter in the hotel?" Mr. O'Connor was asked.

"He is one of the executors of the estate and has a third interest," was the reply.

The hotel is a good one, and is worth a lot of money, how much Mr. O'Connor did not care to say.

In the room under room 14, in which Mrs. Hunter was shot there is said to be a large cross of blood on the ceiling, which percolated through the floor from the room above.

ARRANGEMENTS AT BROCKVILLE

Captain MacLean and McWilliams Looking After Visit of 57th Regiment

Captain A. P. McLean and Captain McWilliams of the 57th Regiment, Peterborough, were in town to-day making arrangements for the proposed visit of the regiment to Brockville on Sunday and Monday, September 5 and 6. The officers interviewed the various hotels with a view to securing sleeping accommodation and meals. They paid a visit to the Fulford athletic grounds and the public park in the event of it being decided to sleep under canvas. The armories were also visited in company with the officers of the 41st Regiment, the fine quarters of the 41st being placed at the disposal of the visitors. The 57th expects to come about 400 strong, arriving on the morning of the 5th and remaining until the evening of the 6th, the latter being Labor Day. In the event of the decision being definitely reached to come to the Island City, it is quite likely that the town will tender the visitors a complimentary trip on the river. Captain McLean and Captain McWilliams were favorably impressed with Brockville. A definite decision as to the outing will be deferred until after the report of the two officers is received.—Brockville Times.

Kingston Schools Open on Sept. 1st. However

Pupils of the local Public Schools and Collegiate Institute will be glad to learn that school does not open until September 7. This will give the scholars an extra week of freedom before commencing the winter term. In the city of Kingston the Board of Education believes that two months' holidays are quite enough for the average student, without adding on another week, and with this in view have decreed that their schools will open on Sept. 1.

RUMOR ENLARGED REAL FACTS

The Review received notice this morning of a case of suicide in the south end of the city, but after a long trip the reporter's visit proved fruitless. It appears that the neighbors were alarmed by a bibulous resident saying he would take his life and when the report became circulated it assumed the proportions of the real thing.

FINE SINGING AT MARK ST. CHURCH

At both morning and evening services yesterday at Mark street church the choir was ably assisted by Miss Spier, of Toronto, a member of Prof Torrington's famous choir. In the morning she sang "That Beautiful Land," by Robert Harkness, most acceptably, and in the evening gave a delightful rendition of "Drifting," by Gordon W. Thompson.

The evening service was largely one of song, and in the opening congregational service, while all present sang the choruses, the verses of two hymns were taken as solos by Rev. Coon, and Mr. Callander. The choir quartette also gave a selection, "Till the Boat Comes By."

SOME ARE HERE AND SOME ARE THERE—CITY BALL LEAGUE

Park St. A.C. and West Ends Refuse to Obey Order of President and Play at Nicholl's Oval—Former Won—T.A.S. Only Had a Practice.

It would take the vocabulary of a mule-driver to express the feelings of some people towards the City Baseball League

On Friday the president, Mr. E. N. McWilliams, ordered the four teams to play at Riverside Park, for it looked as if the league would end like a South American revolution if the games—or what were supposed to be games—continued to be played at Nicholls Oval. The order came too late, however, for the Strathcona manager to get a team together, and all the T.A.S. team had at Riverside Park was a practice among themselves.

Instead of playing at Riverside the West Ends and Park Street nines hit the trail for the Oval, and in the presence of a handful of spectators, settled their differences for the time being. The South Enders had it pretty much their own way, owing to the loose work of their opponents in the field. The West End bunch had fifteen errors—15, count 'em,—and a team that can win a game with fifteen fumbles must be playing against a cemetery aggregation. Kirn pitched good ball, striking out twelve men—half of the batters that faced him—but his support was worse than some of the jokes in the Lindsay Warder.

Norman Dusty was in good form, and could afford to take it easy. He only had three errors behind him. The score was 13—3, the West Ends being blanked until the eighth innings. Errors were more numerous than the spectators, West Ends having fifteen, which is pretty nearly a record around these parts.

The box score was as follows—

JOE GANS IS AT DENVER, STRICKEN WITH CONSUMPTION

Denver, Col., Aug. 16.—Joe Gans, "the old master," and possibly the most clever man that ever donned a fighting mitt, is in Denver, but, sad to relate, he is not here to look for a fight in the roped arena. Instead he is here to fight against the germs of tuberculosis, an opponent far more dangerous and having a greater knock-out punch than any man that he ever met in the ring.

The news that the colored lightweight was in town struck the fight fans as would an avalanche, and every "bug" in the city yesterday was going about saying:

"Where is Joe Gans?"

Joe is in town, but, due to his critical condition, his physicians have deemed it necessary to keep from the public the address of the ring veteran, fearing that any demonstration would prove fatal to the past master of the padded arena.

Joe is in town, but, due to his criing with friends at a little home in Thirty-fourth avenue, and there is but one man in the city that knows his address, and that one refuses to give out the information that in all probability would lead to a great demonstration for the colored fighter.

The report that Joe Gans was never the same man after his 45-round fight with Battling Nelson seems to be true. At any rate the former champion has been deteriorating ever since that eventful Labor Day, when he won the championship of the 133-pounders.

That was a great battle. One man, a fierce slugger and plugger; the other, a clever ring general, who could deliver punches, but not the ones with enough "steam in them to put the "sleeping potion into the body of his white, bulldog opponent.

According to the information obtained, Gans will leave in a few days for Colorado Springs, that is if his condition will permit it.

The fact that Gans is dying with consumption brings to mind the other fact that many of the great athletes and pugilists and sporting men die with the same malady. Why do these men who pride themselves upon their physique during their laurel days, die of such a body wrecking disease.

Take, for instance, the passing away of Frank G. Selee, the greatest baseball manager that ever lived. He also played the game when in his prime. He fell a victim and all is gone but his record and memory. Hermann Long, another of the bright stars in baseball, is on the verge of the brink that separates the living and the dead. Long is in Denver right now and his friends are momentarily awaiting the news of his death.

There are numerous other athletes and sporting men who might be mentioned who have died and are about to pass away with this dread disease.

LINES ON SPORT

What happened the City Baseball League is likely to become as famous a question as who hit Billy Patterson.

There will be mourning in Detroit if the Tigers do not win the American League pennant again this year. It will be a good thing for league if some other team captures the bunting this season.

And it looks as if the Cubs are going to get theirs this year. There is nothing like having the honors shared up.

Peterborough fans are already beginning to talk rugby and to speculate as to what kind of a team Peterborough is going to have this fall. With D. McPherson to coach the boys, and perhaps don a suit himself, the local aggregation should make a fine showing.

It is a rare day with the Winnipeg ball team when Jerry Edmunds does not pound one or two safeties with his trust bat. The former Peterborough players is one of the Maroons' most consistent hitters.

Medicine Hat still leads the Western Canada League with the Maroons of Winnipeg only a few points behind. It looks like a fight between these two teams for the honor

Can you pick the winner in the Eastern League? Rochester's position at hte top is very shaky, and the chances are that before a week is over Providence will be at the head of the fire. Duffy's band is coming strong.

WILL PLAY WITH HAMILTON TIGERS

Ross Craig Will Be Candidate for Wing Line This Year---Should Catch Place

Ross Craig, formerly of the Peterborough rugby team, will turn out with the Hamilton Tigers this year. Craig is one of the fastest and huskiest inside wings in the province and should have no difficulty in catching a place.

PRIZE WINNER TOY YORKSHIRE

Mr. G. N. Graham of the Oriental Hotel has returned from Hamilton with a very fine little Yorkshire terrier of the toy variety, weighing three pounds, and winner of the premier ribbon at the recent bench show in Toronto.

TOURAMENT WILL BE HELD

Bowlers are Getting in Shape for the Opening of the Season

The bowling season will get away to a good start here on Sept. 1st when a tournament will be held at the P.B.O. alleys. It will be for three days or five men teams—just which has not yet been decided—and it is expected that there will be a large entry list. The trundling game promises to be more popular than ever in Peterborough this season.

THE RING

New York, August 16.—The announcement from London that Freddie Welsh had arranged for a 45-round fight with Battling Nelson, to be fought in the United States in September, has created the liveliest interest here.

By decisively whipping every contender in his own country, Welsh has become the undisputed lightweight champion of England, and for some time he has been endeavoring to open negotiations with Nelson, the holder of the world's lightweight championship, for a battle.

Nelson expressed willingness some time ago to give Welsh a chance to win the title, and at that time notified him on what terms he would fight.

It is said that the cablegram announcing that the English pugilist had arranged with Nelson for the contest indicated that Welsh had accepted all of Nelson's terms.

The fight will be seen in either California or Nevada, as those are the only states in which a 45-round battle is permitted.

New York sporting men are a little surprised that the date has been fixed in September, as it is believed that Nelson would require a longer time for training.

While Nelson is always more or less in condition for a fight, it is believed that for a match of this consequence he would require a considerable period of active training.

Welsh also keeps himself in good condition and is able to fight a 10-round bout at any time, but it is believed that he would require a season of hard training in this country to make a creditable showing against Nelson.

SPORTING NOTES

Harry Burridge is no longer playing on the Edmonton team. His name has not appeared in the line-up for several weeks.

It is unlikely that the T. A. S. team will claim Saturday's game from the Strathconas by default. It will be played at a later date.

LAWN TENNIS ASSOCIATION

Y.M.C.A. Wins Inter-club Tournament---Second Honors go to Golf Club

The final round of the inter-club club matches was concluded last week, leaving the Y.M.C.A. as winners of the tournament with the Golf Club and the West End Club second and third respectively.

The total sets won by each club during the tournament out of a possible are as follows:

| | |
|---|---|
| Y.M.C.A. | 33 |
| Golf Club | 27 |
| West End | 24 |
| St. John's | 19 |
| Nicholl's Oval | 11 |
| Collegiate | 6 |

The tournament has been most successful in every respect, giving each club the fullest opportunity to compare their best men with the best of their opponents. And with the healthy rivalry resulting from these games, undoubtedly there has resulted a better style of play among all the participants.

More tennis has been played in Peterborough this year than ever before and it is quite generally acknowledged that the game has been better played. With the game in such a healthy condition this year it may confidently be expected that Peterborough will be heard from in the near future.

FINE REGATTA AT KAWARTHA PARK

Large Crowd Followed the Races With Interest - Open-air Concert in Evening

Friday last, August 13th, was a gala day at Kawartha Park. The guests at Miss B. F. Brown's cottage, "Woodside," under the capable leadership of Mr. W. Wallace Miller, of Pittsburg, Pa., planned a regatta on an extensiv escale, and, supported by the enthusiasm of other cottagers, and ideal weather conditions, the enterprise proved an unqualified success. There were many entries for all the events, and all were closely contested and watched with eager interest by the large crowd assembled in the Park. The following is the list of events and prize winners:—

A large gathering assembled at "Woodside," the same evening at 8 o'clock, when an open air concert was provided, a chief feature of the programme being the presentation of prizes to the winners of the afternoons' sports. A magnificent bonfire formed a very fitting climax to what was voted by everybody one of the best afternoons ever spent in the Kawartha Lakes.

There were 13 entries in the crab race, 6 entries in the men's double canoe race, 7 entries in the mixed double skiff, 7 entries in the mixed double canoe race. There was a very large entry list all round, and the regatta is said to have been better than any yet held in Stoney Lake. It is to become an annual event.

TO SAVE THE YOUNG PEOPLE FROM THE DRINK HABIT

Necessity of This Emphasized at Chicago Convention—Rev. Dr. O'Brien Address to St. Peter's T.A.S.—An Interesting Meeting.

An interesting and valuable meeting of St. Peter's T.A.S. was held in the society's rooms yesterday afternoon. Rev. Dr. O'Brien addressed the meeting on the recent Total Abstinence Convention in Chicago, at which he was the representative of the local branch. His address was a most comprehensive one and he outlined the general work of the convention in a very instructive manner. Dr. O'Brien stated that the different speakers at the convention dwelt strongly on the immediate necessity of getting after the young to save from the evils of the drink habit.

A feature of the meeting was a much appreciated paper on "A Tri to the Philippines," which was read by Mr. Bennett. Mr. Bennett's paper was thoroughly enjoyed and was listened to with close attention.

The auditors' half-yearly report was presented and showed a most flourishing condition of the society's financial affairs. The banking system has proven highly satisfactory and successful.

THINKS CANOE CLUB SHOULD BE FORMED IN PETERBOROUGH

Mr. Bert Cameron of Ottawa, who is spending a few days at his home here, quickly made good after turning out with the Rideau Canoe Club of Ottawa. Although it was his first year he caught a place in the senior war canoe, and was one of the crew of the Rideaus at the Canadian Canoe Association meet at Toronto a week ago last Saturday.

Mr. Cameron thinks that a canoe club should be formed in Peterborough, as there is plenty of material here, and the sport is a most fascinating one. Ottawa has several canoe clubs and they are all flourishing. He is of the opinion that if a club were formed here a war canoe crew could be got together in two or three years that would make the best of them look to their laurels.

BIG CELEBRATION PLANNED FOR 10TH ANNIVERSARY OF ST. PETER'S T.A.S.

At the meeting of the T.A.S. yesterday afternoon a committee of past presidents of the society was appointed to make arrangements for the 10th anniversary of the society, which will be celebrated in right royal fashion on the anniversary date, January 8th. The demonstration will be a huge one, and extensive preparations and a big programme are under active consideration.

The local T.A.S. is the largest in America, and one of the largest in the world. The Dublin, Ireland, branch is, perhaps, as big as the local one, but outside of this one, Peterborough can lay claim to first place in regard to the membership roll.

It is rather early to arrange plans for the demonstration on January 8, but the society decided it advisable to get to work at an early date, in order that the preparations would be fully considered and arranged in plenty of time. The first meeting of the committee will be held Friday evening at 8 o'clock.

Illustrated Address

To-morrow night at George street Methodist church Rev. A. G. Young will give an illustrated address on "The Strangers in the Dominion." The subject is an interesting one and will be treated in an interesting manner.

BOYS RETURN FROM CAMP

Y.M.C.A. Boy's Conference Was Held Last Week at Lake Couchiching

On Saturday at noon Wallace Armstrong, Roland Howden, Bruce Hunter, Willie Hastie and Mr. Hassard, representing the local Young Men's Christian Association, returned from the Summer Conference of Boys and Boys' Workers, held at Lake Couchiching during the week of Aug. 7th to 14th. There were representatives from many parts of Canada from Edmonton to St. John, N.B.

The week was spent in receiving instruction concerning methods and organization of work of the Young Men's Christian Association in regard to boys, and in good fellowship and recreation.

The mornings, from after breakfast to dinner time, were given to Bible study and lectures. The afternoons were used for sport and recreation, and the evenings were given up to lectures and devotional periods.

Some of the leaders in Christian work in North America spent the week with the boys, of whom there were over one hundred present, giving lectures and inspirational talks. The number included Mr. R. A. Waite, Jr., of the International Committee of the Y.M.C.A.; Mr. D. R. Porter, of the International Committee, who was one of the first young men from the United States to win a Rhodes Scholarship; Dr. F. N. Seerley, of the Springville Training School; Mr. G. W. Hinckley, of Goodwill Farm, Maine; Mr. Taylor Statten, of Toronto; Mr. J. H. Crowe, of St. Johns, Newfoundland; Mr. D. H. Gibson, of Toronto; Mr. C. M.
